Shuttle buses swamped

By Stephen McLean

Crowded Clove Rd. and Quarry shuttle buses have been exposing students to inconveniences and personal safety hazards this last week, according to SGA vice president Phill Karali. The absence of a sidewalk along Clove Rd. has also forced students, unable to ride the shuttle, to risk walking on the shoulder.

In response to a Sept. 3 Montclarion editorial citing incidents of buses carrying nearly twice their legal capacity, Peter Macagne, assistant to the vice president for administration and finance, expressed disbelief that this could be true. "There's no way you can fit 31 students in the shuttle," he said, "without having arms and legs out windows," or without some student "sitting on top" of the bus.

A head count taken on one shuttle at 9:55 a.m. yesterday tallied 26 students. On another bus, at 3:00 p.m., 23 students were counted. Both numbers are reasonably close to the bus' limit, however. Last Wednesday at 10:00, 31 students were on one run, and 35 on a second shuttle bus.

To alleviate the crowded shuttle bus situation, Karali has pushed for the utilization of a third shuttle bus. This service was to have begun yesterday, but has been put off until a driver can be found. Although he expressed hope the third bus would "help quite a bit," Macagne was apprehensive that it would no longer be available as a replacement if one of the other two buses were to break down.

For students who walk along Clove Rd., plans for a sidewalk have been put off. Jerome Quinn, director of institutional planning, said that such construction would have to be torn up in two years, at which time the county plans to widen Clove Rd. About the possible dangers of having no sidewalk, Quinn said students should ride the shuttle and simply stay out of the street. He had no knowledge of the shuttle bus overcrowding.

Quinn said that plans have been made to build a walkway from the Clove Rd. parking area to the lots above them. This, however, will not be ready until some time around the fall of 1982. Composed of steps and ramps, this walkway would make it possible for students to safely travel from their cars to campus.

Currently, two shuttle buses are in operation. Both are restricted to a student capacity of 17 seated, and 5 standing. The third bus, traditionally used as a backup, is restricted to 12 seated, and 7 standing.

According to Macagne, he instructed shuttle drivers to allow the buses' capacity "plus one or two" to ride at one time. He added, "If it winds up that X number of students have to walk, then that's all the bus' capacity allows them to handle."

A number of students riding the shuttles expressed their concern for safety.

"As many times as I've ridden the shuttle, it's been overcrowded," adding, "if something happens, there's no way to get off."

"It's impossible to get off if you're in the back," said Toby Kalucki, a senior accounting major.

Macagne also felt that the shuttle bus eventually would be able to tackle the problem by assessing patterns of commuter flow. He said that the parking lots fill up in much the same order every day.

MVAU Working

Did you ever wonder what would happen if you or one of your classmates was seriously injured on campus and needed immediate transportation to a hospital?

In all probability, the Campus Police would notify the Montclair Volunteer Ambulance Unit (MVAU), a 24 hour emergency first aid and transportation service which would respond almost immediately to the campus.

The MVAU crew would treat the injury and transport you or your friend to an area hospital, free of charge.

Who are these people who are so often taken for granted?

MVAU members are volunteers who contribute over 100 hours per week to serve the residents of Montclair. Some of the members are teachers; others include engineers, insurance executives, lawyers, nurses, retirees, aerospace workers, women, and housewives. Many of the MVAU's volunteers are students, and almost half are female.

MVAU members are specially trained and certified in emergency first aid, defensive driving, extrication, emergency childbirth and CPR. Many are Emergency Medical Technicians, and some are now studying to be paramedics.

The MVAU is currently seeking new members. If you are in good health, have a valid NJ driver's license and a good driving record, and you reside on campus or in the area, please call the MVAU for an application at 744-1234.

SGA here to serve

The Student Government Association (SGA) offers a wide range of services to all full and part-time undergraduate students.

Students with questions about the law, contracts or leases can use the SGA legal services at no charge. A lawyer is available for consultation every Wednesday in the SGA office from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. and from 5 p.m. to 6:30 p.m. The SGA also operates a bilingual legal clinic on alternate Saturdays.
Lal best qualified
By Meryl Yoorish
Sonjui Lal, the new SGA president, is looking forward to an active year for students. "I'd like to make the students of N.J. a major lobbying force again," she stated.

The senior political science major said that she sees her time, I was the only person who was qualified enough to run student government."

