Rat brawl ends in alcohol ban

by Paul Huegel
A "major altercation" between patrons and staff of MSC's Rathskeller, last Friday night, prompted an administrative decision to temporarily ban the sale of alcoholic beverages there.

"It will be closed until we can come up with a recommendation to protect the students and our staff," Thomas Stepnowski, director of student activities, said. "It will be a consensus response from the college administration, the SGA, and the Rat management," he added.

The temporary ban on alcohol sales will be in effect until a complete review of the facts surrounding Friday night's incident can be made.

"It (the ban) is a protective measure for the majority of the students," Harold Ostroff, student center manager, said. "It will be closed until we can come up with a recommendation to protect the students and our staff," Thomas Stepnowski, director of student activities, said. "It will be a consensus response from the college administration, the SGA, and the Rat management," he added.

The temporary ban on alcohol sales will be in effect until a complete review of the facts surrounding Friday night's incident can be made.

"The court is reviewing the facts and we must wait for a report before a decision can be made," Ostroff stated. "Some sort of temporary restrictions will be made until everything is properly evaluated," he said. The Rat was closed on Saturday by Vince Baarsh, manager of the Rat. There was no time available to have a meeting with the administration, so the decision was cleared through Ostroff and Stepnowski.

"I wanted to avoid any recurrences while tempers were still flaring," Stepnowski commented. "We didn't want the participants to come back," he added.

A "major altercation" occurred when the guest of an MSC student would not allow himself to be properly processed at the door, Ostroff said. He became enraged and allegedly assaulted a member of the Rat's staff.

On Monday, a mutual agreement was reached between the administration, Ostroff, and Stepnowski, to invoke the ban.

"It will be closed until we can determine a congenial and peaceful atmosphere," Jean Armstrong, dean of students, said earlier this week. "We must collect as much information as we can before a decision can be made to improve security to prevent similar incidents in the future," she said.

Borrow now or pay later

(WASHINGTON, DC) - Make sure that college students in your family who don't have a government guaranteed student loan now borrow before the end of 1980 to lock in the seven percent interest rate. The interest rate goes up to nine percent on Jan. 1, but only for students who have not borrowed before then. If students have a seven percent government guaranteed loan now or take out a loan before Jan. 1, the seven percent rate will apply to all such loans for the rest of their education.

There are no family income limits under this program. The loans are made by banks. The government guarantees repayment and pays the banks an interest subsidy. Students pay nothing until after they graduate (or drop out). Then they start to repay the principal over 10 years, with interest at seven percent.

Maximum borrowing: $2,500 per school year for students claimed as dependents on their parents' tax return. But $3,000 per year for independent students. And graduate students (dependent or not) can borrow up to $5,000 per year.

The lifetime loan limit is $12,500 for dependent students, $15,000 for independent students, and $25,000 for graduate students.

Koch says he smoked marijuana

(NEW YORK, NY) - Mayor Edward Koch said in a radio interview yesterday that he smoked marijuana "once" and had no desire to repeat the experience.

"I believe that it does have physical, deleterious effects upon the individual, just like cigarette smoking," he added. "I do not smoke pot now."

(TRENTON, NJ) - NJ doctors are endorsing measures to restrict smoking in public places. But the doctors have one reservation.

They told the Assembly judiciary committee yesterday that the bills might not be strong enough.

The doctors were lined up by Assm. Martin Herman, of Gloucester, who sponsored the bills, and is chairman of the judiciary committee.

The committee is not expected to vote on the bills for several weeks.

The bills would ban smoking entirely in certain places, such as elevators, polling places, retail food stores, and pharmacies. In addition, no smoking sections would be established in schools, theaters, libraries, public institutions, large restaurants, and workplaces.

(NEW YORK, NY) - The first tapes have been played at the Abscam trial taking place in Brooklyn, NY. And they show Congressman Frank Thompson, (D-NJ) was not looking for a payoff when he said he would do what he could to help two Arab sheiks with immigration problems.

It was Oct. 9, 1979 when Thompson told FBI agents, posing as representatives of a phony Arab sheik, that he was not looking for any money. More tapes will be shown today in US district court. The government's first witness, FBI agent Anthony Amoroso, is expected to testify at the trial of Thompson and Congressman John Murphy (D-NY).

SGA revokes Chi Alpha charter
by Mary Ann D'Urso
Last night the SGA dechartered Chi Alpha, a former Class IV Organization.
In a heated and often emotional atmosphere, legislators, a vote was taken over whether or not Chi Alpha, a religious organization, should be dechartered. A Class IV Organization of the SGA, a vote to decharter Chi Alpha would be considered.

The two hour debate over Chi Alpha resulted in an 18-3 vote, with 4 abstentions. In order for Chi Alpha to have passed a Class IV Organization, a vote of 29 would have been necessary.

A legislative session was called and everyone was not a member of the legislature was requested to leave the room, including the executive board (president, vice president, treasurer, and secretary), all cabinet members, and guests. For the sake of objectivity, Cigro was asked by the legislature to remain and chair the 10 minute session during which it was found that once a secret ballot is taken it cannot be reopened.

