Hollander talks on plan

by Chris Carroll

A possible tuition hike is expected to increase recruiting minority students and existing minority recruitment efforts, and to increase emphasis on basic skills. The issue has been discussed in the past, but has been shelved until now. Hollander has promised that a new plan will be in place by the fall.

AFT pickets

The AFT picketed, in the rain, in front of, and inside the state house while the board met Tuesday. Hollander said that he felt the board had no power to declare a financial emergency and to begin laying off faculty during a financial crisis. Strike possible

The AFT picketed, in the rain, in front of, and inside the state house while the board met Tuesday. Hollander said that he felt the board had no power to declare a financial emergency and to begin laying off faculty during a financial crisis.

Minority enrollments

Minority enrollments should be increased to 15 percent by the 1990's according to the plan. Hollander also said he wants to increase Educational Opportunity Fund (EOF) students by 10 percent by the same time. He said that there are now 11,000 students receiving EOF benefits. Hollander said that state colleges had an obligation to help students with learning troubles overcome those difficulties.

Emergency unforseen

The board was unprepared for an emergency and did not have a plan in place. Hollander also said that he felt the board had no power to declare a financial emergency and to begin laying off faculty during a financial crisis. He said that there are now 11,000 students receiving EOF benefits. Hollander said that state colleges had an obligation to help students with learning troubles overcome those difficulties.

Hollander responded by saying, "The state colleges are the most vulnerable." He cited a few problems the state colleges continuously face including a lack of funds, the absence of dormitories, and the lack of graduate studies.

"People are reluctant to provide support for higher education," Hollander said. He noted a shift in the population of the US which resulted in more money and support going to services for the elderly rather than to services for young people:

"Many difficult questions were posed and though the answers weren't exactly what we wanted to hear, it was a beneficial forum," Cice said. "It should be noted that the chancellor does not usually visit colleges and universities and that we owe thanks not only to him, but also to Richard Shorter, vice president for external affairs of the SGA for his work in making it possible."
way those concerning proof of age, and service of inebriated only Karali.

According to the lead article of Rutgers newspaper Tar-Jam, approximately 40 students picketed last Saturday's screening of the pornographic film Misty Beethoven at the New Brunswick campus.

Chanting "No more profits off our bodies," and waving posters marked with antipornographic slogans, the students peacefully protested the film.

"According to the article however, opposition to the film was not always as peaceful. Controversy sparked earlier this semester when a group calling themselves the College Avenue Feminist Terrors (CAFT) phoned in a bomb threat that prevented the movies' presentation on Jan. 24.

The moviegoers were evidently not put off by the protestors and lined up to pay the $1.50 admission. According to Anne Costanzo, a Rutgers junior and one of the demonstrators, "CAFT raised the consciousness of many people on the dangers of pornography."

Rutgers president, Edward Bloustein, said that though pornography was indeed disgusting, people had the right to attend the film. He recalled attending a pornography film for a class project he worked on, and reportedly left half way through the film in disgust.

Some of the stated rules go as follows:

--All student groups, non NJIT groups, faculty and administrative groups, must have written permission from the dean of students to sell alcohol anywhere on campus.

It further stipulates that if permission is granted to sell alcohol it must first be bought from the campus pub.

"The applicant must agree in writing that they will be personally responsible for supervising the implementation of alcohol laws including the checking concerning proof of age, and service of intoxicated persons."

Newark-- According to New Jersey Institute of Technology's (NJIT) paper, The Vector, there has been a general crack down on the selling and consumption of alcohol on the Newark campus.

Correction:

In regards to the Feb. 19 issue of The Montclarion, in the article "Garret named Co-op president; Miller resigns," the chairperson of the SGA Appropriations Committee is Carol Oldonski, and not Philip Price as stated.

In addition, the entire committee is responsible for the proposed five percent across-the-board cuts in Class I Organization budgets, not only Karali.

Committee submits proposals

by Dennis Bloshuk

Final proposals for the visitation policy, including building usage and overnight guests, were completed last week by the Housing Visitation Committee to Jean M. Armstrong, dean of student affairs. Armstrong will review the proposals and submit them to the president's cabinet for approval.

The proposal calls for dorm students to be allowed overnight guests three nights a week, only one of which can fall between Sunday and Thursday. Two floors in Brown Hall may be set aside as limited visitation areas. Visitation on these floors which will include 34 students, will be limited Saturday through Thursday night from 6 pm until 10 pm and unlimited on weekends.

The committee recommended that information be distributed to all residents regarding visitation. It would be the responsibility of the housing staff to educate the dorm students about the policy. The proposal also suggested that the executive board and the science club attend the first floor phonathon, which netted an all time high of $47,500.

Alumni House and calling spurred by the most money. "Most Phonathon participants find it a lot of fun," says Lepre. "In fact, the alumni usually donate to us, as they do to their college, to find out how the campus looks and if any of their old professors are still here."

Lepre says this year's goal is $45,000 which is less than they actually made last year. "We're trying to be realistic," Lepre said. She is counting on 20 students a night at the Alumni House. The students arrive at 5 pm, are given a light meal and refreshments and a brief orientation before they begin. The phoning lasts until 9:30 pm.