Two of the promises Lal made during last spring's campaign were to investigate the possibility of a grade plus system and some form of judiciary system for MSC students. She and several of her cabinet members, along with other interested students, researched both problems. Lal has sent a proposal to Roland Sprague Library, Karali and Mininberg's executive secretary. Her duties include hiring college-work contracts makes it all worthwhile.

Karali works on keeping promise
By Lynne Schurdak
Sandy Schlanger, newly elected treasurer of the Student Government Association (SGA), has already found she needs more than twenty-four hours in a day. She began work this summer to fulfill her campaign promises made last April. She has already completed organizing a leadership conference for the legislators to explain how the SGA handles and appropriates its annual cash flow of approximately 580,000.00, and has put together a Class One seminar, which explains to the Class One Organizations their relationship with the SGA, and how budgeting procedures work between the organizations. Schlanger feels that by explaining how the system works in the beginning, the organizations can work better together, thus netting a better result.

Schlanger's goals are to be as efficient as she possibly can, and to keep a tight grip on everything. With this in mind, Schlanger invested a sum of idle money through Merrill Lynch in hopes of gaining a profit. In the future Schlanger intends to put a coin box on the Xerox copy machine in the SGA. Office to prevent paper waste. Before leaving last year, she and the president of the SGA must design a budget for the coming year. Schlanger also holds a seat on the Board of Trustees for the Faculty. Student Co-op.

Pedalino to serve again
By Donna Carpinelli
Craig Pedalino is planning to have an opinion representative to the Board of Trustees fall into this latter group. He is looking toward the semester as an interesting challenge.

As can be true with other positions, the student representative to the Board of Trustees can simply be a full-time job or a full-time position. Though he's still resting up from illnesses over the summer, he has already had some new policies set up. He is planning to have an opinion box, a suggestion box, and hold regular office hours.

For many students the beginning of a new semester is viewed as an advantage. Some, however, tend to look at things in a different light. Craig Young, newly elected Student Representative to the Board of Trustees falls into this latter group. He feels that, "The SGA has become his philosophy.

Craig was active in high school affairs, but when he entered college he found he didn't know how many of the student organizations operated. He wanted answers so he got involved with the Student Government Association (SGA). "I wanted to be able to voice an opinion," he said. "Voicing the students opinion, even if it differs from his own, or others on the SGA, has become his philosophy.

Since being elected, social life has been transformed. "In the past, the benefits of SGA outweighed its short comings. To Comp, just gaining the confidence, meeting the people, knowing the answers and making the contacts makes it all worthwhile."

Garrett named vice president

By Georgette Georgiadis

The successful atmosphere, the tremendous potential, and the people (including students) Dr. Roland Garrett met during his brief visit in the spring, influenced him to accept the position of vice president for academic affairs at MSC.

Garrett graduated from Columbia University with three degrees in Philosophy, B.A., M.A., and Ph.D. He has a student body of 6,000. His responsibilities ranged from curriculum development to He later accepted a job as an associate professor and assistant dean of faculty at Indiana University, in South Bend, which research projects. In 1978 he became divisional chairman of arts and sciences with an overall accountability for 15 departments and 27 programs.

His current position at MSC will give him an opportunity to play a significant role in the life and development of MSC's 14,000 students. He will also oversee 544 full-time jobs for faculty teaching in 60 bachelor and master degree programs in liberal arts and professional fields.

Although he has not yet set any long range priorities in the two weeks he has been here, he would like to implement the senate degree requirements, which will be a major curriculum change but, he feels, will add strength to the liberal arts degree. He still wants to further his knowledge about the general operation of MSC, and expects to learn a lot by talking to people and clarifying priorities.

Dr. Garrett feels that his visit would be giving students the full advantage of a top quality education.

Shuttle schedule

The MSC shuttlebus system will run three, shuttlebuses this year, an addition of one over last year. This additional bus will not cover any specific route but will communicate with the other two shuttles and help alleviate overcrowding in trouble spots.

One bus covers the Clove Rd. route, and will make stops at the new Clove Rd. parking lot, the Clove Rd. Apartments, College Hall and Partridge Hall. The second bus will pick up commuters from the Quarry parking lots, also stopping at College Hall and Partridge Hall. The third bus will run from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., running where needed. Evening service begins at 6 p.m. and only one bus will be in service.

