Lal elected VP

Reorganized NJSA returns

By Meryl Yourish

Representatives from seven state colleges, Rutgers Camden, and Ocean County Community College met last Sunday to rebuild and reorganize the New Jersey Student Association (NJSA). The representatives voted to accept the present corporate status and constitution, revitalizing the student lobbying organization that has been dormant since last year. Kean College and four of the Rutgers campuses were absent.

The representatives also agreed to work with the present constitution until it can be rewritten at a leadership conference. The date of the conference is expected to be within the next two months.

Executive officers were elected on a temporary basis. The representatives agreed that new officers would be elected at the leadership conference.

Sonjui Lal, MSC Student Government Association president, was elected executive vice-president of NJSA. Frank Colaluca, Student Government Association president from Jersey City State College (JCSC), was elected president; Mike Landis from Rutgers Camden was elected vice-president of internal affairs; Pete Sklannik of the New Jersey Institute of Technology (NJIT) was elected treasurer, and Eric Kessler from William Paterson College (WPC) was elected secretary.

Sklannik, NJSA's treasurer last year, explained to the representatives the reasons why the organization dissolved and gave a financial report on NJSA's present assets and liabilities.

He said that personality conflicts had a lot to do with various schools pulling out of the organization, and pointed out that the present constitution enables each college's SGA president to have the power to withdraw his or her school from the NJSA.

Sklannik's financial report indicated that NJSA's total bank balance was $96. Each college was asked to donate $500 if they could afford it.

Another major item discussed was the voter registration drive which was agreed upon at the first NJSA meeting on Aug. 23. The representatives reported that the drives were moving slower than had been expected, but that the accompanying letter drive was going well. A form letter was printed up which stated that the signer would not vote for those legislators and senators who vote against higher education allocations. Rutgers Camden reported that their letters drive achieved 400 signatures in two days.

Assembly bill A660, which would give students two voting representatives on each college board of trustees, was also discussed. A questionnaire was voted on to be sent out to all of the candidates for the November elections, asking the candidates whether or not they agree with bill A660.

The questionnaire was amended to include a question about Assembly bill A3298, which deals with auxiliary corporations on state college campuses. The bill was written after Attorney General John Degnan's Formal Opinion 22 last year. Degnan, at that time a gubernatorial candidate, ruled that private corporations should not exist on college campuses.

Ed Lloyd, a representative from the Public Interest Research Group (PIRG), urged the representatives to rebuild NJSA and pledged PIRG's aid in the rebuilding effort.

Contract talks stall

By Naedine Hazell

A petition demanding that the state college presidents change their stand on the merit pay issue of the teachers' contract negotiations has been distributed by the American Federation of Teachers (AFT).

Merit pay is a monetary reward to faculty and professional staff, currently awarded upon recommendations from the deans for outstanding performance.

The administration feels that merit pay should be non-grievable while the AFT feels it should be grievable.

According to MSC President David W.D. Dickson, merit pay was non-negotiable in the previous contract which ran out July 1. He added that the state college presidents agree with the state's negotiating team that merit pay should remain non-negotiable.

According to Katherine Becker, president of the AFT on campus, the petition objects to the presidents' positions that merit pay should not be grievable even on the grounds of discrimination. "Merit awards, by their nature, represent favoritism and cronyism. Without peer review, the administration is free to reward those who cooperate and to punish those who do not," she said.

Becker added "Without the right to grieve, the administration is not bound by the affirmative action that protects minorities and women. They are free to ignore the history of the civil rights legislation that has produced the affirmative action guidelines."

Although few inroads have been made in contract negotiations, Barbara Horner, a representative of the AFT, said the campuses "are being kept in a state of preparedness" in case of a job action.

There has not been a negotiating session since the first week in September and another session has not yet been planned.

The membership of the AFT wants their new contract to state that merit pay be grievable, while the presidents and the chancellor's office on higher education feel it should be an administrative decision.

Becker said that the union feels very strongly about the issue. "We are working very hard to avoid a strike, but we cannot preclude the possibility."

Dickson explained the administrative point of view. "Unions have never endorsed distinctions within their ranks. They assume that everybody does a good job. I believe in merit pay very much—without merit pay we can never honor a person who is doing an extraordinary job. We (the administration) have to improve the quality, while the union is justifiably concerned with security."

Becker denied that security is the sole basis for the AFT's concern. "The best people to judge the teachers are those who do the jobs themselves, the peers of the teacher. How can an administrator judge a chemistry teacher? Only other chemistry teachers are capable of fairly judging the performance and recommending the individuals involved for promotions," she said.

According to Dickson, the only grievable items in the old contract were issues such as tenure, promotion, and faculty re-appointment. These items could only be grieved on the grounds of a violation of procedures, such as an unfair hearing or the suspicion of discrimination.

Religious group loses charter bid

By John Lynn

Chi Alpha, a controversial campus religious organization, was once again denied a charter under the SGA. This decision followed a heated three and a half hour SGA meeting last night. The bill, calling for the group to be granted a class four charter, fell short of the necessary two-thirds vote required for a charter under the SGA. The vote was 15 for, 10 against, and five abstentions.

The controversy originated last fall when Todd Barnes, a former MSC student, threatened to bring a lawsuit against the SGA because of difficulties he had with the then class three organization, Chi Alpha. As a result of his and other charges against the group, the SGA dechartered the organization last fall.

In reference to last year's controversy, Timothy Siegler, president of Chi Alpha, stated "a lot of things have been said and done," but "that is past." He added that the past should have no bearing on their current status. Siegler said that the group was "structurally the same" as last year.

Other problems the group encountered last fall was their affiliation with the Assembly of God Church (class three organizations are prohibited from belonging to national organizations), and allegations that the group's chaplain, Steve Espamer, had an unusual amount of influence in the group's programming.

Debate of their appeal for a new charter began with questions being addressed to the members of Chi Alpha present at the meeting. It then proceeded to debate among legislators.