Each night, the student who collects the most money will receive a $25 gift certificate to Harmony Hut. The second place winner each night will receive a $10 gift certificate to Charlie Brown's.

Lepre said student organizations can compete, and the group that earns the most money will win $500 for their treasury.

The funds raised by the phonathon are used for the programs that are sponsored by the Alumni Association. Alumni scholarships are awarded to students who have raised over $10,000 will be awarded. Other programs include $3,000 for student and alumni academic projects; the annual senior wine and cheese party; The Graduate a magazine distributed to all graduating seniors, and faculty grants. The Association gives funds to the Careers Services Office, and sponsors many athletic events such as Homecoming.

The committee also reinforced the present policy that no resident may have a guest without the consent of his roommate. The number of guests in a room was decided to be based upon the number determined by fire safety officials.

Stover said that the president's cabinet will then decide to accept it in its present form, or make changes they feel are necessary. Stover added that the committee will not meet again unless the changes offered by the cabinet are significant enough to require another meeting.

Reach out and touch alumni

by Nora DePalma

Reach out and touch someone will be the motto of the Alumni Association, to be held this year March 2-4 and March 9-12. For the last eight years, MSC students have participated in Phonathon by spending an evening at the Alumni House and calling alumni to ask for donations.

According to Cynthia Lepre, alumni director, last year's Phonathon produced an all time high of $47,500.

"Most Phonathon participants find it a lot of fun," said Lepre. "In fact, the alumni usually donate to us, as they do to their college, to find out how the campus looks and if any of their old professors are still here."

New club spurred by much interest

Approximately half of the 200 members who make up the newly formed political science club attended the first meeting last Tuesday.

The executive board and the officers of the organization, briefly of their hopes for the club and expressed its social, mental, and holding events for the nation, and is affiliated with the chain of Circle K clubs located on college campuses across the country, and is affiliated with the Kiwanis club and the Key club, according to Shambelan. The main function is organizing and holding events for the benefit of the mentally and physically handicapped people, as well as other "people helping" events. Shambelan said.

The club meets every Monday night in the Student Center Dining Room, and all interested students are more than welcome to come. The club now has only 20 members, which Shambelan says makes the meetings informal, and gives all the club members a chance to get to know each other.

Over the last year the Circle K has sponsored a variety of service events. Along with Tau Beta Kappa (T.K.B), they held an immensely successful dance-a-thon in College High and co-sponsored a Texas cook out. They have also gone Christmas caroling at old age homes and worked with the physically handicapped.

Coming up this Saturday at Fairleigh Dickinson University, Circle K will be holding a ball for the retarded. Future projects also include the possibility of a phone-a-thon some time soon. Circle K members have also held a variety of fundraisers to finance the club, such as their turkey shop last year.

Shambelan said that the projects help members to learn leadership and responsibility, and to help them to work with others. She said it also builds their self-confidence and spirit.

Rathskeller employee, Ann Shubitz, pours a glass of Heineken, one of the four new imported beers the Rat now serves. Kirin, Kronenbourg, and Moosehead have also been added to the Rat's list of beverages.

The new imports sell for $1.25 a glass. Imported beers are not sold by the bottle rather than froth a bottle rather than poured straight from the bottle rather than from a tap.

Keep MSC wet

After nearly a week of rainfall it would seem as if we were on the road to recovery from the drought, however, weather officials think otherwise.

Ben Scott, at the National Weather Bureau in Newark, said, "We don't see any indication that this drought is over."

Though February is considered a very "wet" month by those in the weather service, the rainfall thus far has only been 4.1 inches according to Scott. An average rainfall per month is 9 inches.

Scott said we are coming into a season that traditionally used large amounts of water. "Right about now, the farmers start to turn the soil and the trees will begin to bud, thus causing a lot of evaporation."

This time last year the reservoirs were at about 90 to 95 percent capacity. This year before the recent rains, the reservoirs were operating at 28 percent. According to Scott, though the reservoirs are presently at a little above 30 percent capacity the situation cannot be interpreted as stable. "If we go into the summer operating at the same levels, you'll see such things as water hours and some counties will be taking their water off trucks," Scott warned.

"It is difficult for people to realize the importance of conserving water," Scott stated. He added that "The situation is comparable to that of the gas shortage. It is possible that we could be seeing the same side of people that came out during the gas shortage only over water," he added.

The latest weather reports from the NJ Weather Service do not record any rain in the next few days.

MSC students pulled out their umbrellas for the first time in months on Monday.

SGA news

by Karen Meyer

The main issue of Wednesday's SGA meeting was a bill proposal which, if it had been passed, would have produced a five percent cut in Class I Organizations' budgets for the spring 1981 semester. The bill was proposed by the Appropriations Committee which consists of SGA legislators Phil Karali, Sandy Schlanger, and Beltran Lopez. Their proposed budget cuts amounted to the following:

- SGA Operations $2,285
- BSCU $595
- Class I Concerts $1,139
- CLUB $1,334
- CINA $484
- HRO $271
- La Campana $109
- LASO $431

The committee cited deficit spending as one of their main reasons for the proposed cuts. The deficit expected this year is $18,000. Although the five percent cut would not have erased the deficit, it would have lessened it by $8,698. They reasoned that it would be a step in the right direction towards achieving the SGA's goal of a balanced budget. Lopez said that not cutting the budget this year would conceivably result, in a 10 percent cut the following year. The money that would be allocated to Class II and Class III organizations.

