Smoking policy passed

By Stephen McLean

Recently enacted N.J. state legislation may lead to curtailment of smoking here at MSC. The legislation, which was signed into law on December 3, 1981, calls for new smoking restrictions in public places.

According to Sandy Schlanger, SGA treasurer, the new legislation may lead to curtailment of smoking here at MSC.

English tutors needed

If you are a native English speaker and have an hour to spare on either Saturday or Sunday, your help is sorely needed by students of English as a second language in the Weekend College.

The English Conversation Tutoring Project, under the auspices of the Office of IntraCollegiate Academic Programs, is seeking volunteers to assist non-native English speaking students in English conversation practice and/or in class assignments.

Established over two years ago, the Project currently has 20 volunteers from the surrounding community who assist tutors ESOL students in the Weekend College.

No foreign language is required of volunteers nor do they have to be English majors. Since ESOL students' greatest need is practice in oral English, volunteers are expected to initiate conversation, provide oral practice, and assist in vocabulary building, explain common idioms, and exchange cultural information.

For more information about the English Conversation Tutoring Project, call Dr. Alicia Savage, assistant director, IntraCollegiate Academic Programs, at 893-4431, or see in person in Room 306, College Hall.

Writing seminar offered

On Wednesday, March 24, from 2 pm to 4 pm in the Student Center Ballrooms, a seminar on feature writing will be presented by the English department's Journalism director, IntraCollegiate Tutoring Project, under the auspices of the Office of IntraCollegiate Academic Programs, is seeking volunteers to assist non-native English speaking students in English conversation practice and/or in class assignments.

The writing seminar will be given by a committee composed of the dean of students, a member of the board of the College Development Fund, and the current president of the Senate Fraternity, Phi Alpha Psi. The fellowship will be awarded regardless of race, ethnic origin, or sex.

Qualified applicants should send their letters to the Office of College Development Funds, at College Hall, room 321, by April 1. The application should also include a letter of recommendation by a faculty member in the applicant's discipline.

The Harold C. Bohn Fellowship was established in May 1970, when Bohn retired from the English department at MSC. According to Jesse Young, assistant to the vice-president for academic affairs, the fund was started with the profits earned from a play that was produced by the Senate Fraternity, Phi Alpha Psi.

Award to be given out

The Harold C. Bohn Fellowship, a $300 award, will be given this year to an MSC student who shows promise in any academic discipline and presents a bonafide plan for graduate study.

The student need not conduct his graduate study at MSC, but is eligible to obtain his degree at any accredited institution of higher learning.

The recipient will be chosen by a committee composed of the dean of students, a member of the board of the College Development Fund, and the current president of the Senate Fraternity, Phi Alpha Psi. The fellowship will be awarded regardless of race, ethnic origin, or sex.

The club's executive committee is comprised of the following students: Jeanette Torres, president, Cynthia Anderson, vice-president, Ivette Sotomayor, secretary, and Wayne Adams, treasurer. The advisor is Dr. A.M. Di Lorenzo, a professor in MSC's Biology department.

Police react to decision

By Robert M. Pignatello

Jayne Rich, chief of Campus Police, stressed "business as usual" as she assessed the effects of last week's Board of Trustees decision which denied the arming of Campus Police. Rich said, "I am disappointed because the need is there, but there will not be any decrease in service by the Campus Police." Rich said she is, however, worried about morale on the force where officers felt they needed guns because they are part of a police officer's equipment. Some officers have left the force and others, she said, have shown an interest to transfer to other state institutions or municipalities.

Concerned Citizens for Equality at Montclair (CCEM), the group with which Herbert had a signature affiliation up until last October, threatened MSC with a lawsuit if more minority faculty were not hired. The assistant attorney general then recommended that Herbert be transferred out of the office because her presence would give her access to possibly relevant information used in any litigation.