After announcing the decision, Brian Cigro, SGA president, turned the floor over to Steve Espamer, Chi Alpha chaplain. Espamer told the legislators that he had planned to remain on campus, that God would provide a place for him to go, and that they (Chi Alpha) would say prayers of forgiveness for those who voted against the bill.

Chi Alpha was brought under constitutional review several weeks ago due to the opposition of a law suit raised by an MSC student, Ioldi Barnes, whose former girlfriend is a Chi Alpha member. Since the meetings, Barnes has said that he will not sue.

While in committee, several issues were raised, among which were the separation of church and state; Chi Alpha's internship program; the question of a faculty advisor; the use of the money collected at their meetings to pay Espamer; and the issue of their national affiliation with the Assembly of God Church, which is included in the SGA's definition of a Class IV Charter.

The Constitutional Review Committee decided to deadlock over whether or not to decharter Chi Alpha or change it to a Class IV Organization, Dennis Bloshak, a committee member, said.

After the meeting finished, Chi Alpha members refused to comment on the outcome of the SGA's decision.

Cigro said after the meeting, "Decharterment does not force Chi Alpha off campus. Chi Alpha will still exist as a student organization, it just won't benefit from the advantages of being chartered by the SGA.

"I'm not sure the legislature or myself know the real impact that the decision will have. There was discussion, a vote was taken, and we'll have to play it by ear for now." After the meeting earlier in the afternoon, Phil Anter, president pro tempore of the legislature said a Chi Alpha member, said Chi Alpha would sue if they were dechartered. After the legislative meeting, Anter's only comment was "I'm happy that the SGA has handled this responsibly."

Tonight's Dreamweaver production "Storie" by Chi Alpha will take place as scheduled because it was arranged while Chi Alpha was still chartered by the SGA, Cigro said.

Exdriver charges shuttle; student hurt
by Stephen McLean
A recently laid off shuttle bus driver has been charged with harassment, reckless driving, and a tortious punch to the spleen. Bus driver Emu Petino was arrested after an incident on Monday night in which an MSC student was injured.

According to campus police, on Mon. Oct. 31, Rosario Terranova was told to take the following week off without pay, on account of compensatory and sick time he had accumulated. Terranova was also that as of the end of that week his services as a driver would no longer be required.

Shuttle bus driver Patricia Merca was driving through Lot 14 on Monday afternoon when she observed a maroon Chevrolet pull into the one coming lane. The car proceeded to straddle the middle of the road and accelerate toward the bus. At this point the bus driver was forced to veer to the right and jam on the brakes in order to avoid an accident. In the process, the shuttle bus driver was able to identify the driver of the car as a man named Terranova.

As a result of the bus' abrupt stop, MSC student Randi Lehrer sustained bruises on her leg and a painful solo to the shoulder. Lehrer said she was sitting behind the driver when the brakes were applied. In an attempt to keep from being flung toward the car, Lehrer grasped the vertical bar in front of her. The students behind her were thrown forward and she was jarred from the seat along with them. Lehrer was brought to the health center where she was advised to have her shoulder x-rayed, and released. Lehrer said she recalled hearing someone say, "Oh, it's our friend Teddy again," possibly in reference to the driver of the car, however she was unable to see the car or its driver.

The campus police report stated that later that same day Terranova again confronted the shuttle bus in a similar manner. Anticipating another incident, the bus driver was able to slow to a stop, and Terranova was forced to return to his lane by an approaching service truck. Bus driver Emil Enginger reported that he was also harassed by Terranova in a reckless driving incident earlier that morning.

According to officer Robert Williams, the campus police apprehended Terranova at the exit of the Welfare and Internal Center with a high rare ofチョシタが開いた。彼女は前日の薬物によって、もう少し軽いステップを踏んでいた。彼女は前日の薬物によって、もう少し軽いステップを踏んでいた。

Water saving effort falls short
by Vic Palumbo
Approximately four weeks after Gov. Brendan Byrne directed state agencies to cut back water use by 25 percent, MSC has reduced water consumption approximately 13 percent, leaving a shortfall of approximately 657,000 gallons.

From Aug. 29-Sept. 26, MSC used 5.11 million gallons of water, according to Herbert Englishman, assistant superintendent of Water Bureau Operations for Montclair. On Sept. 27, Byrne issued a directive requiring the state agencies to reduce water consumption 25 percent for the time period Sept. 27-Oct. 24, MSC used 4.81 million gallons of water, a reduction of approximately 13 percent for nearly comparable time periods.

MSC paid $5,829.38 for water for the Aug 28-Sep 26 period, as compared to $5,459 for the Sept 27-Oct 24 period, Englishman said.

Conservation methods were implemented in three areas where water usage is greatest, the cafeteria, dormitories, and Panzer Gym. "We took it upon ourselves to immediately conserve water," Harold Ostoff, manager of business services for the Student Center Cafeteria, said.