There are an awful lot of Class II's, and they're not getting a dime," Lopez said.

The opinion of many of the representatives of the Class I's was that they weren't pleased with the proposed cuts, but would make due with what they had left. However, organizations like Class I Concerts said that they had made contracts with several agencies concerning future concerts. Although they had not signed formal contracts, it would be "bad for business" if they pulled out. Paul Hugel, editor-in-chief of The Montclarion said that the paper already has made an agreement with North Jersey Press, and if they canceled it, by not running several issues, it could jeopardize any business deals in the future. The only way he could see clear to recouping the lost money would be to raise SGA ad prices, or cut special issues, like the election issue in the spring.

Many SGA legislators were opposed to the bill. They claimed that by cutting the budgets now, students would be hurt in the long run by the activities the Class I's would be forced to cancel. Sonjui Lai, SGA director of public relations, said that the Class I's are "the arms and legs of the SGA", and that cutting their activities would hurt the SGA as well.

Another reason legislators, and Class I representatives were against the bill was that it came up too late in the year. Kevin Malmud, president of Class I Concerts, said, "Why now? Why so late? Now is not the time to start cutting."

Brian Cige SGA president, said to the legislators, "Take into consideration the plight of the Class I's. Take into consideration that the Class I's would be hurt by the budget cuts."

When the bill was voted on, there were 26 against, five in favor, and two abstentions. After the vote, Cige stressed voluntary budget cuts from the Class I's.

In other business, Lai brought up the fact that Spirit Week is coming to MSC March 23-28. There will be more details on this in the future.

Chi Alpha, formerly a Class IV organization of the SGA, asked to be reinstated as a Class III organization under the name Chi Alpha Fellowship. The bill concerning this will go under committee review.
New MA program trains teachers

A new MSC graduate program to train teachers for preschool handicapped children will assist the recently passed NJ legislation to identify and help these children.

Dr. Shirley Zeitlin, associate professor in the department of communication sciences and disorders, has developed the only cohesive program in this field in any NJ college. Students in the MSC program will earn an MA in communication sciences and disorders with dual teacher certification through the already existing college programs of Teacher of the Handicapped (grades one through 12) or Teacher of the Deaf and Nursery School Education.

This new Early Special Education Graduate Program, which will begin fall 1981, has the endorsement of the NJ department of education. Dr. John Garrett, assistant commissioner of special education and pupil services notes that currently only about half of the estimated 12,400 NJ children age three through four who needing special education are receiving it. He reflects upon the shortage of existing teacher training programs and the reinforced urgency for such training, given the expansion of service mandates and a recent assessment of existing programs.

MSC is uniquely suited to initiate a pilot program, he wrote to Zeitlin. They have qualified personnel and existing programs and resources for training speech and language therapists, teachers, nurses and psychologists, learning disability teacher consultants, music therapists, school social workers, and administrators.

There is a history of cooperative efforts between the college and the state education department, suburban schools and agencies in its locale.

The US department of health and human services, through Elaine P. Panavall, its Region II program director for children, youth and families, has stressed the national need for such a training program. She estimated there are about 190,000 handicapped youngsters age three to five throughout the nation and that about 10 percent of all handicapped children are handicapped.

The MSC program will prepare both new teachers and professionals already in the field with ways to work with children with all types of handicaps. The program will emphasize the acquisition and use of language and other communication modes, adaptive coping behaviors, and working with parents as partners in the education process.

During the first year, eight to 10 full time graduate students will be enrolled with as many part time students as classroom space permits. Inservice workshops will also be conducted.

Graduates of the program are expected to find employment in day care and preschool centers, schools, and residential institutions. MSC is located in suburban schools and agencies in its locale.

President's powers, and Garrett says that he spends time in other duties. "I will get back to them as soon as possible," Garrett said. "As far as - my office is concerned, things go in and out. And there's a lot of paperwork that's floating around, and I'm not sure where everything is. But all that he would say about his predecessor, Dona Sorano, is that he thinks she has "brought the office up to a degree of proficiency." He thanks that he has carried out the duties of his office well. "As far as my office is concerned, things go in and out quickly. Having Class I Organizations avoid red tape is something I try to do."

Garrett says that he spends 15 to 20 hours per week in the SGA Office, but that he also spends time in other duties. "I think I've been fairly well available to the students," he said. "I sincerely believe that the SGA is a government like any other, and the students are demanding more services. We can't supply more services without more money."

As treasurer exclusively sign all contracts. This would cut down in paperwork and time spent in shuffling between offices," he pointed out. The problems with this, however, is that some people have said the SGA in a nonprofit organization, with the president's powers. Garrett is unlikely to achieve this goal.