Dickson emphasized that "the Affirmative Action office does not have any authority to hire faculty. That is done by the existing faculty members of particular department looking to fill an open position. The Affirmative Action office tries to interpret laws, uphold fairness and assist departments in the hiring process." Dickson described some of the actions of CCEM as "injurious" to the office's ability to function efficiently.

proper legal channels available to her if she feels such an action is warranted." Dickson said Herbert's transfer was a "fair and just thing" because reassignment is a prerogative of the supervisor. "All of her benefits and pay have been maintained; she hasn't been demoted, just transferred."

violating the new policy may be issued a summons or warrant. The legislation leaves the power to act upon violators in the state and local Board of Health.

Jayne Rich, chief of campus police, said that she is currently in Trenton as to whether the campus police will also be given this power, and if they will continue to provide the "excellent security that they have provided in the past."

Rich said officers are perceived as non-police, because they don't carry guns and because they are perceived this way, they are not given weapons. Rich said the decision was not an issue of "guns on campus." "If guns don't deter crime," she asked, "why are the Montclair Police hired for certain tasks on campus?" Rich felt the decision was made on emotion and that "people don't conceptualize us as police officers!"

anyone. We're here to protect people. But if we can't protect ourselves how can we protect anyone else? We are frustrated," he added, "but we are going to do our job."

Calling the decision an "an open invitation to criminals," Rich said she would encourage officers to be extra careful and to make more calls for back-ups to outside police. Rich added that municipalities are already understaffed.

College administrators had a more-contented reaction to the decision. Dr. David W.D. Dickson, president of MSC, said, "It was a difficult decision, but one we have to live with," adding that, he felt "security on campus will not suffer because of it." Dr. Jean Armstrong, dean of student affairs, said, "It was the correct decision", and although she appreciates the disappointment of the campus police she hopes
Night of a 1,000 stars

By Rick Zweibel
The show has been running for millions of years, with plenty of stars to its credit. Of course, this is not a Broadway show. It is the show in the sky, and it can be seen every clear night.

Every clear Thursday night, 8 through 9:30 p.m., in front of Richardson Hall, one can get a closer look at the stars in the sky by using a powerful, 7-inch wide telescope from the physics-geoscience department.

The event, officially known as Public Telescope Night, has been going on for about ten years. Run by Dr. Mary West, associate professor of physics and an instructor of two levels physics major, explained what things happen up there explain how things happen down here on earth.

Mike Seilora, a sophomore physics major, explained what motivates him to study the heavens. He remarked, "How things that happen up there explain how things happen down here on earth."

Karen Emmett, a senior physics major, has been coming to Public Telescope Nights for a year.

West made a comment that might explain why people enjoy looking at the celestial wonders of the sky. She stated, "The space program has opened up new windows on the sky."

Public Telescope Nights are free and open to anyone. According to West, in April and May, the planets Mars, Saturn, and Jupiter will be visible. Also, the moon will be well placed for observation on April 1 and 29, and on May 6.

The Student Government Association (SGA) meeting began last night with Sonjui Lai's president's report. Lai told the legislature that Stockton State College has set up a Student Government, making student power in the state even stronger.

Lai reported next that Governor Tom Kean has proposed to raise state college tuition fees by 10%, in addition to President Reagan's proposed cuts in education. In view of this, the New Jersey Student Association (NJSA) called an emergency meeting to set up various actions that the students could take to protest these issues.

The NJSA decided to have a phone campaign on March 25, where students could call their assemblymen in Trenton and their Senators in Washington to state their views and get some backing on combating these issues facing education.

Lai said an information sheet was sent to all newspapers on college campuses for a front page spread in order to inform students on these issues.

On March 28, all students of state college campuses were invited to attend a meeting with the Chancellor of Education and assistants of the Equal Opportunity Fund (EOF) to discuss the tuition increases and educational curbs and their effects on students. This meeting will take place in the Labor and Management building in New Brunswick.

At the same location on March 27, the SGA has been invited to attend local American Federation of Teachers (AFT) leadership conference on lobbying. The AFT has expressed a great interest in linking up with the SGA.