"We have reduced water use in the dishwashers by 50 percent. Normally we run the dishwashers for eight hours in the day, but now we stack more dishes each load and only have the dishwashers operating for four hours," he said. Ostoff noted that drinking water in the center Formal Dining Room has been eliminated unless requested by the guests.

Dean Raymond Stover, director of housing, said efficient shower heads are replacing older, less efficient ones in dormitories. The manufacturer of the new shower heads contends that they will use one-third less water by slowing down the flow of water, "Stower said. He said a list of six water saving suggestions was posted in every wing of the five dormitories on campus.

Panzer Gym is another facility with a high rate of water use, but reductions are being made. According to Joe McGinty, director of maintenance, "We have an infrared surveillance of Panzer Gym to check that showers in the lockerrooms are not left running," McGinty said. "We also have had to make adjustments in the boiler use," he said.

Dance on for Multiple Sclerosis

A dance marathon to aid research into multiple sclerosis (MS) and victims of this incurable disease of the central nervous system will begin 6 p.m. Saturday in the gymnasium of the professional arts and sciences building. Sponsored by the Circle K and Tau Kappa Beta/TKE fraternities, the dance marathon will benefit the National MS Society Research, and the Upper NJ Chapter of MS.

Marcia Rothbart, director of the Upper NJ Chapter of MS, said, "This is an important event for the Upper NJ Chapter of MS, said there are several rules the dancers must comply with. "Their viral signs, such as temperature, must be checked weekly, and heart rate must, be checked by the Montclair volunteer first aid squad, who will be there to periodically check the dancers. The dancers must also wear makeup and a minimum of $24 per couple from sponsors, she said. She added that 75 percent of a dancer's body must be moving in order for him to be considered dancing.

Rothbart said she hoped to raise $25,000 by the event. She explained that 60 percent of the money will be donated to the Upper NJ Chapter of MS to aid victims in Essex, Hudson, and Union counties, while the remaining 40 percent will go to the National MS Society for Research.

Rothbart said the Upper NJ Chapter of MS provides emotional support, a weekly swimming program, and a weekly home care course where they learn to manage domestically. The Montclair State Society for Research is searching for causes of and cures for the disease.

Film and TV star Alan Alda may be the featured speaker at the MS Society's 1981 commencement exercises. According to Edward C. Marin, associate dean of students, Alda is being considered because of "his instant recognition as a humanitarian, and Alda embodies qualities students appreciate." Alda is one of three speakers under consideration for the commencement. The other two speakers under consideration are Sen. Bill Bradley (D-NJ), and Roland Smith of CBS News, for commencement.

Alda's first choice was the Commodore of Honor, Traditions, and Ceremonies. The committee, which plans graduation, is made up of administrators, faculty, and an SGA representative.

Martin said Alda was sent an invitation to speak at commencement in the end of October. The invitation was sent through the William Morris Agency, Alda's theatrical agent. Alda has not yet replied.

Martin said "The college looks for speakers who are recognizable to the general public or to a significant portion of academia." Ron Napolitano, representative for the committee, said, "The committee looks for a speaker who is prestigious, popular, and can relate to students." Martin added that Alda and singles will be paired, she added. Dregman said that Alda's Little Falls Trophy Shop and Tally's Trophies both on Rt. 46 in Little Falls, hour," she said. The Rathskeller will no longer accept "R" stickers as proof of legal drinking age because students who have obtained the stickers earlier have been transferring them illegally to minors, according to Vincent Baiardi, Rathskeller manager.

As a result of the illegal transfers, students under N.J.'s legal drinking age have been gaining access to the Rathskeller with stickers obtained from students nineteen and older, Baiardi said.

Baiardi said students are being asked to show their drivers licenses and MS/C 1 D. Rathskeller certificates and college "D's are not being accepted because they are easily forged," Baiardi said. Fortush students, who do not have a drivers license to prove their age, the Rathskeller has a master list of all students who are of drinking age. For the most part, Baiardi said, students have been cooperative with the double proofing.

Harold Ostroff, Student Center Manager said the double proofing is only a "temporary measure." As far as the future situations are concerned, Ostroff said a committee had been formed to look into the possibilities. The committee is trying to formulate a method of validity checking a student's age, that is not susceptible to forgery. Ostroff refused to comment on any of the ideas the committee may be considering.

Alcohol banned

A temporary decision, lifting the ban, is hoped to be arrived at today, when Armstrong Ostroff, Stephenaski, and Brian Cigg, SGA president will discuss the problem.

"It's everyone's responsibility to make the Rat safe and pleasant," Armstrong, who is "not eager to have the Rat closed," noted.

Drivers take caution

by Lori McDonough

Imagine how you would feel if you were driving your car and your tires blew out or your engine overheated. What would you do if your brakes failed or if you were driving your car and your brakes failed to work in the middle of a dangerous intersection? Many consumers, even those who are experienced in handling auto repairs don't know what to do when a minor emergency occurs. At some point in life, every driver is faced with at least one emergency, which if not handled properly, could result in serious injury or death. The following is a list of guidelines designed to help you cope with the common minor emergencies described above.