One of Garrett's special projects has been to have the treasurer gain more say in contracts between Class Organizations. "I have the treasurer exclusively sign all contracts. It would have the benefit of gaining more say in contracts between Class Organizations. I have the treasurer exclusively sign all contracts."

When asked about the $4 per semester ceiling, raising the $2 per credit minimum, or just setting a flat fee for all SGA members. Any of these suggestions, or any combination of the three, would solve the situation, Garrett said.

Holy day postponed--almost

by Father Ken Herbster

(NEW YORK, OPI, FEB 23)-The leaders of all Christian churches met yesterday and decided not to hold traditional rites of ashes on Wednesday, March 4, the first day of Lent this year. The worsening drought was cited as the principal reason, but there were indications from a wellplaced anonymous source that many of the leaders were convinced that it was fostering hypocrisy to give ashes--a sign of commitment and repentance--to people who only came on that day, on Palm Sunday--to get free palms, of course, to Easter and Christmas midnight services--for the free center.

A news conference following the meeting, a spokesperson stated: "Less palm was available this year for the production of ashes because the lack of water in the marshlands inhibited a large harvest, local fire marshals were concerned about by dryness and the burning of those palms available got out of control, and conservatives among the leaders felt that unnecessarily large quantities of water would be used to clean all those palms for their ash." The spokesperson would give no information as to the closeness of the final vote on the cancellation but it was learned also from the above-mentioned nameless informant that traditionalists--as a last ditch effort to prevent it--offered to allow, as a compromise, the use of java ash from Mt. St. Helen's recent eruptions.

Herbster stated that whatever the reason for the official cancellation, he considers that the Rite of Ashes and the season it introduces--to be a healthy, and useful practice. "It reminds me of the need we each have to pause, reflect, repent and rebuild," he added. "The ashes are a symbol of what is in the heart. Canceling the ritual would be a negative reaction and I think offering people on this campus the opportunity to reflect on what they would like to be as a whole is very positive. We wore yellow ribbons to remind ourselves of hostages. We can wear ashes to remind ourselves of ourselves, too." Father Herbster is the campus minister.

A660 is a lesson in politics

by Ken Brown

After reading last week's "Student Speak" section in The Montclarion, I feel that it is important for me to write this article and address two things. First, I would like to provide some history on Assembly Bill 660 (A660) which provides for two voting student representatives, and second, that it is important for me to write this article. In conclusion I would like to answer the question that was presented in "Student Speak" section. In my opinion, two voting student representatives on the trustees will provide the students of MSC excellent and direct input into the policy making decisions of the college. It will allow for students to attend closed session as well as open session meetings. Student representatives will also participate in committee meetings. Bill A660 will also legitimize student representatives in the eyes of the state as well as the students. Presently, the position of student representatives is not legislatively mandated and could be eliminated by the attorney general. Finally, two student representatives will bring a broader perspective to the trustees, and the fact that their terms will be two years will allow for them to gain valuable experience while developing as mature individuals.

Ken Brown is a student representative to the board of trustees.

Special to The Montclarion by Beryl Ourish

(MONTCLAIR, FEB 26)--The Rev. Kenneth Herbster, campus minister at MSC, and director of Newman House, was interviewed by this reporter concerning the recent OPI release about the demise of Ash Wednesday Services. Herbster stated that he had sufficient supplies of palm ash on hand and that services were scheduled March 4 for noon in Russ Hall Lounge--with a mass at 3 p.m. in Ballroom C of the student center, and at 7 p.m. at Newman House--again with a mass.

Students speak

"What do you think of a student being elected president of Co-op?"

"I think it's a good idea as long as the student is acquainted with business technique and managerial responsibilities."--Bill Alfie, business/1982

"I think it's too much responsibility for a fulltime student."--Nancy Grever, English/1983

"I think it's just too much responsibility for a fulltime student. It would bring a student perspective to the trustees, and the fact that their terms will be two years will allow for them to gain valuable experience while developing as mature individuals."--Ken Brown, student representative to the board of trustees.

"I feel that a responsible student can have the ability to concentrate on his studies."--Eugene Khayor, business/1984

"I feel it would be a good idea if the student could work within a budgeted time limit and still have the height to concentrate on his studies."--Drew Pavlica, broadcasting/1982

"Although I believe students are qualified, I don't feel they have enough time to give to properly run this $44 million organization."--Nancy Grever, English/1983

"I feel that an individual who can dedicate his time to the sole purpose of Co-op should be the president. I think it would be too much of a responsibility for one student."--Rosanne Geraci, communication theory and practice/1983

"I feel a responsible student can be a competent president of Co-op just as well as an older student."--Bob Margitch, speech and theater/1984

"I feel that the student is qualified, and does not have the knowledge and expertise of an older student."--Bill Alfie, business/1982

First step the hardest

To the editor:

Long ago, in the year 146 BC, the Third Punic War ended. The war was between two great powers of the ancient world: Rome and Carthage. There had been two wars preceding this one, and in both Rome had come out victorious. The Carthaginians developed a great hatred and fear of the Romans after these wars; likewise the Romans for the Carthaginians. When Carthage went to war against Numidia their treaty with Rome was broken, and the Third Punic War arose. I believe that Rome decided to eliminate the Carthaginian threat to their empire. The Romans won the war. They burned the entire city of Carthage, sold its survivors into slavery, and sowed salt over all their land so that nothing would grow for years to come.