The buses run on a continuous basis and cover their route in 10 to 12 minutes depending on traffic and parking problems. Shuttle bus route maps are located at the bus shelters.

The bus system is under the direction of Peter McGinnis, assistant to the vice-president of administrative services.

Lal at helm

Garrett, the new vice president for academic affairs, regarding grade files. She also discussed the judiciary with Jean Armstrong, dean of student affairs.

Another important item for Lal is coordinating a voter registration drive on campus. Reviving the comtose New Jersey Student Association is another of Lal's goals for this year. She was instrumental in gathering the SGA presidents of the N.J. state colleges and universities to discuss forming the new State Student Association.

Lal thinks that her major problems this year will be the implementation of policies involving faculty and administration, explaining that there will probably be problems that have the SGA going head-on with faculty and administration, such as the grades plus system.
The bulk of yesterday's SGA meeting involved the Summer Director's report by Sonjui Lal, SGA President. Lal is required by statute to work 40 hours per week during the summer keeping the SGA running.

Lal informed the legislature that the investigation into a judicial system for MSC students is underway, and that discussions are being held with the faculty and administration. She also investigated the possibility of a grade plus system, and a proposal will be sent to the vice-president of academic affairs, the academic deans and the registrar.

A meeting was held on Aug. 23 of the state college and university SGA presidents. Lal said that she is trying to revive the New Jersey Student Association, a lobbying organization that folded last year. MSC pulled out of NJSA two years ago. Lal and the other presidents agreed to work together and try and form a lobbying force for college students in Trenton. Their first step is a voter registration drive on each campus.

Bill A3298, the ruling on private corporations on college campuses, passed the Assembly Education Committee in a modified form. Student governments are excluded in the bill to prohibit private corporations on non-college campuses.

Lal's appointments for Cabinet members were approved. They are: Angel Wilcox, director of dormitory affairs; Jose Hernandez, vice president of external affairs; Mark Spinelli, vice president of academic affairs; Phil Anter, vice president of welfare and internal affairs; Charles Bannan, director of public relations; Sue Williams, director of services; and Franz Buchalter, director of Weekend College.

Dates for freshman elections were determined.

Be There or Be Square
We want you

The turnout for today's SGA meeting, the first one of the year, was exceptionally heavy. That's an encouraging sign, but then, students always show up in droves during the first few weeks of the school year. Getting people to take a look at what your organization is all about doesn't seem to be that difficult; getting them involved is the problem.

There are 1500 freshmen beginning their careers at MSC, and thousands of upperclassmen who don't yet know how many different organizations the SGA offers. The most recent count was 75 charted organizations, and another is already on the agenda to be considered for a charter.

Granted, this is a commuter college, and many students work part or full-time jobs outside of their regular course loads, but at least half (and probably more) of all students involved in the SGA are commuters.

Many of the students here at MSC don't realize exactly what the SGA is. The initials stand for Student Government Association, but there is more to the SGA than the legislative meetings every Wednesday at 4 p.m.

Are you a member of the Riding Club? Newman Community? The Italian Student Organization? Have you ever attended a movie on campus, played in intramural sports, gone to a beer blast, or a play? This very newspaper is a fully chartered organization of the SGA, sponsored in part by student funds—your money. Not many students realize that the activities they are attending are made possible through the work and dedication of a relatively small number of students. This fact becomes painfully obvious every SGA election time—especially when you realize that we have never drawn more than 30 percent of the student body out to vote in all the years of the SGA.

Student life at MSC can be as boring or exciting as you make it. You can spend the entire four years driving to campus, going to class, and driving home—or you can find an organization that you would like to be part of, and join it. It isn't hard. The campus is flooded with posters for new member meetings. Just find the one you like best, and walk in. It could make the difference between merely spending four years of your life in college, or remembering those college years as the best four years of your life.

Give the SGA a chance. We're all members, whether you know it or not. That's why the words “SGA fees” appear on your bills twice a year.

What do you do when you run out of excuses to study?

By Chris Carroll

I can't read. I'm in college and I can't read. Oh, sure, if you ask me to read the sentence, “The quick brown fox jumps over the lazy dog,” I'll be able to do it. Also, I'll probably be able to tell you when word was the verb and which was the noun. With a little more time I might even be able to tell you which words were adjectives. That's easy.