According to the US Department of Transportation, you can do one of several things should your brakes fail. Whatever you do, remember to act rapidly. The first thing to do is to get off the highway onto the shoulder or any clear area. Pump the brakes rapidly in order to increase the brake pressure. If pumping doesn't work, put the car into low gear and step on the emergency brake as hard as you can. Should you have the bad luck to be on a hill when the brakes fail, look for something to sideswipe, like a snowbank or a dirt mound on the road. If you have a flat tire or a blowout on the highway, get a firm grip on the wheel and apply the brakes gently to slow down. Pull off the road to a safe spot where you have enough room to park without causing a hazard to yourself and other drivers. Most importantly, remember not to slam on the brakes because this could make the car spin out of control. Overheated engines are a common sight in the summer when many motorists rely on air conditioning to cool off the car. Should you be in this situation, pull off the road as soon as possible, turn off the engine, and let it cool down before moving on. If you can't turn off the road, turn on the heater and roll down the windows. This will reduce the engine's temperature by decreasing the radiator capacity. Many people make the common mistake of removing the radiator cap or pouring cold water into the engine. If you remove the radiator cap before the engine has cooled, chances are the steam or liquid trapped inside will be forcibly released and could possibly cause severe burns. Pouring cold water into a hot engine will only help you crack the engine block.

Chi Alpha, Rat issues addressed

by Sonjui Lal

The SGA debated for over two hours last night before chartering Chi Alpha, a campus religious group and former Class III Organization of the SGA. The debate centered around the possible legal ramifications of the SGA chartering a partisan religious group. The prochartering group felt that all fee paying students should have the right to exist as a chartered organization on campus. Those favoring the chartering expressed concern over chartering a partisan religious group.

Questions were raised as to the legality of chartering or chartering the group. The final vote, taken by secret ballot, was 19 against chartering and 18 for. A two-thirds vote was required for passage.

Brian Cigay, SGA president, brought up the closing of the Rathskeller. He is working with Tom Stempowski, director of student activities, to have the Rat temporarily reopened by tomorrow.

Weekend college, a largely Hispanic group, was made a committee under the Latin American Students Organization. Before last night's vote, weekend college did not have class status under the SGA. The Accounting Club was also chartered as a Class II Organization.

Four Evenings for your convenience
Club seeks charter

A flying disc club, intended to educate students about frisbee play and to compete with other such intercollegiate clubs, will apply for a Class III Charter with the SGA next week, according to a vice president of the club, Jim Murphy.

“We’re putting in our constitution that one of the purposes of the disc club is to educate the student body on disc play. It’s more complicated than most people think,” Terry Brauer, president of the club, said.

The group’s starting membership of 24 students seems to indicate that an interest in such a club exists at MSC, Brauer said. “We still need to raise some money for equipment and to reserve the gym for practice during the winter,” Murphy said. The club will be having a cake sale in Mallory Hall today in an effort to raise money for equipment such as discs, cones, T-shirts, and eventually golf baskets needed to play frisbee golf, Murphy added.

Murphy, who calls himself a professional disc player, said a winner in a frisbee tournament can win up to $10,000. Murphy is a member of the International Frisbee Association, which sponsors such tournaments.

Brauer said exhibitions, as well as intercollegiate competition, are some of the club’s plans for the coming semester. Glassboro State College and William Paterson College are two colleges the club intends to compete against next year, Murphy said.

A junior business major at MSC, she was employed at the Sears and Roebuck Distribution Center in Secaucus. Surviving are her mother, the former Mary Tufani; her father, Joseph; and two sisters, Victoria Deluca and Judy.

Services were Tuesday in the Vansen Funeral Home in North Bergen. Burial was yesterday in Fairview Cemetery in North Bergen.

Sobiecki said, “I think the AFT is always talking strike as an alternative. It’s a traditional blue collar labor approach. I think people see the NJFA as a more professional alternative.”

Keenan said, “A strike is something the faculty has to make up its mind about. Obviously nobody wants a strike, everybody would wind up losing.”

Regarding the possibility of a settlement by the spring, provided the NJFA was still representing MSC faculty, Keenan said, “I anticipate, as usual, a difficult negotiation session.” He said the state doesn’t seriously negotiate until a strike is imperative or in progress.

MSC goes on band wagon

Sometimes we wonder just who this college is being run for. Students? Guess again.

So why should it surprise us when a handful of administrators close the only place on campus where students can get together and relax over a few beers?

Although we are not aware of all the facts because the parties involved are being amazingly tight lipped, the fact that the Rathskeller has been closed due to a fight seems rather unfair to the students on campus.

It is in the nature of bars that fighting does occasionally break out. Everyone knows that. (Have you ever viewed a barroom scene on a TV show and had it not result in a lengthy segment of flying chairs and bodies?) To feel that this practice is uncommon and is cause to close the student pub is naive.