Lai said, two issues were decided upon by the Board of Trustees. Concerning the handgun issue, a decision was passed to deny the campus police arms. The board also decided to vote on the goal statement some time in April. After reading all the correspondence, the board has decided to equalize the undergraduate program between the Liberal Arts and Professional Studies. A board member suggested that the goal statement be titled "The Statement on Undergraduate Program" and that an annual report be submitted.

Juniors earn over $1000 a month

Interested in Math, Physics, or Engineering? Then you could earn as much as $1000 a month in the Navy's NUPOC-Collegiate Program (NUPOC is short for Nuclear Propulsion Officer Candidate).

If you qualify, you'll get one year of graduate level education. Education that would cost thousands in civilian life, but in the Navy we pay you. And you'll receive a $3000 bonus upon entry into the program.

It isn't easy. But those who make it find themselves in one of the most elite engineering training programs anywhere. With unequalled hands-on responsibility and a salary in four years of $40,000.

"Because I’m Black/Hispanic, all I need is a BS/BA degree and I’ll have no problem getting a job."

"There is no way I’ll be successful in that career area because I don’t see any other Blacks/Hispanics there."

"In order to ‘make it’, I have to come to like ‘the Man’ and give up elements of my culture that are important to me."

"Counseling means that I have some type of serious (psychiatric) problem—I don’t want to get involved in that kind of activity, and counseling really doesn’t relate to job-seeking or career planning anyway."

A lot of these statements are untrue. Minority students who agree with any of them need to re-evaluate their belief systems. Some of the reasons myths surface include the lack of information and experience in dealing with the university system, the stress and feelings of isolation that individuals can experience on campus, and the lack of motivation from positive role models in families or in the society at large.

What results from this myth-building is that misconceptions are created concerning school and the planning of careers. According to Pinkney, University of Nebraska-Lincoln, “misinformation results in misbeliefs becoming the system out of which minority students operate.”

One effective way of eliminating misconceptions is to obtain accurate information and experience firsthand in the world of work. Various resources are available in Career Services, Life Hall, which has career information and/or opportunities information for minorities. Directories such as Directory of Career Resources, Directory of Special Programs for Minority Group Members, and Minority Organizations: A National Directory, are excellent resources to get information on special organizations that serve minorities in the areas of career information, job placement, internships, and financial aid information. Magazines such as Black Collegian, Black Enterprise, and Hispanic Times are not only excellent resources for career information, but they also carry want ads for companies seeking minorities.

Another way to obtain accurate information is from employers themselves. A sample of Work Internship opportunities that occur frequently are “Minority Job Fairs” or “Career Expo’s” that are sponsored by companies or employment agencies such as Lendman Associates. Companies and Organizations such as Bell Laboratories and Travelers Insurance Company and Organizations such as New York Urban Corps usually provide summer internships for minority students.

Before erroneous belief-systems can be confronted and programs be creatively developed for minority students, the areas of need must be first identified. Consequently, Career Services plans to do a needs assessment of the career development of the minority students at MSC.

The goal is to obtain information concerning minority student needs as they relate to choosing a major, career decision making, and job seeking. This information will be used to plan programs to meet those needs. Questionnaires will be distributed before the spring recess. Minority students will be approached through the dorms, minority clubs, fraternities and sororities, and through organizations such as Black Student Cooperative Union (BSCU), Latin American Student Organization (LASO) and the Weekend College Association. In addition, questionnaires will be available in the EOF and Career Services Offices. Persons with questions about this undertaking should contact Janine Myatt, Career Services, Life Hall.

The Montclarion, Thurs., March 18, 1982 5.
By Rick Zweibel

On Monday, March 8, two males were involved in a fight on the third floor of Blanton Hall that resulted in one male spraying the other’s eyes with the chemical mace. The suspect fled the scene but was identified and charged with assault, although no arrest was made.