Last year, Barnes came in contact with the religious group when his ex-girlfriend joined Chi Alpha. According to Barnes, her personality "did a complete 360." Disturbed by her sudden change, Barnes began questioning the group's legality.

According to Espamer,

career corner

By Peter Pritchard

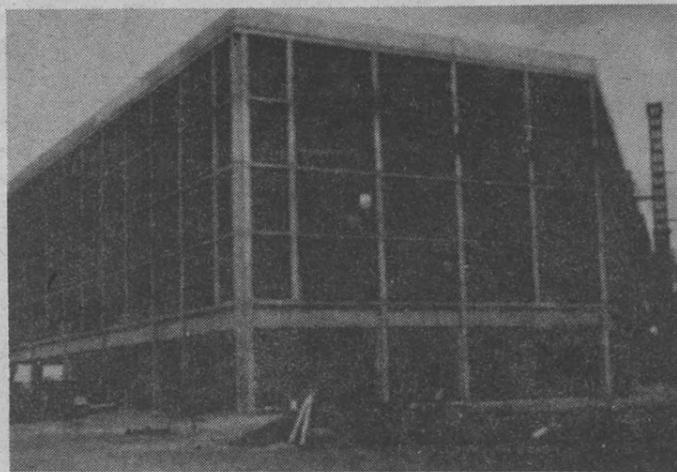

Seniors who are interested in applying to graduate school or the government need to start the application process now. The staff of Career Services will be offering 4 one hour seminars in their Life Hall office this semester to help students understand how to best approach these two traditional career related options. The "Strategies for Applying to Graduate School" seminars will be held on Tuesday, September 29 from 1-2 pm and on Thursday, October 22 from 11-noon. The "How to Get a Job in Government" seminars will be held on Thursday, October 1 from 11-noon, and on Wednesday, November 4 from 2-3 pm. Pre-registration is not required.

Deadlines for two government hiring exams are imminent. A federal hiring examination, the PACE (Professional and Administrative Career Examination) will be administered between January 1 and February 15, 1982. The only filing period for that exam is September 14-October 13, 1981. The government must receive applications during that period. Students with any college major who expect to receive their degree within 9 months are eligible to take the exam. A wide range of jobs are filled through this examination, with the most favorable opportunities in the following: social insurance claims examiner, tax technician, contract and procurement specialist, budget analyst, and public contact positions requiring fluency in Spanish and English.

The Foreign Service written examination will be held on December 5, 1981, and is open to anyone who is 20 years of age at the time of the test, a U.S. citizen, and available for worldwide assignment. The deadline for receipt of applications for this test is October 23. Information and application forms for both of these tests is available in Career Services. Evening hours for the academic year have begun and all students, particularly those who work full-time, are encouraged to come in on Thursdays until 8 pm.

Blanton Preview

An Open House for residents of Blanton Hall will be held on Sunday, Sept. 27, from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m., Ron Campbell, director of Blanton Hall, said.

The purpose of the Open House is to "familiarize residents with the building in which they will be living and to introduce them to the people to whom they will be working with," Campbell said.

The five story residence hall, named after Lawton W. Blanton, dean of student at MSC for 22 years, is six sided and has an atrium. It will house 640 students on floors two through five with a cafeteria, health center, and main lounge on the first floor. The co-ed dormitory will be fully carpeted and air-conditioned.

Resident Assistants, Assistant Managers, and the Assistant Director of Blanton, Lori Parrott, will lead groups of 15 to 20 people through the dormitory. They will examine residents rooms on the fifth floor and also examine the cafeteria and main lounge.

"This is the first residence hall of its type in the country to be designed with such comfort and care for the students," Campbell said.

Each residence floor will contain two lounges and four study rooms. The lounges will include kitchen facilities, washers, and dryers.

The scheduled opening of the dormitory is November 1, 1981.

Commuter life

By Rick Zweibel

Many commuting students feel left out of extracurricular activities. They don't feel like a part of the campus, and one of the main reasons for this is that many clubs and organizations don't schedule activities at convenient times for commuters. Events and club meetings are often at night when most students are already home from school, and, the times when events or meetings are held during the day, they interfere with students' classes.

Junior Linda Zubanas, a communication sciences and disorders major, had a similar complaint. "I wish the Speech and Hearing Club could meet during the day," she remarked. "I don't like to drive back and forth to school, coming home during the day and going back to school at night."

Finally, Keith Pressey, a sophomore business major and transfer student from Morgan State University, commented, "There's a lot of things I wish I could attend but they don't meet at good times. At the college I formerly attended they had a 'College Hour' every Thursday from 11 am until noon for clubs to meet."

Despite complaints that they may have about programming of activities, there are some particular reasons why clubs and organizations schedule things at certain times. One factor for nighttime scheduling relates to individual club policies. In many cases, clubs or organizations will schedule events or meetings at night because that is when they get the greatest attendance.

David Breslauer, chairman of the College Life Union Board (C.L.U.B.) said, "In general, it's easier for a day student to come at night than it is for a night student to come during the day." C.L.U.B. also wants to avoid conflicts with classes. "We don't like to interfere with academics in the daytime. There are less courses at night so it is better to have events at night," Breslauer said.

Mike Ritz, president of the Student Intramural and Leisure Council (S.I.L.C.) had a similar reply. "Scheduling day activities is a problem because they tend to interfere with students' course schedules." Judy Echeveria, president of the Council on International Affairs (C.I.N.A.), explained why the club's lectures are at night. "Most of our lecturers are professionals with busy schedules and can only make presentations at night," she said.

Some attempts have been made to accommodate the "daytime" commuting student. According to Sonjui Lal, SGA president, the SGA has tried to recommend to every organization and club that they should attempt to run programs and meetings during the day and at night. But she stressed that the SGA has no direct authority to decide on when clubs and organizations should handle their affairs.

S.I.L.C. has a few daytime leisure events, such as a Dunkin Munchkin Eating Contest and a Puff-Basketball Shooting Contest last spring. They also have a Trivia Contest on four Wednesdays in October. Both C.L.U.B. and S.I.L.C. run an annual Spring Day, a day of races, games, free food and entertainment.