The rumor is also circulating that the parties involved with the fighting were not MSC students. Taking this into consideration, why are we being punished for someone else’s wrongdoings? The parties responsible for the brawl aren’t being punished in anyway. How, then, is our punishment justifiable?

Is it understood that they are students as we are so the blame is assimilated into our bodies? We don’t feel it is fair to be guilty by association.

We view the closing of the Rathskeller because of a barroom brawl to be the administration’s way of slapping our hands. We hope they don’t expect us to drink to their decision. Tierney’s is too far a walk, any way.

Strike coming?

Strike fever is approaching more rapidly this year. It’s time once again for the teachers to walk out on their jobs and, of course, their students.

We understand that they need cost of living increases and, yes, we understand that they need sick leave and, yes, we understand that they need their vacations, but what about us? It’s less than two months till the first day of 1980 and the 1979 contracts have not even been signed yet!

Let’s get on the ball, huh? If not for yourselves, than do it for us.

nation from Washington is that the real business of Washington in our age is pretty much to run the world. An American national government in this age will always give priority to foreign affairs. A system has to be developed, therefore, under which domestic programs go forward regardless of what international crisis is preoccupying Washington at the moment.

Since Nixon, there has been overwhelming Congressional support for the application of planning and management principles to government. Reforms have made the planning agencies a little more open, a little less secret and a little more accountable to the electorate. In short, the planning agencies have become more the nation’s and less the President’s.

Still we are told that planning is needed due to the persistence of basic structural deficiencies in American society. We are called upon to make “hard decisions” in the next few years, and to adjust our political and economic expectations downward so as to be more in harmony with the harsh realities of a changing global structure that is simultaneously struck with inflation, capital shortage and an energy crisis, to name just a few.

The 1980’s represent a crossroad in American politics—the debate on the injustices of social inequality has been turned into a debate on the size and the role of the federal government.

Do we go with the Neo-Conservatives’ attack on social programs, subject them to cost-benefit analysis, and dismantle the programs assembled in the era between the New Deal and Johnson’s Great Society since they gave too little for too much? Do we follow the Reagan recipe which rests on the fundamental premise that the Federal government is overgrown and needs to go on a diet? For Reagan, the ills of the nation are due to excessive government spending, taxing and regulation. He calls for a return to laissez-faire and to pull the plug. He claims that we can cut spending somewhere between 64 and 95 billion dollars by 1985 and give a 30 percent across the board tax cut phased in over the next three years.

Can Reaganomics work? I think not. I still do not see how we can simultaneously increase defense spending, decrease taxes and balance the budget. But the larger problem lies in the fact that pulling the plug on the life-sustaining equipment may save electricity, but it may also kill the patient. What happens in the short-run? What happens while we are waiting for the tax breaks and the deregulation to take effect and increase productivity and thus the tax base? Obviously some cuts have to be made. But Where? Reagan has promised to ‘defend’ Social Security, but what happens to those who rely on the government for retirement, medical care, or food stamps? What happens to programs for the handicapped, the school lunch programs, and disaster relief, to name just a few?

Jimmy Carter does not look that different in this regard. He tells us that the age of scarcity is upon us and that we have to sacrifice and limit our expectations.

Where are the liberals during all this? The question of whether the economy functions in this manner, realizing the validity of parts of the neo-conservative critique, they are left to defend the principles of the New Deal and the Great Society, and to argue for additional funds and better management. Yet they have yet to fashion a systematic social policy.

The question still looms—how do we make the cuts? Perhaps this was the message of the Kennedy campaign and the “cause” that kept us in the face of almost certain defeat. Knowing that severe budget cuts were imminent, he called for compassion at the Democratic Convention. “It is surely correct that we cannot solve social problems by throwing money at them,” he said. But it is also correct that we can throw out our national problems onto a scrap heap of inattention and indifference.

The basic question of the 1980’s will be centered around the size and role of the government and the debate over social inequality and the injustices of American life. The contours of the political debate over the next decade are set and will remain long after Nov. 4. Can government get small and remain compassionate? Are we going to determine budget ceilings by the functioning of the private economy, its inflationary impact on the inequitable tax structure—or are we going to determine budget ceilings by the dictates of human needs?

What are your views of the next four years under Ronald Reagan?

"I think Ronald Reagan will help bring inflation down and restore this country to being the greatest country in the world." — Ken Vincie, 1984, male

"I don't think it makes a significant difference at this point. The state of the economy and the people's attitudes is at a point where conditions will either improve or not improve." — Carol Shull, 1982, accounting

"I think economically it will be hard for Reagan to keep his promises, for the simple fact that Carter's administration must prepare a new budget before it leaves, and this may either help or hinder the economy." — Jay Harold, 1981, marketing

"I think Reagan will be pinpointing to us to accept it. May he help him to improve the economy. Frankly, I feel that Reagan will hurt the country more than he will help it." — Bill Knight, 1983, psychology

"Well, I voted for Reagan, and I believe he'll be a good president. He'll build up our defense, lower inflation and maybe he will give aid to state colleges." — Lisa DePascal, 1984, broadcasting

"I'm looking forward to a change because the US certainly needs a change." — Galley Reagan, 1983, political science

A response to spurious arguments
by Elliot I. Mininberg

Norma: Hi, Meryl.