In another incident involving assault, two males were involved in a fight in front of the Student Center after one accused the other of throwing a bottle at him from a crowd of people. A female, who was the suspect’s girlfriend, tried to intervene, but was assaulted during the fight and had to be taken to the hospital for facial injuries.

Two burglaries, one of which resulted in theft, and a separate incident of theft occurred in the last week and a half. On Wednesday, March 10, at about 8 a.m., a female reported that a 35 mm camera, worth about $200, was stolen from her Clove Road Apartment.

Also on March 10, a female reported that her unlocked room in Blanton Hall was burglarized between 11 p.m. and midnight. Her room was sound disarrayed, but no damage was done, and no theft took place.

On Monday, March 8, between 6:15 and 7:15 p.m., a female had her brown leather handbag stolen from the cafeteria in Blanton Hall. In addition to her handbag, worth about $30, she also had a swimsuit, worth about $25, and a blow dryer, worth about $20, stolen.

Last Sunday, March 14, at about 9:35 p.m., an unidentified male caller stated that a bomb was in the Blanton Hall cafeteria. The building was evacuated and searched, but no bomb was found.

Finally, on Friday, March 12, at about 12:47 a.m., a dumpster by Panzer Gym was reported. The Montclair Fire Department was called, and they extinguished the fire.

Student apathy kills referendum

For the second time in two years a referendum to increase SGA fees from the current two dollars per credit to three dollars per credit went down to defeat. The referendum did not fail because students were against it, but rather because the majority of students did not take the time to voice their opinion.

It is sad that these 10,000 students, 90 percent of the student population, did not bother to vote, but it is even sadder that they appear not to have taken the time to consider the possible results of the referendum’s failure or the effect of their apathy on the rest of the college community.

Certainly a few students can use the excuse that they “didn’t have the time” or didn’t hear about the referendum until it was too late, but the vast majority have no such excuses.

Any student who used the Student Center cafeteria had to walk by the polling booth, but only 1,151 students could take five minutes of their time to vote. This total lack of interest and concern is made sadder still when one considers that approximately 100 students waited for several hours—on a voting day—to buy bids for the Spring Ball which is sponsored each year by the College Life Union Board, an organization funded through SGA fees.

It does not come as a surprise, however, that students show this type of “ask me what you can do for me, not what I can do for you” attitude. Concerts held on campus are routinely sold out and Class One Concerts is always in need of help to set the concerts up. The yearbook is always popular and a Concerts is always in need of staff members. Students read The Montclarion every week and yet it is always in need of staff members, the list could go on and on.

What then, can we infer from the referendum’s defeat? First, one cannot help but conclude that the majority of students at MSC are selfish and unthinking. Selfish because they are willing to accept the benefits of SGA programming without bearing any of the responsibility of providing them. Unthinking because they failed to consider the results of the failure of the referendum; the possible curtailment of programming.

We must also infer that if indeed programming is cut back, the students deserve the curtailment. Any constituency that fails to exercise its right to vote, its duty to vote, deserves any and all ill effects that result from the shirking of responsibility.

ERA needs support

By Lorraine Crist Leslie

Known to millions as Mona Kane and Nancy Grant on All My Children, Frances Heffin and Lisa Elkinsen were both present in Newark last Saturday. The occasion was the celebration of International Women’s Day, and the watchword of the day was solidarity.

The event began in Newark’s Military Park, where several hundred women and men gathered with banners supporting the Equal Rights Amendment (ERA) and criticising Reagan’s social service cuts, U.S. involvement in El Salvador, and the Human Life Amendment. To cries of “ERA Now!” the group paraded to Central High School.

The main focus of attention was the Equal Rights Amendment and its ratification deadline of June 30, 1982.

Time is running short for those who support ERA. Three more states must still vote to ratify it, and the validity of the present extension has come into question. Yet the speakers at the rally called for solidarity and perseverance. Georgia Kampf, from the United Auto Workers Women’s Program, said “We’ll be fighting the good fight for as long as it takes.”