What I'm talking about is reading, being able to fully comprehend what you pay an arm and a leg for in the bookstore. Studying is what most people call it.

I survived four years of high school English, but I still can't concentrate and remember what passes before my eyes everyday of classes.

Could it be that there are too many distractions in my room? Well, let me take a look.

Ahh, distraction number one—the box that leads to self-destruction and the downfall of innocent young children—the television set. I mean, how can anyone study knowing that the quiet little town of Port Charles is being frozen by some evil madam? How can anyone concentrate when Reggie Jackson steps up to the plate with the winning run on third? How can anyone read when Klinger is in uniform? It's impossible.

There is also another device that not only leads to poor study habits but also to increased waist size—the refrigerator. Who wants to read when there's food to be eaten? Heaven forbid if you let it go to waste.

Then there's the stereo. At first it is just turned on for background music while you study but then, before you know it, your listening to all those golden oldies that you haven't heard in a couple of years. The radio is another good excuse, I mean distraction, to keep me from studying.

Of course, who could forget the telephone? Who is going to believe me when I say, “I can't read. I have to study.” Ha! Nobody. So I'll drop everything and talk for hours. Advanced Micro Astronomy can wait another day.

Maybe there are psychological reasons why I can't read. Maybe my parents hit me with books when I was younger and left me with a fear of hardcoveres. Maybe I was accidentally locked in the school library and had dreams of textbooks chasing me.

In any event, I can add, subtract, multiply, and even do division, but I still can't read. Is it the fault of the education system in the US? Is it my family's fault? Probably not. It is most likely due to the fact that I hate to study and as long as I can find ways to put it off, I will.

I'm going to have my first test soon. Will I read the assigned chapters? No. Will I look at the assigned chapters? Probably. Will I understand the assigned chapters? I haven't the slightest idea.

Maybe I should give Evelyn Wood a call, but I don't know how to read the phone book.

Sticks and Bones searing drama

Ozzie, Harriet, Ricky Nelson star

By A.K. Wolf

The Players of Montclair State College opened their 1981-82 season last night with a production of David Rabe's Sticks and Bones. The show was well-received and will continue through Saturday night in the Studio Theatre, which is in the Speech Building.

Rabe's complex and moving drama uses the Nelson family (complete with Ozzie, Harriet and Ricky) as the perfect example of what has been held up for Americans to accept as the ideal family. On the surface they are very congenial and loving, but when the oldest son, David, comes home from Vietnam, blind, the Nelson's are forced to face themselves and things get rough.

The idea of using this famous television family is very successful because almost everyone has an impression of it, at least, of the sugar coated typicality the show expressed. It allows the author to build upon this knowledge, and to easily punch holes through this facade.

The Nelsons are very happy leading their naively complacent lives, believing in the honor of war and bravery and macho. Ozzie can't take his eyes off the football game on t.v. long enough to listen to anyone. Ricky is constantly bugging in and out of the house wearing his guitar like a poster, and Harriet never stops cooking and cleaning long enough to think. Yet, they form a kind of satisfied unit in their noncommunicative manner.

Then David enters the picture. The time he has spent at war has done many things to him. He has seen mass murder, which brings him, it also is not the main problem. David has become aware of the fallacy of his parents lives and beliefs. He has seen humanary struggle for existence and be warmly human and cruel in that struggle. Most of all he has fallen in love with a Vietnamese girl, whom he abandons for an empty life at home.

When David first comes home, each member of the family is too self-centered to afford him the least courtesy. Slowly, David's presence in their midst works upon the Nelson's until the house is in turmoil. Try as they may, they can no longer ignore the reality that David represents, and they begin to question themselves and their beliefs. Just when you think that the old existence is about to be brutally shattered the family regroups with young Rick at the head and Harriet never stops to do just what one should: analyze. The play is the tragedy of Othello, yet Plummer, would rid us of the only unsettling element of the original Ozzie. Dugan also does a fine job expressing the change his character experiences from self-confidence to nagging self-doubt. Mark Hinlicky brings real emotion to the rambling poetic role David Rabe has created.

Sticks and Bones has been billed by the Players as a "searing drama." I have to agree. This is an important work and is certainly worth your while to see.