Meryl: Hi, Big N. Did you read my piece in The Montclarion? Old Doc Minibus is really going to love it! Ha, Ha.

Norma: Frankly, Meryl, I thought your article did more harm than good. Campus problems are not solved through diestudent insurrections.

Meryl: Look, Norma, do you want to remain friends? I mean, you've got to be kidding. Those pot bellied administrators down in College Hall arc out to rip us off, and we better hit them in the face and have grown increasingly irritated with each passing column. Who the heck is this kid to be giving his opinions out to us?

Norma: Why not keep your opinions to yourself until you really can form your own opinions! — Andy Kereu

Meryl: Look, you dummy. Even if all of what you say makes sense, it won't produce more parking spaces, and that's what we want. They better lighten up on tickets and rescind that ridiculous notion of not permitting registration for those who don't play by their rules, or else!

Norma: I suppose you think we should stop the admissions because our jailing is crowded. Meryl, you're crazy.

PS By the way, Mac West never said, "You aren't seen nothing yet!" Al Johnson did.

Why not keep your opinions to yourself?

To the editor:

I have been reading Matt Ward's "In the Sports Corner" column all semester and have grown increasingly irritated with each passing column. Who the heck is this kid to be giving his opinions out to us?

Unless he has some inside contact with the teams involved, he is obviously just reiterating what he has read in some newspaper, or heard on some sportscast. He claims that Shula is regarded higher than any coach aside from Tom Landry and Chuck Noll. By whom? The guy he talks to in the Rathskeller? His promo for the South Carolina-Georgia game and his commentary on the Dave Winfield free agency is also without any first hand knowledge.

He finally mentions something pertinent to AIC by noting the achievements of placekicker Keith Sahlin and suggesting that the New York Jets give him a shot. I certainly have nothing against Sahlin, and he certainly deserves congratulations on his accomplishments. I further agree that Pat Leahy has been inconsistent, but I suggest Sahlin as a replacement for Leahy.

His column, which appeared in the Oct. 30 issue of The Montclarion, was particularly infuriating. He started off by talking about Don Shula's feud with the Dolphins' owner and the possibility of his coming to the Giants.

In 1980, though I was a yearbook editor, I wrote an article for a yearbook about AIC's political science program. I was pleased to see a return to the more traditional and professional yearbook format. It is a big step up from recent yearbooks.

I have spoken to others who have also had only good comments about the yearbook. I urge those who have not yet picked up their yearbook to do so and note the difference.

Congratulations on a good job, and thank you for a yearbook that we can all enjoy!

Yearbook praised

To the editor:

This is just a short note to compliment the editors and staff of the 1980 La Campagna yearbook for a job well done!

I was pleased to see a return to the more traditional and professional yearbook format. It is a big step up from recent yearbooks.

Thank you for a yearbook that we can all enjoy!

What do women want?

With the election campaign finally over, it’s time to address some serious problems and issues. But first, I’d like to say a few words in rebuttal to Mike Sinatra’s letter regarding my Oct. 2 column (Carter: a man of integrity?).

First, Sinatra apparently did not read my column regarding Ronald Reagan (Reagan: a worthy candidate?).

Second, being a political science major, Sinatra had better learn what objectivity is. Either he has rose colored glasses permanently affixed on his head, or he surely had too many peanuts or beer (remember Billy).

I suggest that Sinatra take a course in logic, for we will all be better off.

Third, I’ve wasted too much time addressing such a ridiculous letter.

With the question of ERA and women’s rights a key issue in this fall’s campaign, there has been much confusion as to what women are trying to achieve. With women’s libbers and feminist groups taking opposite stands, it’s difficult to formulate an opinion on the issue. To define equality, which is what the women’s movement is all about, is a difficult task. Does equality mean being drafted, or does it mean equal pay? The question of responsibility goes with this idea of equality, and it is time that women take their responsibilities to heart.

For the past 10 years women have been coming into the working community and out of the house. It was about time they did, for their intelligence and creativity are talents that are greatly needed. It’s sad to see women, at this point in time, whose only goals are to get married and raise a family. This should be frowned upon, for the country loses a lot of potential from this.

Women have made our society much better over the past 10 years because they have finally chosen to participate. They have taken the responsibilities of working life and combined them with family life, making them better parents and better people, and making life much more interesting. To all the feminists out there, I say grow up! Equality for women will come when all are ready to accept responsibilities of equal rights with men, and not until then.