There is a bitter struggle going on today, between two great powers of the modern world: the US and the USSR. Americans have developed a great hatred and fear of the Russians, and the Russians for us. If we go to nuclear war, there will be a sowing of salt of which the world has never seen. Plutonium "salt," no amount of water can ever eradicate. What it touches dies. Where it is sown, nothing will grow for untold years to come.

War is man's most ancient institution. Perhaps there is no way to end it. But there is no more glory in war. Losing war has never been glorious, and losing a nuclear war would be. The worst case scenario would be to lose all our people. But would not winning a nuclear war be at an unacceptably high moral cost?

A time for change

To the editor:

The Administrative stand on visitation in the dormitories due to premarital sex is absurd. The majority of psychological problems develop in the age of early childhood and not at college age.

The moral standpoint of this college is to change with the times and accept the changes of the coming years. It is not the obligation of this college to ignore revolutionary ideas and lay stagnant to the acceptance of sexual freedom.

As for the morals of the issue on premarital sex, this is the 1980's, where freedom of sex appeared nearly 10 years ago. What is so sacred about marriage where the divorce rate in America is reaching 50 percent? And for those unfortunate people who marry prematurely in life and then divorce, did this entitle them to "temporary" sex? The administrative views only restrain the society with 1940's sociosexual "morals." Morals change with the times and are not written into common law as right or wrong.

As mature adults at MSC, we feel that any action taken by the administration would be an obstruction of our freedom, not only as students, but as responsible citizens. The administration should start thinking in terms of the 1980's and not of the prohibition era.

ROTC: not for all

To the editor:

This letter is in response to the letter you published from the International Committee Against Racism (INCAR) in the Feb. 21 issue of The Montclarion. Are they changing? They talk as though this was 1968 and we were still at war in Vietnam. And as for getting blown inside out by joining the military, how can this happen in peacetime?

Their response seems to me to be neither sided and inappropriate. No one forces anyone to join the military, or any organization. ROTC does not spell destruction. If a person wished to take a ROTC course then it should be no problem to take it. It’s not mandatory like "Freshman Composition." And why should a student from MSC have to travel up to Seton Hall University to take the courses.

To the editor:

Where is the glory in knowing that your victory has cost the lives of 10's of millions of innocent people? Both loss and victory are unacceptable.

Peace and mutual disarmament should be our goal (rather than cold war and covert arms build up). The only way to reach this goal is for the people of our country to take a stand against war and militarization.

ROTC is undeniably a military organization which produces officers for the armed forces. I won't say anything about the merits of ROTC or the armed forces, but I will say that the smallest step toward peace is better than the smallest step toward war. Send a letter to the All-college Curriculum Committee via campus mail. Oppose ROTC on campus.

Campus police force questioned

To the editor:

I have recently become aware of a situation that I find ridiculous in nature. On a campus of this size, I find it hard to believe that the campus police refuse to jump start cars! With this in mind, please tell me what good these ticket jockeys are for? And maybe I can understand what the miscellaneous fees are that are tack on to my tuition. Instead these helpful servers of the people give you a phone number to call where you can get a jump start for a mere $10.30 during the day and a whopping $17.50 at night. How ridiculous! Are these guys on drugs? As for promoters of the people, what happens if the student with the tow truck turns out to be a pervert? Is MSC responsible? Are the campus police liberal?

Personally, I feel that with the amount of money the students pump into this institution of higher education we should receive better services from the campus junior police force, other than a large number of tickets that they so generously distribute.

Jamming out on his own

by Mark Baird

Regan Ryzak has started his own record label. "I had to," he says. "Standing at a certain point, I'd done for the past five days, I'd been sitting at the curb, waiting for the pokey service the cafeteria offered. To the right of the revolving doors and the dining area's dangling their feet off the floor of the Student Center was the cafeteria. To the left, both revolving doors offered the opportunity to buy the tapes," Ryzak explains, "they're too shy and don't want to be seen." He also knows the frustration of dealing with a record company. "Before I was a recording artist, I had recorded local gospel groups and members of local college music faculties. I wanted to have projects coming to tape. In an effort to expand its recording business and go national, OCA ran an ad in the New York Times, promising recording facilities and contract for promising musicians. I went to Cincinnati with Phase, a fusion quartet he was leading at the time, this being May 1978. They recorded an album of original music entitled Midnight Madness. The band received several complimentary copies of the album, but..."

Crazy but persistent

Geldof leads Rat invasion

by Darrel Lippman

Unlike the heavy rains outside, the Boomtown Rats were far from wet. But many thought otherwise of lead singer Bob Geldof’s antics on stage.

After the third song into the performance (I Never Loved Eva Braun), Geldof yelled what many musical artists often do to boost crowd enthusiasm, “What the hell did you come here for? To sit in your seats? C’mon, you’d think you’d seen enough of that this afternoon,” he shouted angrily. “Now get up or get out, you might as well get up being you’ve already paid,” he continued, inserting a few choice words.