There are those in government, business and the media who like to think the women’s movement is dead. They try to avoid facing how stubborn women have shown themselves to be in this century. The first International Women’s Day was held in 1908. The Equal Rights Amendment was first introduced to Congress in 1923. Helen Daniel, who attended Saturday’s rally was a suffragette back in the 20s and is still fighting for women’s rights.

After a long, hard struggle, we can’t stop now. Will ERA pass? Let’s reserve our judgement until June 30, and give it our full support now. When women received the right to vote, the tension and uncertainty lasted right up to the last possible minute. Thanks to the perseverance of our grandmothers, the first step was taken. It is up to us to complete the task.

There is still much that can be done. Ms. Heffin urged women to write letters, not only to their own elected officials, but also to legislators from other states. “Write to friends and relatives. We must still educate people on the necessity of ERA.”

Lisa Wilkinson read the proposed amendment to the audience. “Equality of rights under the law shall not be denied nor abridged by the United States or any state on account of sex.” “Who could argue with it?” she said. “This is simplicity itself.”

Rich requests retraction

To the editor:

Several items in the March 11, 1982 issue of The Montclarion give me great concern. First, your statements on page 3, “Although campus police were called, only one officer appeared inside the building. Jayne Rich, chief of campus police, joined the demonstration,” are both untrue. It would be unethical for any police officer on this campus to participate in a demonstration and certainly, I, as the chief law enforcement officer, must set an example of objectivity and impartiality. At no time was I a participant in the demonstration. Lieutenant Paige, officer William Johnson and I (three officers, not I) were present to maintain order. I saw no reason to bring a large body of officers to the scene of an orderly demonstration. We are not here to oppress, but to protect and serve.

Second, your front page story indicates that requests made by campus police have resulted in changes in the policies and status of this department. This is completely erroneous. Members of this department, which consists of fully trained and commissioned police officers, will continue to provide police service on this campus as long as they are so commissioned. Only if there is an administrative decision to de-commission the police will there be a reduction in the services offered.

Your editorial continues this misstatement of facts. Officers could not “refuse” to perform. They would be suspended for insubordination. If you will re-read the memo (with which, incidentally, I do not concur) you will see that officers have asked to be relieved of hazardous duties. No ultimatum was ever issued. No action was taken on these requests.

Finally, what is “unfortunate” (to use your word) is that not one logical objective reason was given by any opponent of arming our officers. On the other hand, campus police had presented letters from more than 60 armed campus police departments that feel that arms do deter crime. Some gave concrete examples. Did you avail yourself of the opportunity to read these letters and perhaps publish them to enlighten members of this community? That you did not is also “unfortunate.”

I am requesting a retraction of the statements regarding the demonin policy, refusal to work, and that officers delivered an ultimatum to the board. Jayne T. Rich
Chief of Police

Editor’s comment: Chief Rich must understand that an editorial, by definition, is an opinion based on an interpretation of the facts.

Letters to the editor must be no longer than two pages, typed and double spaced. They should be sent to The Montclarion on the fourth floor of the Student Center. The Montclarion reserves the right to edit letters for style and brevity. Anonymous letters will not be accepted; however, names will be withheld upon request.

Dance festival previewed

'Spring' comes to MSC

By Christopher Carfano

On March 25th, the Major Theatre Series will open its annual showcase of dance, The Spring Dance Festival. The show will be presenting new works created by resident, guest, and student choreographers in a combination of modern, classical, and jazz pieces. It will feature an interesting and inventive work based on Chaucer's Canterbury Tales.

"Canterbury Tales," as choreographed by Linda Roberts (head of the dance department), takes us back to 14th-century England. Roberts feels that Chaucer created the Canterbury Tales as a look at the medieval society of that time. The dance itself does not relate all of the individual tales, but instead allows us to view several of Chaucer's characters during their journey.