BSCU, along with Class I Concerts, will sponsor Tom Brown and Bobby Humphrey in concert Mon., Nov. 17. Tickets are now on sale in the Student Center lobby. On Sun., Nov. 16, BSCU will be sponsoring a trip to the Schomburg Collection. There will be a Black History Weekend Program on Sat., Nov. 15. BSCU, along with Class I Concerts, will sponsor Tom Brown and Bobby Humphrey in concert Mon., Nov. 17. Tickets are now on sale in the Student Center lobby. The price of these tickets is $4.50 for students with an MSC ID, and $6 for the general public. Also on board in November is the "10 Years Later" costume party.

In December, BSCU will celebrate the annual Kwanza event. Kwanza is the only nationally celebrated non-historical Black holiday in the US. Kwanza in the last 14 years has grown from its early origins as a cultural concept, and a small celebration of US organization, to becoming the yearly practice of an estimated 10 million Black, as of this season.

The idea of Kwanza comes from the harvest celebrations in traditional African societies, but the symbols and concepts come from our needs, conditions, and development as Afro American people. BSCU celebrates Kwanza with festivities and food. Kasib Bryant states BSCU will be celebrating Kwanza during a two week period.

BSCU hopes all MSC students will feel free to participate in our activities.

Booters end season with tie, 0-0

by William Delorm

The MSC soccer team ended their nightmarish season by battling Rutgers University-Newark to a scoreless tie last Saturday at Brookdale Park. The Indians ended their horrendous 3-10-2 season the same way they began it eight weeks ago—with a double overtime game. On Sept. 19, it was 8-0 in overtime that set the stage for the rest of the Tribe's 15 game season, when they scored with six minutes to play in the final overtime period to give MSC their first win—a 1-0 heartbreaker.

 MSC midfielder Tom Connors broke in one-on-one with Newark's goalkeeper with only a minute to play. Dribbling in from the left side of the field, Connors headed straight for the goal. The goalkeeper held his ground but didn't cut down the angle. The MSC attacker had half the goal to shoot at, and a chance to put MSC in front late in the game.

Connors recorded his second shutout of the season. Steeiers need to be at their very best with only six weeks remaining. They lost twice to Cincinnati, central division opponents.

Many will say that to write off the team at this juncture is premature. But looking at a few facts clearly shows that the Steeiers team of 1980 is not the same team as their college counterpart Notre Dame. Wherever and whenever they play, the opposition is always pumped up and ready to play their hardest. And, for the most part, the Steeiers have displayed, in the past, unbelievable ability play against teams giving them their best. But this year the team is flat.

A long, a team can easily lose the meaning of hard work and dedication in its quest for perfection.

Teams meeting the Steeiers this year aren't afraid to throw the ball as often as they can. Witness the Steeiers games with Oakland and Cleveland. Both Jim Plunkett and Brian Sipe literally picked the Steeiers apart at will.

The Steeiers find themselves in the same position as their college counterpart Notre Dame. Wherever and whenever they play, the opposition is always pumped up and ready to play their hardest. And, for the most part, the Steeiers have displayed, in the past, unbelievable ability play against teams giving them their best. But this year the team is flat.

If anything can be stressed, it's the old saying that for teams on the bottom the only place to go is up. And for those teams at the top the only place to go is down. It seems apparent that unless the Steeiers make a 360 degree turn, their reign as the king of AFC teams, such as New York and San Diego. If the Steeiers can't mount a serious attack on the other's goal, and when a shot was "fired," it looked more like a back pass to the goalie-slowly rolling right to him. After his near miss shot in regulation, Connors supplied additional fireworks in the first overtime— but not with the same kind of "shot."

After having won four Super Bowl rings, the Pittsburgh Steelers' attempt at "one for the thumb" seems to be an illusion that will not be achieved this season.

Many will say that to write off the team at this juncture is premature. Wherever and whenever they play, the opposition is always pumped up and ready to play their hardest. These same rumors say that Duran, win or lose, has had enough of the fight game, that he has accomplished what he sought out to do, and that the recognition he craves for has come his way.

Leonard is also considering retirement, because there is pressure from his wife to get out of boxing while in good physical shape.

To lose either or both of these men would be a tragic loss to boxing. In the fight game there are no other two boxers who command the ability and have the personality these two men have. Yet, should these two men make that decision, it will be a loss to boxing and sports fans everywhere.

Byrne takes billiards

by Bo Ritz

The men’s basketball league ended its second week of play with six teams still unbeaten. In division I, the Coaches and the Terrapins are undefeated, while in division II, the Mens and Olle’s Reeters and CNS Co. are unbeaten. WUTPSB and Yummudders are leading the division with 4-0 records.

Injuries can play as important a part in the success or failure of a team as the strength and talent of its players. In his five years as coach, Dr. Phil Santiago has had only one player sidelined for a prolonged period of time.

Santiago, realizing that a professional sports career is a limited investment, set out and began a nine years of schooling—while playing on four professional soccer teams—he is now a practicing chiropractor as well as a coach.

The boxy looking, first year head coach of MSC’s soccer team comes over to NJ from the New York Institute of Technology XVII. Santiago, who led his Long Island based team to two Metropolitan Conference championships (1977 and 1979), has also been named Coach of the Year twice (1977 and 1979). His ambition is to bring similar results to the Indians.