"Amateur" actors disgrace pros

By Stephen Kantrowitz

Although it has seldom been accepted at the American Shakespeare Festival, Othello has had a continuously successful life on the stage, and is almost always considered one of his finest works. The American Shakespeare Theater production, which recently finished its run at Stratford, Connecticut, admirably captured the dramatic intensity which motivates the main characters' actions, yet failed miserably in conveying anything else.

One would think, viewing the production, that Shakespeare was at a two character play. The lead roles of Othello and Iago were wonderfully played by James Earl Jones and Christopher Plummer. But what about the rest of the cast? There are, indeed, other characters who serve important purposes in this frightening tale of jealousy, envy and possession.

Set in Venice, Othello is chiefly concerned with the precariousness of trust, and sanctity of marriage, and how easily it can be poisoned and destroyed by a lack of trust. Othello, a Moor and foreigner to Italy, is a General in the Venetian army. He has recently married young Desdemona, as sweet a creature as can be imagined. She is the daughter of Brabantio, a Venetian Senator.

The marriage is protested and cursed on the grounds that Othello is a soft-spoken man who has become aware of the fallacy of his parents lives and beliefs. He has seen humanity struggle for existence and be warmly human and cruel in that struggle. Most of all he has fallen in love with a Vietnamese girl, whom he abandons for an empty life at home.

Joe Jackson's Jumpin' Jive

No, the Joe Jackson band hadn't broken up. Instead, they've been teaching us that he'll be back in the studio to return to his pop rock roots after his recent with his hit 40's swing music (Gib Galloway, etc.) That's when this writer will start paying good money to see him again.

I skipped this show when informed that Jackson couldn't be performing any of his previous material due to his band, Jackson's love for this type of music propelled him to try it out on the public. Over the summer, he was seen in the Ritz, the Savoy, and Hitsville.

The "Jumpin' Jive" track does "jump" on that, and the album has sold well in the stores, but the other slower material isn't enough to make the record a good one.

Poptronix is a fairly versatile new wave band, but the highlight of the set was probably "Wanna Dance, I Wanna Be" which was a fast dance tune including "Jumpin' Jive".

Some people were so preoccupied with their dancing that they wouldn't have noticed the stage design by Robert Fletcher was a reshaping of the earlier summer offering of Henry C. Foote's text, musical setting and enabling the cast to "paint pictures with words." Contrary to those sitting off-stage, it was too much of a stage for us to detect, and the Brown's Wedding--Lawn Chairs: Spandan Ballet--To Cut A Long Story Short: Stray Cats--Rock This Town: Unchained: Steppenwolf Gary Glitter--Dance Part 2.

The Go-Go's got the beat

They got the beat. And the looks. And what it takes to make it. Which is a lot. The Go-Go's are out to prove that they play better than they look. Why else would the cover of their debut album, Beauty and the Beat, show them in fluffy muumuu packs, their hair wrapped up in towels?

There's Pat Benatar, Robin Lane, Blonde, and Coco. They write their own songs, but they're all backed by male musicians. Without sounding sexist, these girls can really play, and their material is well written. The Go-Go's even have good producers in the Specials (which they've been touring with).

Their new single, Our Lips Are Sealed, is an irresistible reproduction of 60's pop. Lead singer Belinda Carlisle puts overwhelming exuberance into this cut about teenage jealousy. She has an emotional quality to her voice, not found in any other female voice..."Can you hear them they talk about us telling lies? Well that's no surprise can you see them see through them they have no fears, no secrets to reveal..." she pleads.

The attractive Carlisle clearly takes charge onstage, her brightness something to behold, that is if you were lucky enough to catch the up and coming Go-Go's when they were recently in the New York Area. They sold out the Ritz two consecutive nights among other clubs that they've also played.

With the Go-Go's new album, Our Lips Are Sealed, moving up Billboard's charts at a fantastic rate, they're ready to take on Europe as soon as they finish touring in the Midwest.

Beauty and the Beat also contains the Go-Go's single, We Got Beat, and a tune that's been getting a lot of play in clubs. These and other songs on the album seawave from early Blondie pop to this Floyd Show. The audience at One Way's "Rock n Roll Outback" is truly interested, and they didn't attract many more at the Musical's "Meat Parade" last Saturday.

Big summer singles and heavy airplay in clubs over the summer: Generation X--Dancing With Myself, Lene Lovich--"Tempered; Robert Gordon--Somebody Somewhere--Protesters--Message Of Love (and their EP) and new L.P. Knowing the difference if the decay were spinning. the Ramones greatest hits. That might be the only problem with the Ramones' reputation as a dance band. Many watch but many could just as well be listening to the group on their stereo at home.