Most of the audience abided by Geldof’s strong suggestions, but many sat down after the next song was done. Then, the persistent Geldof stopped and shouted again, refusing to continue unless each and everyone in Memorial Auditorium was standing (examing up with his hand gestures).

Many were on their feet the rest of the show, especially those up front and blocking the aisles on either side. Others (an estimated 40 percent) thought who the hell Geldof thought he was, shouting obscenities at him.

“He’s here to entertain us, not the other way around,” one MSC student said angrily, preferring to remain anonymous.

But Geldof seemingly felt the same way about some of the crowd. He took to the air...i... “Don’t look like you’re ready to stay up all night,” Geldof said, pointing to his right at the people who sat back down.

“In Dublin (Ireland, the band’s home), concert seats are not used to sit in, they’re used to stand on to see over the person in front of you,” Geldof shouted in disgust.

What is all boils down to is this: Firstly, a good number of people knew the warm up band, Willie Nile, better than the Boomtown Rats. When Nile was done (and there was a question of Nile’s playing at all after getting to MSC from Houston at 6:30 pm that same night), many were witnessing the Rats for the first time (and maybe lost as some were clearly dissatisfied, excluding, of course, the many Rats fans present). So what do we have here? The Boomtown Rats vs Willie Nile? Not exactly. Just some people going to see one and not the other.

Secondly, people who had never seen the Rats didn’t know that a Boomtown Rats concert is a participatory event, something totally different in concerts (Geldof asked for volunteers (girls) to dance in the pit of the stage; their images being projected on different colored circles on a striped backdrop). Be that as it may, the Boomtown Rats were their typical selves: a talented, energy-packed band, who put on a devastating show Feb. 19. And despite being rapped by some as obnoxious, lead vocalist Bob Geldof is quite the opposite: a plain crazy and colorful person to say the least.

Most recently, the unpredictable Geldof and Co. are “bongo crazy” with the release of their fourth album, Mondo Bongo. The Irish singer immediately gave the audience a sample of his musical taste of late, or in other words Calypso, opening the performance with Mood Mambo.

He appeared, clad in a white ruffled tux shirt and strap bow tie, black leather jacket, and high top sneakers which didn’t reach the end of his short black pants. With just his bongo drum mate beating the tom toms, the two some went into a fierce ritual type event, “...Looking for love. On the cheap rate. Go! Gonna make it down. With you want. D’ya see? He said. ‘crazy bongo, I’m in the mood to mambo...’ Geldof sang as the backdrop that read “The Boomtown Rats” rolled across to the left in a clothesline fashion to reveal the remainder of the group (Garry Roberts, guitar; Terry Colt, guitar; Johnny Fingers, keyboards; Pete Briquet, bass guitar; and Simon Crowe, drums).

Geldof danced around in a fast Jamaican style, hunched over with arms flailing all over the place, throughout Mood Mambo (and, after shedding his jacket and loosening his tie, did the same throughout the rest of the performance). He’s an unbelievably energetic performer, and becomes stronger with each song.

But the Boomtown Rats didn’t restrict Mondo Bongo to just bongo music. There’s everything (as on previous albums) from Afro-reggae, soft ballads, Irish folk, to hard rock, which they exhibited when they went right into the new album’s and concert’s second song Straight Up.

Geldof can change the mood of a Rats concert with the snap of a finger. After one of the band’s harder edged rock tunes, the familiar piano beginning of I Don’t Like Mondays was heard—a ballad that caused controversy over the lyrical content (“...and the lesson today is how to die...” etc.) Geldof mesmerized the audience, who just one song ago was jumping around nonstop. “I wanna shoo-oooot the...whole...day...down...” he crooned, pointing his gun finger to his temple.

The little over an-hour performance (15 songs) could be summed up with some lyrics from Keep It up (off The Fine Art of Surfacing album).

“...Does it feel nice/ does it feel good/ quite nice...”

“...Does it feel nice/ does it feel good/ quite nice...”

Yeah Bob, it felt good, but as the verse continues, take heed to your own words a bit, “...Can you keep it up/ can you keep it up/ upright/ does it let you down/ ah, does it let you down/ sometimes...”

He may have let some down with his particular attitude, but one thing is for sure, these guys from “Boomtown” were far from drowned Rats (another outstanding show thanks to Kevin Malmud and Class I Concerts).

The Squaws were led by sophomore guards Sharon Ross and Tracey Brown who scored 16 and 10 points for the winners. The MSC women's basketball team traveled to Queens College (Queens) last Saturday and came away with a disappointing 74-61 loss to the hands of the Lady Knights. This was the first time that Queens has ever beaten the Squaws in their series history. The loss also hurts MSC's bid for the Atlantic Coast Conference and Intercollegiate Athletics for Women Northeast regional tournament.

The Squaws were held to just 23 points in the second half by a stubborn Lady Knight's defense. A taller Queens team dominated the boards throughout the game, outrebounding MSC 40-19. The frontliners, Donna Ward, and forwards Jacqueline Brantley and Renee Buckins scored a combined total of 49 points and grabbed 32 rebounds. Senior guard, Sheila Horak also pitched in 17 points for the winners.