The Council on International Affairs does also run daytime seminars. Last year, for example, presidential candidate Barry Commoner spoke representing the Citizens Party. C.I.N.A. also had a seminar during the day on the problems of El Salvador. This year, in addition to lectures and seminars, C.I.N.A. will also show one early movie in addition to their regularly scheduled night movies. The movie, "Catch 22", will be shown on Tuesday November 17 at 6 pm.

Class I Concerts had one concert during the day last year, although most of their concerts are at night simply because of the nature of their events.

Lal has a suggestion for all students. "If students have complaints about the scheduling of student activities or events, then they should join clubs of their choice, or at least attend club meetings to voice their opinions." She emphasized, "This is the best way to be effective in getting activities or events scheduled at specific times."

Develop skills in Co-op

By John Kadash

Cooperative education, known to most people as the "Co-op ed" Program, is one in which students may benefit from the experience of paid employment in pre-professional positions in their major field or career goal. At the same time, they receive academic guidance and credit. Students work in a variety of private industries, businesses, non-profit agencies, and public institutions.

Freyda Lazarus, director of Cooperative Education, said, "The purpose of the co-op program is to develop skills and to determine what professional field you want to be in. One of the aims of the program is for the student to be able to test out his or her skills and to find out if they are choosing the right profession." Participation in the program, according to Lazarus, gives graduating students the experience they will need when applying for jobs. "These students always have an edge," Lazarus said.

Whether participation in the co-op ed program will interfere with school studies is really up to the student. Although there are many options for the co-op program, Lazarus strongly emphasized the alternating program, which is one semester of work, the next semester school, then out to work again. She feels that to be of value to an employer, the student must be there full time. Other plans include parallel, which is part-time work combined with a class schedule, and a consecutive, consisting of two semesters of co-op, back to back. Whatever program, Lazarus said, "The student must have a willingness to work full time."

Grading is determined by the faculty advisor, who visits the job site two times a semester. The grade is derived from a goals and objective agreement done by the student. Determination of the actual grade comes from the advisor meeting with the job supervisor and student and grading through readings, logs, or term papers that are related to the job. It is also up to the supervisor to evaluate the work.

Once someone becomes a participant in the co-op ed program, he or she is committed to the program for at least one semester. But should unusual problems occur, they will be handled through the co-op staff.

The Co-op office, now located in Life Hall, will be moving to the new section of the Student Center. Lazarus said she is looking forward to the move. "It will make us more visible to more students."

Shuttle problem

Due to mechanical and personnel problems, the campus' third shuttlebus has been running inconsistently since it began operating nearly one week ago. "I'm not pleased with the way the buses are running" said SGA Vice President Phil Karali.

Hopefully by the end of this week all the buses will be running promptly, Karali said.

Both Dr. Minninberg, vice president for administration and finance and Peter Macagne, assistant to the Vice-President for administration and finance, are aware of the shuttlebus problem and are doing as much as possible to alleviate it. Dr. Minninberg is examining the possibility of purchasing 2 to 4 larger buses which can accommodate more students. According to Minninberg, these buses would either replace or supplement the old buses.

Peter Macagne is now waiting for a price quote from the bus company. "By this week we should have their dollar value and be able to see if the idea is a feasible one," said Macagne. Dr. Minninberg stressed that these decisions take time and involve many other elements. For example, if the larger buses are purchased, the bus garage will have to undergo construction so that the new buses will fit. The purchasing of diesel buses was also considered, but difficult servicing ruled them out.

Dr. Minninberg said that it would be an unwise investment to have a sidewalk built along Clove Road since that road will be widened in two years. He added that construction of a ramp-way has been approved, connecting the Clove Road parking lot up to the dirt lots, and meet where the present sidewalk begins.

however, Barnes was "unhappy with Chi Alpha's beliefs," and had a personal grudge against them "based on no grounds except he was unhappy his girlfriend wouldn't go out with him."

Addressing their prior problem of being a class three affiliated with a national organization, Siegler stated that they were asking to be chartered as a class four, which is legally allowed to be nationally affiliated. He also pointed out that a faculty member had been found to advise the group, but later added that Espamer is still one of the groups advisors.

The bill passed the constitutional review committee last Thursday by a vote of three to zero. Joanné Lih, chairman of the constitutional review committee and president pro-tempore of the legislature, explained that the committee's job was to check the legality of the constitution, not the validity of the organization.

A question was raised as to whether or not Chi Alpha was duplicating the services of the Intersarsity Christian Fellowship, another born again Christian group chartered by the SGA. Seigler argued that the two organizations were of "different beliefs" and not a duplication of programming.

Chi Alpha had been a class organization for six years before it lost its charter, according to the bill's author, Linda LaManna. After the group lost its charter, they made an unsuccessful attempt in January to regain it. SGA statutes prevent a failed bill from being brought up again in the same academic year if it is substantially the same as the first bill.

Some of the benefits the group would have gained if they had received a charter include free meeting space in the Student Center, coverage in the yearbook, and SGA ad rates in the newspaper. The SGA would also have been legally responsible for the group.

According to Siegler, the group will continue to function on campus "despite opposition and misinterpretations."

SGA News

By Georgette Georgiadis

Much of the SGA meeting held yesterday evolved around Chi Alpha's attempt to regain a class four charter. Chi Alpha members stated that they wanted a charter to more easily obtain regular meeting space and have more activities. The organization has applied twice for a charter since losing their charter last fall.

Freshman legislators were elected. Robert Burdrecki, Carolyn Bush, Nancy Shoemaker, John Lo Basso, and Angel Ramos defeated 11 opponents.

Sonjui Lal, SGA president, reported that President David W.D. Dickson and his cabinet voted to eliminate the practice of adding courses late. Lal urged an investigation by the legislature and received a unanimous consensus vote to ask Roland Garrett, vice president of academic affairs, to speak to the legislature on this subject at next week's meeting.