The Ramones' new album, Pleasant Dreams, shows their new direction towards more sophisticated melodies. It's Not My Place (in the 9 to 5 World) is untypical of the Ramones we've come to know, but like a few other tracks on the new L.P., reflects this purer, new sound. The beginning of It's Not My Place has a very close likeness to that of the Doors' Touch Me, but with a little more hollow sound.

Other songs that show the Ramones new style include We Want the Airwaves, All's Well, the Question of Possible Overcrowding becomes an issue. The health condition inside Hitsville that night was horrendous. Granted, it didn't stop many from enjoying themselves, but notch by notch a club should know its limits and not be so concerned with the dollar.

The new Ramones are just as good as the old ones. Maybe the correct word to here is that they're matured, and changing with the times, which makes a flexible band.

The main thing is, the Ramones always know how to keep 'em dancing.

The Go-Go's are out to prove that they play better than they look. Why else would the cover of their debut album, Beauty and the Beat, show them in fluffy muumuu packs, their hair wrapped up in towels?

There's Pat Benatar, Robin Lane, Blonde, and Coco. They write their own songs, but they're all backed by male musicians. Without sounding sexist, these girls can really play, and their material is well written. The Go-Go's even have good producers in the Specials (which they've been touring with).

Their new single, Our Lips Are Sealed, is an irresistible reproduction of 60's pop. Lead singer Belinda Carlisle puts overwhelming exuberance into this cut about teenage jealousy. She has an emotional quality to her voice, not found in any other female voice..."Can you hear them they talk about us telling lies? Well that's no surprise can you see them see through them they have no fears, no secrets to reveal..." she pleads.

The attractive Carlisle clearly takes charge onstage, her brightness something to behold, that is if you were lucky enough to catch the up and coming Go-Go's when they were recently in the New York Area. They sold out the Ritz two consecutive nights among other clubs that they've also played.

With the Go-Go's new album, Our Lips Are Sealed, moving up Billboard's charts at a fantastic rate, they're ready to take on Europe as soon as they finish touring in the Midwest.

Beauty and the Beat also contains the Go-Go's single, We Got Beat, and a tune that's been getting a lot of play in clubs. These and other songs on the album seawave from early Blondie pop to this Floyd Show. The audience at One Way's "Rock n Roll Outback" is truly interested, and they didn't attract many more at the Musical's "Meat Parade" last Saturday.

Dudley Moore shines in 'Arthur'

By Bob Fitzgerald and Ralph Blakeslee

Arthur
Starring: Dudley Moore
John GIrlund
Liza Minelli
Rated PG

"Grown up Arthur, you wouldn't make a wonderful adult someday." But for Arthur (portrayed by Dudley Moore), whose life consists of "racing cars, playing tennis, and fending women, with weekends off," growing up seems needless.

The writer-director combination of Steve Gordon and Fred Schuler have provided the public with an unforgettable expedition into the world of laughter. This new Orion film release has already proven itself at the box office.

Arthur's story is a well-worn tale of a pre-arranged marriage and an undeniable love for the wrong woman. However, the acting and comedic timing brings this theme to life.

John Gielgud (as Hobson, Arthur's Butler) is the perfect straight man. Gielgud's quick wit and spontaneous replies equal Dudley Moore's Arthur, who is never at a loss for a bad joke. Gielgud's character is the only one who understands the real Arthur, the simple child with the ability to become an adult.

Liza Minnelli, Arthur's true love portrays the piano waitress, Linda. Though she receives little billing, her performance shines. From the very moment she enters the film. She is fact-talking, tough, street-wise, and provides an interesting contrast to Arthur's world of the high society.

Arthur himself is a contrast; though he seems to have endless amounts of money and gen, he has the attitude of a child—he plays with toy trains while making love and entertains himself, as well as others around him, by singing Christmas carols. Because of Gielgud's realizations he becomes aware that he can remain a child forever, he must change his life.

It can be rather hard to find a comedy that entertains without being overly offensive. Arthur has this quality; it should not be missed.