Debbie Robertson, a dance instructor at MSC (tap, jazz, modern, dance history), has brought to the stage a funky, spinned, jazz piece titled, "Rock Out, Virginia." Danced to "Greasy Spoon" by the Crusaders, and a guitar piece by Steve Khan called "Some Punk Funk," it has no theme to speak of, but does promise to amuse the audience with dancing by nine beautiful women.

With promise in their futures, two student choreographers Kathy Lowery and Gerri McIntyre will be presenting three pieces catching the styles of Hues, modern, and ballet. "La Battalia," choreographed by McIntyre, presents a modern/ballet dance which shows a man versus woman conflict on the physical, emotional, and mental levels.

Gerry McIntyre demonstrates a lively step from the upcoming Spring Dance Festival.

All in all, the festival should offer something for everyone: jazz, ballet, modern, blues, and even the punk stuff. For the price and the talent to be presented, a better evening out cannot be found. The show runs from March 25th thru March 27th at 8 p.m. in Memorial Auditorium.

Dance troupe lacks energy

By Donna Occhiogrosso

"Should dance be used to express a uniform, underlying theme?" Julie Maloney provokes "conflicting emotional responses" with her choreography. Julie Maloney, a New Jersey-based choreographer, performed at MSC this past weekend.

The Julie Maloney company is a seven-member troupe with a style all its own. The most striking aspect of the company is its musical diversity and the unique style of movement employed.

Unfortunately, many of the movements became too repetitive. The result is some dances being disjointed. It is evident that clever ideas had motive and choreography. However, though a given dance number, the mood and tone of a piece changed so often and drastically that the audience was often confused and frustrated. "Golden Attitude," one of the better dances of the evening, evokes memories of the band "Chicago." The dancer's style and dynamism, along with the music by Duke Ellington, are reminiscent of that time period.

"Summer Phrases/Summer Phases," a quite peculiar piece of dance, was composed of six distinctive themes. This collage of contemporary music and motions was manipulated into one dance. It was extremely hard to find any continuity in this collaboration of six distinct sections of dance.

Another dance, "Doggone," was set to the highly energized and percussive music of Harry Partch. Sporadically throughout the piece, the dancers would chime "peanut butter and jelly." The blend of verbal dialogue in conjunction with dance was unnerving. However, the phrases which were verbalized did not have any significant relationship to the dance itself. The concept is alluring but was unsatisfying executed.

Overall, the performance was entertaining. However, the enthusiasm and high energy was lacking in the dancers and choreography, which is not what one expects from a professional dance company. Well, we all have our bad days.
Improv
with
"sex 'n'
drugs

By Martin Farricker

"I don't know why I have to take my shirt off. I feel so funny doing it in front of everyone," cried the young lady in the spotlight. The director replied, "Come on now, there's no reason to be embarrassed. Just take off the shirt and we can start filming." She was about to bare her breasts when two men wearing black hats and dark sunglasses came to her rescue. The director protested but the heroes boldly told him off. They said, "We're the guardian actors and we protect desperate young actresses who don't want to take their clothes off."

With this kind of straightforward, ad-lib comedy, "The Broadway Local" made about 100 students roar with laughter last week. "The Broadway Local" is an improvisational theater group that has a style somewhere between slapstick and one-liner joke routines. The players asked the audience questions and with the answers they spontaneously created short, clever skits that were delivered energetically and cleanly.

"The Broadway Local" is Domenick Irrera, George Wilson, Mary Thompson, Lisa Mende, and Michael King. Thompson is a student here at Montclair State while the other members are from New York City. They started out together in the New York night club Chelsea West Side two years ago, after they broke away from another improvisational group. Their piano accompanist is Sue Anderson, who played for the popular Broadway play, "The Pirates of Penzance."

The players kept the laughs coming with their fast-moving pace and contemporary ideas. Satirical routines about sex, drugs, and the acting profession left little time for the audience to become bored with their two-hour performance.

"The Broadway Local" was bright, witty — and well-received. They said they would like to perform here again, so hopefully we'll be seeing more of them in the near future.