Lal also reported that the New Jersey Student Association (NJSA) is alive again. She and representatives from seven other colleges voted to accept NJSA's corporate status.

Phil Anter, vice president of welfare and internal affairs and representative to the all college parking committee, reported that considerations are underway to change the parking lots opposite Partridge Hall to visitor parking lots, with a possible additional parking fee. Another alternative is to raise decal prices from $10 to $15.

A complaint was raised about the Clove Rd. parking lot lights being turned off at 11 p.m. It was suggested to discover if the lights can remain on until at least 1 a.m.

Stewart Linder, the attorney general, announced that in order for a group to be chartered it has to be posted by Mondays at 5 p.m., five days before the vote will be taken.

On Mon., Sept. 28 through Sat., Oct. 3, the SGA and the music and fine arts departments will sponsor Bulgarian Week in celebration of Bulgaria's 1300th anniversary. There will be composers from Bulgaria, music, dance, and other cultural exhibitions, including nightly concerts. MSC will be the first college to sponsor such an event.

On October fifth, the Spanish club will be sponsoring a trip to see a Broadway play. The charge is two dollars for SGA fee paying members.

Lal brings NJSA to life

Under the leadership of Sonjui Lal, SGA president, and Frank Colaluca, president of the Jersey City State College (JCSC) SGA, the dormant New Jersey Student Association (NJSA) has been revived.

The organization was begun in 1974 by Sam Crane, a former SGA president, in conjunction with the seven other state colleges, Rutgers and New Jersey Institute of Technology. It's original purpose was to organize N.J. students into a strong lobbying group in Trenton to protect our interests in higher education.

The goals of the organization were superb, but over the years internal bickering caused NJSA's demise. MSC pulled out of the organization two years ago, citing inefficiency and lack of productivity. Disagreements also arose over the variance in fees from college to college.

Lal has done an excellent job in pulling most of the former members of NJSA back into the organization, and we fully expect her to succeed in getting the remaining five colleges involved.

She and Colaluca have both worked to reorganize a truly ineffectual organization, and their decision to accept NJSA's current status until it can be reworked at a leadership conference in the near future is a good one. They recognize the need for change and have persuaded the other colleges that NJSA must be changed.

A student lobbying organization is desperately needed in this state. Trenton politicians have ignored us for years for the simple reason that less than a quarter of the 18-25 age group vote. A statewide effort by students of N.J. state colleges and universities can change all of that. We need to stand up and show Trenton that we will no longer accept tuition increases passively; that we will not stand by when the higher education budget is cut; that from now on we will demand our rights.

Let us urge students once again to register and vote in this upcoming election. Now more than ever before, we need to show the legislators that we can be a force in N.J. politics.

Lal has done an excellent job trying to breathe new life into a formerly useless organization. Let's make sure that we give her all the help and support she needs to keep it going.

Register now. And vote in November.

I'm prepared. I've got binoculars, grenades, and a flare gun! Now I'm gonna try to get to my car.

GROGAN

On Second Thought/Meryl Yourish

Situation normal: all screwed up

I love new semesters. Especially the fall semester. Every year, the people who run this college prove again and again that wonderful saying is true: the more things change, the more they stay the same.

We won't mention parking. There's nothing I can possibly say that hasn't already been said, expletives included. Let it just be assumed that MSC has once again proven you can put a camel through the eye of a needle—as long as the camel is trying to park a car in the Quarry.

Shuttle buses, now—there's a new twist we can discuss. In past years, I believe, a raging fad on college campuses was seeing how many students you could fit in a phone booth. We have surpassed that silly fad. Phone booths don't move. No adventure. Students at MSC have discovered the vicarious pleasures of riding overcrowded shuttle buses trundling down the wonderfully steep roads of the campus at breathtaking, rib crushing speed. And it's free! That's almost as much fun as falling off the rollercoaster at Great Adventure.

The official record stands at 35 bodies in one 18 person capacity shuttle bus, but unofficial reports put it as high as 52. One wild eyed student came to the newspaper declaring that he had just gotten off a bus containing 76 students, but we didn't quite believe him. He was a freshman, and he wouldn't tell us whether or not he passed his Basic Skills requirement, nor would he consent to the simple test of telling us how many "i's" there are in "Mississippi."

The Quarry and Fields Project, the Student Center Annex, and the new dorm are all behind schedule.

So what else is new?

Those of you who really thought you'd be living in Blanton Hall this September are obviously still living under the assumption that the Tooth Fairy leaves money under your pillow in exchange for the tooth you lost in that bar fight; the streets of California are paved with marijuana; Ronald Reagan know what he's doing, and colleges were created for students.

Don't be ridiculous. Everyone knows that it's really the Tooth Gremlin.

Meanwhile, back in the Quarry:

Just thought I'd see if you were awake.

There's a wonderful example of bureaucracy in the explanation as to why there are no sidewalks on Clove Rd.

It's a county road, you see, and they're going to widen it in the next century or so. Therefore, putting sidewalks down for the convenience of students trying to run the gauntlet of flying cars, trucks, buses, and other students would be a waste of money.

I can understand that. We're all old enough to cross the street without Mommy and Daddy now, anyway. Well, most of us are.

What I can't understand is why they planted trees alongside the road. It stands to reason that if a sidewalk is going to be torn up, then trees aren't going to get special preference and have a road built around them.

That's really cruel, you know. Here they are, sweet little innocent trees, all they want to do is grow in peace, and two years from now Essex County is going to murder them in cold sap. For shame!

Oh, well. The more things change, the more they stay the same.

Pride Bowl more than just pride

By David W.D. Dickson

Last year an enthusiastic group of students launched a campaign designed to encourage all of us to express our pride and positive feelings about our college. The slogan of that campaign, Montclair State College, We're Talking Proud, was proclaimed across the campus on buttons and banners. It did us good to be reminded that there are many reasons to be proud of MSC.