Music highlights 'Night in Georgia'

By Harold Lowry

When the lights first went out in the theater, I was prepared for a bogus, Burt Reynoldsque "Southern cops and fugitives" movie. But, The Night the Lightest Went Out in Georgia isn't just another imitation of Smokey and the Bandit. It turns out to be a fairly good movie, with decent acting and an additional treat—good original music.

The setup for the story goes something like this: two young kids try to make it to Nashville and become famous. Travis Child (Dennis Quaid) sings and writes songs while his little sister Amanda (Kristy McNichol) handles the business end of things. Then Travis' leisure time activities put them on the wrong side of a street-wise, and provides an interesting neutral character from disappearing amid all of the stronger parts.

All together, The Night the Lightest Went Out is a strongly balanced picture that holds the audience's interest and makes its point, seemingly with ease.

If you want to see something that assures you of your money's worth, this is it. After the lights come back on in the theater, you'll be singing "Amelia—" all the way home.

SILC Preview

By Mike Ritz

Another summer has passed by, bringing a new school year upon us. While some students were catching the season off at the beach, the Student Intramural and Leisure Council (SILC) was busy preparing its upcoming schedule for the 1981-2 school year. SILC, last year's "SGA Organization of the Year," hopes to provide a wide range of sports and leisure activities for all to take part in.

The fall semester opens with men's and co-ed touch football on the astroturf of Sprague Field. MSC is unique in that all the games are played at night under the lights.

SILC is introducing a new sport to its programming schedule this fall. Team racquetball will be held at Clifton Racquet Club starting Sept. 21. Participants will be required to pay a minimal charge. The rules and other information will be available in the SILC office.

Around the middle of October, activities move indoors with the opening of the men's basketball and women's volleyball leagues. Both leagues will be played in Panzer Gym on an alternating night schedule.

Throughout the semester, SILC also sponsors other events that students can take part in individually. The month of October is Trivia Month. Once a week, contestants try to answer various questions from categories such as Sports and Movies to win the cash prizes. Other events include trips to professional games, backgammon and billiard tournaments.

Women's basketball kicks off the spring term of SILC sports in the Panzer Gym. The entire league is divided into two sub-leagues with one being competitive and the other non-competitive. Early in March, basketball will finish and be followed by coed volleyball. Teams in the league are also separated to a competitive and non-competitive format.

SILC's main event for the year comes in late March when they sponsor the 5th annual 24 hour Volleyball Marathon benefitting The American Cancer Society. In past marathons, celebrities such as radio DJ Johnny Dark and soap opera star Jacqueline Courtney have attended. Last year's event raised approximately $5,000 for cancer.

The year closes with the men's and co-ed softball tournaments in April and May. The new fields located in the Quarry will be the site of the tourneys if they are ready.

SILC hopes that everyone will get a chance to participate in one of their many events. For further information, call the SILC office (ext. 5245) or go to the fourth floor of the Student Center. Advertisements can be found in the Montclarion in weeks prior to an event.

Join the many students who have experienced the fun and excitement that intramurals can provide. Get out and meet new people by being a part of it. Intramural fever. Catch it!

Smoke Signals

MSC Downs Penn. 31-24

The MSC football team defeated the University of Pennsylvania 31-24 last Saturday at Franklin Field in final preparation for their home opener against Wagner. The Indian offense was led by sophomore quarterback Mark Casale, who threw two TD passes to Terry Porter and ran for another. The offense was led by sophomore quarterback Mark Casale, who threw two TD passes to Terry Porter and ran for another. The defense also played well, causing seven Quaker turnovers.

MSC in Pride Bowl

Bill Dioguardi, Director of Athletics, announced yesterday that the Montclair State football team has been invited to participate in the third annual Pride Bowl football game. The charity contest matches Montclair State against Central Connecticut in a game to support athletics for the inner-city children of Newark.

Project Pride, a community service organization in the City of Newark, is sponsoring its third annual Bowl game on October 24, 1981 at School Stadium in Newark at 2:00 p.m. School Stadium is located on Bloomfield Avenue just across the Bloomfield line.

Hughes and Popek lead MSC

Joe Hughes and Mike Popek have been elected as this year's Co-captains for the MSC football team. Hughes will lead the offense from his center position while Popek guide the defense at tackle.

Fortunato on First Team

Indians third baseman Bob Fortunato was selected to the first team of the New Jersey State College Athletic Conference baseball squad. Outfielder Steve Lipinski, catcher Vinnie Tiberi and pitcher Glen Roe were named to the second team.