Sweat dripping down his face and onto a wooden bench as he worked at his computer, Santiago’s eyes scanned the room. "I’ve always wanted to be a chiropractor, and I’ve always loved soccer," Santiago remarked. "When you add sports medicine to the mix, it’s a perfect fit for me."

"Both leagues treat American players like dirt," Santiago commented. "Americans play for nothing, and the owners know it. It’s not like basketball or football where a kid out of college can set his price if he’s good enough. You’re expendable because they (the owners) have the whole world to choose players from,” he added.

As a coach, the five year veteran’s goal is to reach the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) finals. "I’d love to take MSC that far. We have the talent, and we’re close to our dream for an NCAA bid," he said.

San Diego attended the New York Chiropractor College NYCC on Long Island after graduating from Furchan Dickinson University. During these nine years of education, he came to the realization that he’d make his living in sports medicine.

While at NYCC, Santiago signed to play for the ASL’s New Jersey Americans. "The team worked out a deal with the school," he explained. "We were excused from a lot of classes, but I still had to study."

On the road, I got my own room and I had to go before a review board when I came home to prove that I was studying, he said.

"I sure took all the fun away from road trips," he added with a smile.

As to why he still coaches, Santiago explained. "I still love the game and I want to build a good program here (at MSC)," he commented.

"This year, the program stagnated a little, but we should be much improved next season," he added.

Aside from being a chiropractor, Santiago is also a certified trainer. As he has always done, the coach treats all athletes at MSC for free. He complements the already talented MSC trainers in the hope of limiting the team’s injuries and speeding up their recoveries.

"When I played for New York (Apollo), we were the only club with a team chiropractor," he noted. "It helped us win the league championship in 1978 when we beat Los Angeles in the finals. All our players were healthy," the former forward remarked.

While with the Apollo, Santiago did a Dr. Pepper commercial and did endorsements for Sportscraft sporting goods. He also had a fan club of about 3,000 young fans.

"It was publicity for the team," he explained. "As a player, you were marketed," he added.

His first year as head coach at MSC saw the Indians post a dismal 3-10-2 record. A good recruiting job, and continued play in the off season could, however, push him one step closer to his dream for an NCAA bid.
Grundy gains 2000th yard

by John Huegel

Senior tailback Bill Grundy became the second rusher in MSC history to run for 2,000 yards, as MSC (7-2) routed Jersey City State College (2-7) last Saturday at Roosevelt Stadium in Jersey City, NJ.

Grundy, who gained 73 yards in 19 carries, bailed his way as the Tribe scored their only touchdown of the first quarter to give the Indians a 10-0 lead. Six plays earlier, MSC linchecker Mike Henster intercepted the first of four Joe Packwood passes, and returned it to the JCSC 20 to set up the score.

Kicker Keith Sahlin put the Tribe on top earlier in the quarter (3-0) with a 33 yard field goal.

The sloppily played game, which was void of any passing attack, did not want to give the Tribe the ball the same amount of times on interceptions.

Starting quarterback Joe Rebholz threw just three completions in nine attempts (20 yards), and back up Scott Fischer connected in nine attempts (20 yards), and back up Scott Fischer connected.

Runningback Andrew Lancelletti took the ball over from the Tribe's two just before the first half ended to give the Indians a comfortable 17-7 lead.

On the day, MSC accumulated 114 of their 159 total yards on the ground. The Tribe couldn't capitalize on MSC's mistakes.

The Tribe's defense line also did a phenomenal job, shutting down the JCSC ground attack and limiting them to a meager 63 yards. This, coupled with the superb performance by the Indians' secondary, held the Gothics to less than impressive 101 yards in total offense.

Comerback Tom Devine set up MSC's insurance touchdown when he returned a fourth quarter interception to the Gothics' 10. From there, the Gothics' defense stymied the Tribe for three plays before Grundy picked up the yardage for the score, as MSC held on for a 24-7 victory.

EXTRA POINTS: Linebacker Sam Mills reached the 100 tackle mark for his MSC career...The Tribe will conclude their season this Saturday against Glassboro State College: GSC at Sprague Field. Glassboro is 8-2 this season. Both schools will have an outside shot at sharing the conference title with Trenton State College: TSC. TSC is undefeated, and only one point behind GSC, while MSC and GSC each have one loss. GSC and MSC are the only teams to have ever won the New Jersey State College Athletic Conference: NJSCAC crown.

Squaw miss .500

On Saturday, TSC moved within one game of clinching the NJSCAC title by routing Keen College: Keen, 28-12, in Trenton.

After a 7-6 lead through three quarters, the Lions exploded for three touchdowns in the final 15 minutes.

Backup quarterback Brian Marshall hit Tom Cusper on a 74 yard bomb to give the Lions a 28-6 lead and a run away victory.

TSC had scored in the first quarter on a Jeff Williams five yard run following a blocked punt at Keen's 30.