On Saturday, October 24 we will have an opportunity to show our pride, when the MSC Football Team faces Central Connecticut State in the Third Annual Pride Bowl. In previous years Seton Hall represented the Home Team facing Cheyney State College. MSC will be competing as the Home Team in this prestigious charity event played for the benefit of Project Pride, Inc.

Project Pride is a voluntary non-profit organization dedicated to helping the people of Newark and rebuilding pride in that city. Their many worthy programs cross all age and ethnic boundaries. They provide remedial reading and math programs and bilingual education classes for youngsters and adults. They have provided scholarships for college-bound Newark high school seniors, organized a volunteer Clean Streets Program and sponsored a variety of educational and cultural events.

Project Pride has done all of this and much more using only the funds raised through the Pride Bowl.

MSC is proud to be a part of this effort by facing one of this season's toughest opponents in the Third Annual Pride Bowl. But sending our team in to represent us will not be enough.

Throughout the years, we at MSC have recognized that we have a commitment to the people of the City of Newark. In the early 60's through our involvement with programs like Project TRY and the Teacher Corps, we played a major role in increasing educational opportunity in New Jersey's urban centers.

Today through the Thinking Skills in Teaching and Learning (Project T.H.I.S.T.L.E.) MSC is actively involved in helping teachers in the Newark high schools improve the thinking skills of their college-bound students. Other members of our faculty are developing Vocational Education Programs with the Newark School System through a grant from the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration. Our biology faculty is working on water pollution problems in the Newark Bay.

The Pride Bowl presents us with a unique opportunity to express our pride in ourselves and show our willingness and ability to help our neighbors.

I am calling on our students, our faculty and administration, and our alumni, to support our team by being with them at School Stadium in Newark on October 24. Throughout the coming weeks tickets will be available on campus and at the ticket booth at all home games. Plans are underway to make this day one of the most exciting and enjoyable days in MSC history. I hope I can count on all of you to join us.

This is our opportunity to prove to ourselves and others that Pride in MSC is a lot more than talk.

David W.D. Dickson is President of MSC.

Catholic Critiques

By Ken Herbster

Within the past few days I received, among others, the following materials in the mail:

1. A brochure from the Riverside Church Disarmament Program announcing a conference to be held Nov. 15-16 entitled The Arms Race and Us, aimed at generating support for a reversal of the arms race.

2. A letter, Congressional petition on moral issues, and fund appeal from the Rev. Jerry Falwell of Moral Majority, asking in part for pressure to be applied on Congress to continue and increase our military strength so our 'grand old flag...doesn't go down the drain'; and

3. A letter and fund appeal from Clergy And Laity Concerned, an organization that has been prodding the religious conscience of the US for the past fifteen years, first with the war in Vietnam, then the B-1 bomber, and more recently, the MX missile system, the nuclear arms race and human rights violations.

They have my name on their lists; they want my support, my money, my allegiance. Send telegrams! Write letters! Forward this petition to your congressperson! March! Demonstrate! Come to this conference! We are at a crisis!

But I am too busy and I want them to leave me alone. I have books to read, papers to write, homilies to prepare, meetings to attend, people to see, liturgies to plan, etc. I am a campus minister, a priest, a son, a friend, a counselor, and none of these roles have anything to do with the arms race, MX missiles running around the desert on trolley cars, bombers or tanks, SALT talks to be or not to be, guns or butter. If I don't pitch the appeal, I put it on the 'get to it when I have time' pile and with luck, the 'crisis' will have passed when next I dig into the stack.

But then there was the Protestant Clergyman who reflected on Hitler's Nazi Germany: when they came for the Jews, I did not protest because I was not a Jew; it did not affect me. They came for the Communists and I did not protest because I was not a Communist. They came for the Catholics and I did not protest because I was not a Catholic. Then they came for me - and there was no one left to protest.

So, back to the stack. Read. Question. Make choices. Act, and then pray.

Ken Herbster is the campus minister.

Rocky road to MSC

by Rick Zweibel

Oh, the pain of driving over that bumpy, gravelly, rocky, dirty road. I wish someone would fix the road behind the new Blanton Hall. Every day I come to school I face a long line of cars struggling to get over what appears to be the back roads to Morocco. The bumps and jolts I face driving over that area are enough to rattle anyone's bones. Some of the ditches and dips in the road must be a foot deep. One day I went over a ditch that I could have sworn broke the front axle of my car. Then, of course, there is plenty of dust that kicks up that will surely put a fine finish on your car. And so far I have only talked about what happens on dry days. Wait until it rains! Then there is the thrill of giving your car a mudbath. Of course, I don't need to tell you what it's like to walk in this muck--it's bad enough driving in it.

My question is, "Why doesn't somebody do something about this horrendous road behind Blanton Hall?" After all, we're only talking about 50 feet or so of road. You know it's funny. I notice those wonderful construction workers were quick to pave a road behind Blanton Hall that is just beyond the entrance to the Quarry. Of course, hardly anyone drives on that road. But nobody bothers paving the important part of the road--the part where thousands of cars trample over daily. I mean it's ridiculous. If only someone had paved the road in time for the start of school, we all would have had a nice comfortable ride to the parking lot. Instead, it now looks like it will be a rocky road to MSC for awhile.

Rick Zweibel is a staff writer for the Montclarion.

Student makes plea for parking solution

To the editor:

I looked at my clock one Sunday evening, and two things came to my mind. One was the fact that the weekend was over. The second fact was that I would have school on Monday. This is where the horror story begins.

If you're a commuting student at MSC, I guess you can identify with the following nightmare. The fact of the matter is, that for the past two weeks of this semester, the commuting student has faced the horrors of the school selling too many parking stickers, and not having the parking spaces for them.