The Squaws were led by sophomore guards Sharon Ross and Tracey Brown who scored 16 and 10 points respectively. Forward Debbie O'Brien also contributed 12 points in a losing effort.

With three minutes left in the game, Queens led by 14. MSC, looked as if they were going to make a run at the lead on two steals by Ross and Brown to cut the lead to 10, but Queens regained their composure to preserve their 74-61 victory.

MSC was 24-8 (.750) during the regular season, while Queens improved themselves to 11-2. The Squaws host the University of Rhode Island this Sat., Feb. 28 in their last regular season game. The Squaws are hoping to grab the eighth slot of the tournament which would most likely pit them against top seeds, West Virginia and Rutgers. The eight teams will be selected Sunday and announced on Monday.

Worswick’s dedication pays off

by Mike Pucciarelli

While talking to Scott Worswick one gets the impression of a mature and confident senior, but in reality the 6 foot, 175 pound swimmer is only a freshman in his first year at MSC.

Since coming to MSC in September, Worswick has been working hard to make a reputation for himself. He already holds the team and pool record in the 200 yard backstroke with a time of 2:07.60. In the 400 yard medley relay, which consists of himself, Steve Dempsey, Kenny Doguardi, and Calvin Taylor, Worswick has also set the team record at 3:56.35. He is also called upon to swim the 500 yard and 1,000 yard distance freestyle, the 200 yard freestyle, the 200 yard butterfly and the 100 yard backstroke. "I feel my best events are my 100 yard and 200 yard backstroke and these are the two I hope to qualify for the nationals in," Worswick stated.

A graduate of Johnathan Dayton High School in Springfield, NJ, Worswick came to MSC looking for a division II school with a good reputation. "I didn’t like division I schools because they promised things you knew you wouldn’t get," Worswick said. Coach Greg Lockhard just told me how it was at MSC," Worswick explained. In high school he swam the 100 and 200 yard backstroke and 200 yard freestyle and was selected to the all-Union county all-star team his senior year.

To become a successful swimmer Worswick dedicates himself 12 months a year to the sport. The team starts practice in September and does not end until May. During the season Worswick and his teammates must swim 10,000 yards (5 to 6 miles) during a practice session in the beginning of the week to work on their lungs and towards the end of the week they reduce the workout to 2,000 yards to work on their speed.

"You just do it because you know if you work hard success will come," Worswick stated. "A swimmer is an athlete who must dedicate and discipline himself all year round, unlike other seasonal athletes."

So far this season Worswick’s hard work has paid off. His personal record is 8:1 and the team’s record is 5-4. When swimming in the events Worswick will pace himself and wonder if he started too fast or too slow. "I keep sight of where I am in accordance to myself," he said. Worswick loves the team and praises the coaching as being great. He explains if it wasn’t for Lockhard’s motivation and the help of his teammate and good friend Taylor he wouldn’t be where he is today. "Everyone is close on the team; we’re like a giant family," Worswick proudly stated.

Presently a sociology major, Worswick would like to apply for a position with the FBI or the NJ state police after graduating from MSC. As for his swimming, this year he is looking forward to meet the Gallisboro State College again in the state tournament especially since last year they placed fifth in the nationals. Worswick’s ultimate goals for the next three years are for the team and himself to qualify for the nationals and to be an allAmerican. "I am looking forward to the next three years here at MSC."

JV wins seventh

The women’s JV basketball team finished their season Monday night rolling over Nassau Community College 77-48. The Squaws used a second half man to man defense to run away with the game after building up a 30-23 halftime lead. Lori DeLuca led all scorers with 17 points followed by JoAnn Worbetz with 14. The Squaws finished the season with a 7-3 record.

Grapplers qualify for regionals

The men’s wrestling team has qualified six grapplers to compete in the NCAA regional tournament to be held Feb., 26-March 1 at John Carroll University in Cleveland, OH. They are Rodney Smith (126), Dave Drozdog (130), John Antosciwce (167), Chuck Bronder (190), and heavyweight Art Sopelsa.

TSC splashes Squaws

The women’s swim team lost to Trenton State College (TSC) last Friday night at TSC, 79-43. Senior co-captains Susan Taylor and Candy Iandanza copped first place honors for the Squaws. Taylor stroked to wins in the 50 and 500 yard freestyle and Iandanza followed with victories in the 100 and 200 yard individual medley.

David qualifies for nationals

Sophomore Micki David, the Squaws number one diver, was the only swimmer to qualify for the nationals to be held March 12-14 at Cae College in Cedar Rapids, IA.

Pitchers on the warpath

Pitchers Bob Buccino and Belarmimno Suarez appear to have been practicing their bean balls. Last Monday during batting practice, each one accidentally felled a teammate with fastballs in tight. Bob Heinz was Suarez’s victim while Glen Deloe couldn’t dodge Buccino’s blazer.

Lope tries new motion

MSC’s Roger Lope is working on a new pitching motion for the upcoming season. He tried it out last Monday and almost lost his head as Vin Tiberi cracked his first pitch back into his face. Lope says that he will continue to practice it, however.