Fall Baseball Starts

The 1981 MSC fall baseball season opens on Friday, Sept. 11 when the Indians take on Long Island University. The home game at Pitzer Field is set for 3:15.

O'Connor and Ziccardi Named

MSC sophomore Toni Ziccardi and senior Bonnie O'Connor were named to the New Jersey Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (Division One) All-Star Softball Team. Ziccardi was named as first team catcher and hit a conference high .470 average while O'Connor was the first team third baseman and had a .353 batting mark.

Soccer Team Loses

The MSC soccer team lost to Morris County College 4-1 in a pre-season scrimmage last Thursday. The Indians open the regular season at Mercy College next Friday.

Soccer Match Rescheduled

A change has been made to the soccer schedule. The game between MSC and the New Jersey Institute of Technology has been moved to NJIT's home field instead of Sprague Field.

Womens Tennis Opens

The 1981 MSC Women's Tennis season starts on Friday, Sept. 11, when the Squaws travel to Fairleigh Dickinson University. The women will play a 13 match schedule, ending in late October with Kean College.

Note from the A.D.

All undergraduate students with an ID card and a current MSC sticker on it are admitted to all home athletic events free of charge.

IM Officials Needed

The Intramural department is looking for able people to officiate intramural sports. Some knowledge in football, basketball, and softball will help. You must be eligible for financial aid. If interested, contact McKinley Boston in the Student Activities Office, fourth floor of the Student Center.
Olson Reassigned to Softball

Swierzbin Named Head Coach

By Patti Connor

The MSC women’s field hockey team will start their 1981 season under the leadership of a new head coach, Ms. Diane Swierzbin. Ms. Swierzbin was recently named to the position of head coach after Ms. Donna Olson. Ms. Olson’s Assistant Athletic Director duties were reassigned to that of Fall softball coach. Olson ended her coaching career with field hockey after 10 seasons with a record of 60-47-5.

Ms. Olson has assured the team that they will be in good hands with Coach Swierzbin, who has had ample experience working with hockey at Southern Connecticut State College (SCSC).

It is hard to predict how the team will do this season. They have lost much of their defense due to graduation and will have some important offensive slots to fill.

Returning this year for the Squaws is senior goalie Ronnie Gudewicz. Gudewicz, who was named to the All-Conference Team last season with 177 saves, should prove to be an asset to the team this year. She will be aided by returning defensive players Ruth Ann Van Dalen and Lisa Symes. Symes, in her senior year has been a varsity player since her freshman year. Linda Warfle and Lee Ann Miller play one of the toughest positions on the field as links. Links need to be quick and full of endurance due to the fact that they play both offense and defense.

The returning offense consists of Debbie Dietrich and Diane Tyson. Both were transfer students from Ocean County Community College and will be with the Squaws in their second season. Gudewicz, who has had ample experience working with hockey at Southern Connecticut State College (SCSC), last year the Squaws were 7-8-1, just short of .500.

“IT will be challenging in choosing a varsity team with all the returning players, the new freshmen and the transfer students,” says Swierzbin, “but once it is chosen, the positions will not be definite. There will always be a chance for a J.V. player to move up. We (Swierzbin and J.V. coach Kitty White) plan to keep everyone on their toes."

Last year’s team ended their season 7-8-1, just short of .500. One of Swierzbin’s goals for the season is to hit .500 and hopefully surpass that mark. Another goal is to make it to post season play.

The Squaws compete in Division II of the Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women. The team will schedule games which pits them against some of the strongest Division I and II teams in the East. Coach Swierzbin is confident that the team will be successful. "By successful,” added Swierzbin, “I don’t mean in the sense of winning, but rather in playing well and working together."

The team will open their season on the road against SCSC. Last season the Squaws blanked them in a 2-0 upset. Swierzbin says, “Southern’s strong. They always are. I saw that game last year and Montclair was surprising.” Hopefully MSC will come out on top again and give Coach Swierzbin her first win against her alma mater.

Most of the team’s home games will be played on Sprague Field. This is an added incentive for the Squaws, to be playing on campus. Their first home game will be on Sept. 24 against the University of Bridgeport.

The MSC Field Hockey team opens its 1981 season on the road at Southern Connecticut State College next Saturday under new Head Coach Diane Swierzbin.