Let me give you a typical day of parking at MSC. (This is to benefit those who are lucky enough to live on campus.) On Monday, my first class is at 9 a.m. In order for me to get a parking space within the campus (and I'm not talking about parking at Clove Road), I have to get to school at least a half hour earlier than my class meets. I'm not complaining about this. What bothers me the most is the craziness that surrounds the commuter if that individual is late. Let me explain the hazards. First is the new police officers who were hired to direct traffic. If one was to watch these people at work, I'm afraid to see what they do when there is more than ten cars or so coming at them. Second, is the fear that your car might get a ticket. On days when the traffic is light, and the school needs some money to pay for one of their alumni dinners, the source of income is the commuter. There are days when I see tickets on a car for not parking in-between the white lines because the car next to him/her is not parked in-between the white lines. Crazy isn't it? Hold on, there is more.

Let me tell you about Tuesday when I have a class at 11 a.m. I arrive at school at 10:20 a.m. or so, and I'm forced to park at the Clove Road parking lot. Again I don't care about parking out there, but at least provide some services. Oh, I know that there is the shuttle bus. But as the shuttle bus comes down to pick up the other unfortunate people who took a late class that day, it is packed with people. The shuttle bus sign clearly says that it can hold a 22 passenger load. But, there are days when I see people packed together. It can be said that there are more than the 22 load maximum. God forbid if one of those buses gets into an accident. I would hate to hear of the horrors.

This letter to the editor is a plea. It is a plea to the administration and "Our SGA" to view the parking situation. If my memory serves correctly, last election there was a promise that there would be at least one more shuttle bus...Where is it? Excuse me, I also remember Blanton Hall was supposed to be completed. I'm sorry, I forgot I was talking to the MSC administration.

Just a footnote. I read in last week's Montclarion that a new device called the "boot" is going to be used on cars whose owners have three or more unpaid tickets. Well I have a suggestion to Chief Rich and the administration. Why don't they give themselves the "boot" and come down to the "pits" and see what's going on. Maybe they will realize why people are forced to park illegally.

Never just another night with Hunter

By Darrel Lippman

Underneath all those golden curly locks, and trademark bug-eyed shades lies a talented performer. Ian Hunter has come a long way since his Mott the Hoople days. Not that he wasn't popular back then, just that he and the band are a prominent influence on today's music scene.

Played a classic

To the surprise of the audience in Panzer Gym Sunday night, Hunter, sporting a black top hat and tails, played the David Bowie classic from those days, All the Young Dudes. People slung their arms around each other and swayed back and forth to the chanting beat of the song. That special extra number plus his recent songs kept the lively, following bigger than ever, and his songs as brilliantly written and interesting to the ear as the ones he has penned years ago.

All have fun

Unlike other bands, Hunter's group has as good a time onstage as he does. Mainly because most of Hunter's songs are group tunes with backing vocals, so each member can participate, not just play their instrument. Lead guitarist, and newcomer on the tour Robbie Martin did many little jigs of his own when a particular part of a song didn't call for his strumming. Tommy (Moon-dog) Mandel seemed to go into ecstasy each time he leaned on the keys, and the rest of the band showed unyielding enthusiasm.

The audience's participation

Hunter's stage presence is strong and flashy, his following bigger than ever, and his songs as brilliantly written and interesting to the ear as the ones he has penned years ago.

near sell-out crowd very happy, to say the least.

In the semester's first concert, the overall atmosphere was very professional, everything ran smoothly, and a good time was had by all. "I've been here since 9 am keeping people happy, catering to their every whim. Well, not every whim," said Maureen Baker, who is in charge of publicity. A big hand should be given to the members of Class I Concerts for a well staged show.

Shaking hands

To show his appreciation of the audience, at the end of the concert, Hunter scanned the front of the stage to shake as many hands as he possibly could. That could be a risky thing for any performer to do, especially in a different place. But nobody tugged or was unnecessarily rough. They merely showed their thanks for Hunter being so thankful.

Hunter's stage presence is strong and flashy, his came to its peak when Hunter switched to the piano for Just Another Night (from the big-selling You're Never Alone With a Schizophrenic Lp). Towards the end of the song, he came to the abutment at the front of the stage to have some fun with the now wildly cheering and standing crowd. With his band clapping to the beat, Hunter thrust the mike from the right side of the audience who screamed the lyrics, "...just another night...", to the left side who followed with, "...on the other side...", then vice versa. "Louder!" he pleaded, as he returned to the piano.

Gun Control

With every album, Hunter has a new twist for the public. On the latest Short Back 'n Sides album, Hunter speaks out on gun control with a song of the same title. Gun Control is a vintage Ian Hunter song--catchy hooks, witty in the sense that it keeps the listener laughing, but at the same time delivers the message that Hunter wants to get across.

He performed other favorites, mostly from his previous two albums, the double live Welcome to the Club, and You're Never Alone With a Schizophrenic, including Cleveland Rocks, Standin' in My Light, and the new Lisa Loves Rock 'n Roll,

(which he labeled as "probably the stupidest song I ever wrote.") and Central Park and West ("...for that city not too far from here," he said.)

The audience was anticipating one of Hunter's most successful singles, "We Gotta Get Out Of Here" but waited in vain. A fourth encore wouldn't have brought the song from the band. The night before on a recently taped Don Kirshner's Rock Concert, Hunter had the female vocalist, who in that song is known for telling him "...whatta' ya wanna stay home and watch the super bowl?" with him on the show. She never came onstage Sunday, apparently not present.

One thing is for sure, it is never "just another night" when Ian Hunter stages a concert.

Any Trouble

Opening for Ian Hunter was Any Trouble from Manchester England. They played mostly fast pop tunes, many from their new Wheels in Motion album. They executed beautifully and are as tight a unit from England you can find. Every note was sharp and exact. They played flawlessly together. Any Trouble does have an unlikely looking leader in Clive Gregson. He sports long sideburns, glasses, his hair thinning on the top and appears to be significantly older than the rest of the band. He does, however, have a strong, distinct voice the likes of Elvis Costello's.

Any Trouble opened with one of their biggest singles, The Hurt, slowing the tempo considerably. They should have stuck to the original faster version.