Noval, Salmon star

The women’s track and field team traveled to East Stroudsbury this past Saturday, in an Invitational meet. Outstanding competitors for MSC were Gaye Noval, second in the 60 yard dash, Pat Salmon, second in the two mile run and Laura Friech, third in the 440.

Women’s track meeting

There will be an organizational meeting for all women interested in running track and field on Tues., March 3 at 4 pm in Room 104B in Panzer Gym. If you are unable to attend, contact Michelle Willis at 893-5247.

Chamra leads Tribe, 69-67

The men’s varsity basketball team nipped Glassboro State College (GSC) last Saturday night 69-67. Bob Chamra led the Indians with 16 point followed by Ed Riche with 14. The win upsied MSC’s record in the conference to 8-6 and their overall record to 12-11.

Chamra leads Tribe, 69-67

The men’s varsity basketball team nipped Glassboro State College (GSC) last Saturday night 69-67. Bob Chamra led the Indians with 16 point followed by Ed Riche with 14. The win upsided MSC’s record in the conference to 8-6 and their overall record to 12-11.
The saying goes “better to be lucky than good.” MSC's JV men's basketball team was a little of both this season. They “dodged a bullet” at Glassboro State College (GSC) last Saturday—a 66-65 victory—to finish the year with a 22-0 mark, an MSC record.

With eight seconds to play and MSC up by one, a CSC shot rolled around the rim and out in what could have been the end of a dream season. “It scared the hell out of me,” guard Greg Spann stated afterward. “But I felt great,” he added.

“You can’t go undefeated without being lucky,” Coach John McCarthy commented about his team’s super season. “I’ve been lucky on several fronts,” he added.

“First, Coach Gelston (MSC varsity) had enough respect in me to hire me. He also gave me the freedom to coach,” the ’67 MSC graduate said.

“I also had an opportunity to coach with a friend of mine, Mike Cohen (assistant varsity coach). In addition to defensive principles, he gave me support and encouragement throughout the season,” McCarthy commented about his colleague.

The team’s major assets included quickness, great shooting ability, and depth. “Everyone on the roster could play,” McCarthy said. “Every kid on the team got a chance to be a standout in one game or another,” he added.

Two such incidents occurred when forwards Ty Durkac and Charlie Coe moved up to the varsity after the JV team’s 10th game. Both played exceptionally well vs division I Fairfield University and have been on the varsity ever since.

Another prime example is freshman John Ziemba. “The first 21 wins came because the kids played hard, good defensively, and unselfishly,” McCarthy said. “We won our 22d, however, because of the individual performance of Ziemba,” he added.

Ziemba had 17 points on the night, including the final six after four of his teammates had fouled out. “After the other guys fouled out, I was hitting so I just decided I might as well shoot,” Ziemba recalled about his performance.

The freshman guard from Garfield, NJ credits much of his recent success and confidence to McCarthy. “He’s a great coach. I learned a lot this year,” Ziemba remarked.

McCarthy, who never played basketball at MSC, had nothing but praise for the people he’s worked with this season. “I reap all the rewards of being in a lucky position,” he stated. “I couldn’t have been better received by everyone,” the first year coach pointed out.

The coach pointed to the administrative help he received from assistant coach Gary Gelston and the aid of Cohen. “Cohen’s impact on the program may go unnoticed by the spectator, but all of the players recognize his ability. I’m indebted to him for all the help he has given me,” McCarthy said.

Even the varsity players were supportive of him and his team to the end.

“During the final game vs GSC, the cheerleaders dressed 10 minutes early to cheer for the JV,” McCarthy recalled. “You won’t see that anywhere else in the conference. I wouldn’t coach anywhere but here,” McCarthy added sincerely.

The highlights of the JV season were three victories over division I schools: Army, Colgate University, and Princeton University—all on the road.

Another high point of the ’80-81 campaign occurred after the loss of captains Durkac and Coe. “We played out final 12 games with a 6 foot, 1 inch center (George Duff) and two 5 foot, 11 inch forwards (Warren Anthony and Gregg Spann),” the coach recalled.

“After we lost Durkac and Coe, we went out and beat William Paterson College by 30 points,” Ziemba recalled. “We were nervous before the game, but afterwards we knew we’d still go good,” he added.

The biggest adjustment, Ziemba had to make is going from a losing team at Garfield High School to the 22-0 Indians. “In high school, we would go out each night expecting to lose. Here, we went out knowing we could win,” he explained.

Spann, the Tribe’s swingman, found the adjustment easy after Coe and Durkac were promoted. “Coach McCarthy was the difference. Because of him we’re 22-0,” the team’s leading scorer (23 points per game) noted. “Although I was the leading scorer, it was the team, not me, that made us such a success,” Spann pointed out.

For freshman Warren Anthony, it was the second time he has been part of an undefeated team. “In 1978, we were 30-0 at Asbury Park High School,” he noted.

As with the other players, Anthony attributes much of his success to his coach. “McCarthy made it easy. The biggest problem coming out of high school is adjusting to the new patterns but, McCarthy taught me how to watch and think on the court,” he said.