'Body Heat'

Torrid but lazily plotted thriller

By Tom Masullo

In a stifling Florida coastal town an unusually scorching heat wave is taking place; fires flare in the evening sky, sweat flows from pores like lava out of a volcano and amiable, two-bit lawyer Ned Racine becomes entangled in an explosive affair which quite obviously will lead to murder.

The film is the Ladd Company's recently released melodrama Body Heat and for true aficionados it will provide two hours of semi-predictable, yet gloriously lurid movie entertainment.

Body Heat is a throwback in style to the classic film noir productions of the 1940's; Double Indemnity and the original Lana Turner-John Garfield version of The Postman Always Rings Twice were most certainly its inspiration.

However, back in those days, censorship problems diluted much of the story's sexual impact. Body Heat gets and takes full advantage of the 1980's permissiveness, treating viewers to some of the gamiest sex scenes ever filmed for an R-rated movie. Because of this, it's safe to assume success at the box office will be no sweat.

Written and directed by Lawrence Kasdan (better known for his co-writing stints on The Empire Strikes Back and Raiders of the Lost Ark)

Body Heat is a startling change of pace for the usually adventure-minded Kasdan. He evidently wanted audiences to experience this film, not merely watch it. Seldom has there been a major motion picture with such an overtly erotic atmosphere. The plot is thinly strung together by a series of scenes radiating passion and suspense, and one can practically see the humidity hanging in the air as if it was a member of the cast.

William (Altered States) Hurt is properly lust driven as the hapless Ned Racine; when he gets his first glimpse of the luscious but married Matty Walker walking up an aisle at an outdoor concert, he becomes obsessed with the prospect of making it with her (which doesn't take long, folks). They become involved in a physical relationship that's so hot, they need ice cubes in the bathtub just to cool down.

As time passes it becomes quite apparent that in order for them to live happily ever after (which translated for them, means rich, and in bed) they must kill Matty's wealthy, middle-aged husband (extremely well-played by Richard Crenna). It seems Matty signed a pre-nuptial agreement excluding her from any of hubby's fortune if she divorces him - what else are a poor girl and her lover to do?

Newcomer Kathleen Turner is an eye-opener as Matty Walker. Giving a performance in which she's called upon to flare her nostrils alot, Turner remains sultry and intriguing. When she tells Hurt in a bar that her "temperature always runs a little high" - you believe it.

In all honesty though, nothing much happens here in the way of character development and what narrative flow there is, is generated by waiting to see our stars rip off their clothes again and go wild.

Yet, the film holds your attention throughout thanks to the intense style Kasdan has employed in telling his story. Seemingly minor touches like Matty's wind chimes and Ned's shuttered, 1940's style office add immeasurably to the film's evocative mode.

The bluesy, insinuating John Barry background music, and Richard Kline's lush cinematography also make major contributions to the film's appeal.

In all, Body Heat is a torrid, if lazily plotted thriller. Its unique texture and commendable use of the film medium make it a winner.

Like they say, "It's not what you do...It's how you do it."

'Werewolf' bloody good fun

There may be a bad moon rising for poor David Naughton, star howler in Universal Picture's, An American Werewolf in London. However, for the rest of us, there's a ripping good time waiting to be had at the movies.

An American Werewolf in London is possibly the funniest, sickest, and most wildly entertaining in the recent deluge of horror flicks. It is consistently humorous, yet its outrageous situations and comical lines never interfere when it's time for the scares.

Director John Landis, famed for his crazed handling of Animal House and The Blues Brothers, has said he's always wanted to make an A-budget horror film; originally starting his career with an aptly named Grade Z quickie called Schlock, he has, thanks to the success of his other films, been able to make his dream come true. You can almost sense the fun he had in making this movie in every scene.

The basic plot is from the classic, Man gets bitten by a werewolf-The moon is full-School of Film-making. However, thanks to Landis' off-the-wall screenplay, a totally ingratiating cast, and some near-brilliant use of music (you'll never be able to listen to "Blue Moon" with a straight face again!), the movie clicks from beginning to end.

David Naughton, better known for extolling the merits of being a "Pepper" on TV's Dr. Pepper commercials, is excellent as our All-American hero, David (clever use of names, what!). While on vacation, David and his friend Jack (scathingly played by Griffin Dunne) are attacked on the English moors by what some ominous folks in a tavern have led them to believe is a werewolf.

Before you can say Lawrence Talbot, Jack is dead, and David, recuperating in a London hospital, can't believe what is happening to him. Jenny Agutter, playing a lovely British nurse tries to comfort him. They fall in love, and when he's finally discharged from the hospital (a couple of days before the FULL MOON) she takes him home to her flat to help him clear his mind of all the nonsense that bedevils it.

Meanwhile, good old Jack's corpse begins to reappear in various stages of decay, urging David to kill himself before the next full moon, thereby breaking the curse that is keeping Jack from going to his final resting place. Besides, as Jack tells David, it would probably be a real drag being a werewolf and have to kill people!

Not giving too much away, all that can be said is what follows is a zany, commendable hybrid of 1930's cliché-style horror and 1980's satiric-style wit, topped by a fantastically inventive special effects sequence, changing man to beast, that'll have you cheering.

An American Werewolf in London is the kind of movie that just might gain the horror film back its respectability. It may disappoint some of the more avid fans of the horror genre. You know, the cultists who take their monsters VERY seriously and don't like to see whimsy injected into their terror.

However, for us average moviegoers An American Werewolf in London is a bloody good show.

I suspect even Lon Chaney Jr. would have approved.

AAAaaaOOooooow!!

The MSC's Men's Cross Country team defeated Stockton State College (SSC) by a score of 25-32 on Saturday. The team took first, fourth, fifth, seventh and eighth in scoring their top five. Top runners in the race were Dan Wiggins (1st) in 26:01, Jeff Matalenas (4th) in 26:30 and Ken Anderson (5th). Scoring for SSC were Scott Ellis and Bob Back, second and third respectively. The course was five miles long.

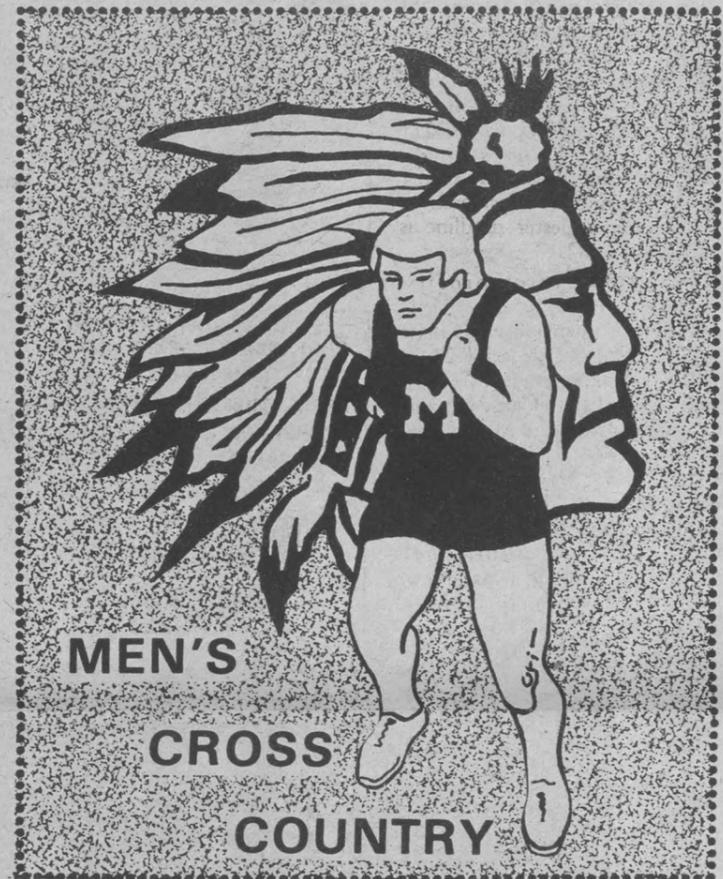

Few people know that Cross Country is definitely not a one season sport. To be competitive in Cross Country on any level, takes years of training and hard work. Many miles have been run during the heat of the summer and on snowy winter days. Much of the team during this summer trained and raced at various road races in New Jersey, Pennsylvania, and New York. Their skinny bodies could usually be seen at such races as the Asbury Park 10K Classic, New York City and Philadelphia Pepsi Series races, and the Belmar 5 Miler.

Next Saturday, the team will again be on the road to challenge Glassboro State College (GSC). GSC, an East Coast powerhouse, has qualified for the Division III Nationals for the past five years. Their top two runners are Division III aces. Derrick Adamson is the 1980 3000 meter steeplechase National Champ and Greg Rapp placed third in the 1981 National Championships in the 5000 meter run.

The Montclair State Harriers have not broken into Glassboro's top seven in four years, but with the quality of this year's team, they look to seriously challenge that domination. The team knows exactly what they're up against and they're sure that next week's performances will improve greatly. Good Luck Team!

Indians crush ESSC, 30-3

Defense impressive once again

The MSC football team put on another offensive show as they trounced Pennsylvania rival East Stroudsburg State College (ESSC), 30-3 last Saturday. Sophomore quarterback Mark Casale and kicker Dan Deneher supplied the offense needed to lead the Indians to their second straight victory.

Deneher connected on three field goals of 45, 37, and 27 yards to help MSC build a 16-0 halftime lead. Casale completed 16 of 22 passes for 228 yards including a 55 yard scoring throw to Terry Porter in the final period. Porter, a wide receiver, grabbed six aerials for 122 yards.

Casale also scored on a one yard TD plunge in the first period to cap a 76 yard MSC drive. Dennis Senerchia led the advance with a 27 yard run.

The defensive unit played another strong game by holding ESSC to 126 total yards. The Indians held the Warriors to just 36 yards rushing while picking off two passes. One interception by defensive back Tim O'Donnell was converted into an MSC TD.

ESSC got its only points late in the game when Scott Taylor kicked a 39 yard field goal to avert the shutout.

Casale, with his 16 of 22 for 228 yards, was named offensive player of the week. On the defensive side, Vinnie DeMarinis won honors with 16 tackles. Deneher took the special teams award with his three field goals and two extra points. He also averaged 57.5 yards per kickoff.

The Indians will come home to face Kean College this Saturday night at Sprague Field. Game time is 8 pm.

Tribe loses in 2 OT, 1-0

By Joann Skehan

Last Friday the MSC Soccer team opened their season with a 1-0 loss to Mercy College. The game, which went into two ten minute overtimes, was lost when Mercy's Mike Humphries headed a shot past MSC's Eric Nelson. Paul Wilson made the assist. The goal was scored five minutes into the first ten minute overtime.

The game was a hard fought battle and Montclair's defense was superb. Assistant coach Ken Kolich was proud of his team. "The defense really came through, but our inexperience showed," stated Kolich after the game. The team, which has only been working together since the beginning of September, showed a great deal of talent and promise for the future. It looks like all the hard work coach Phil Santiago put into recruiting new players for this season is going to pay off.

Two new starters for the Indians played a fantastic game. "Eric Nelson and Doug Stine played the best game I've ever seen them play," said assistant coach Kolich. It was just that type of game where whoever scored first would win it." Unfortunately it was Mercy College who scored the first and only goal. Eric Nelson, MSC's goal keeper, put on a one man show with his numerous terrific saves.

There are only six returning players from last year's squad, they are Thomas Connors, Paul Delbo, Gary Holt, Alvaro Tarrago, Rich Ciullo, and Nick Petroski. New to this year's team are Phill Karali, Alex Basurco, Richard Emmel, Benny Enback, Eric Nelson, Jose Encarnacion, Robert Maguire, Douglas Stine, Pat Judge and Jerry Stampiglia.
