Armed robbery at Stone Hall; Two suspects still at large

By John Connolly

A male MSC student was robbed of approximately 300 to 400 dollars at gunpoint by two males in his Stone Hall dorm room on Friday, Sept. 2. The two suspects are still at large and the campus police are investigating the case.

According to Debbie Newcombe, campus police officer, no one was working the front desk and the two suspects entered the dorm. At 11:30 a.m. the suspects knocked on a first floor dorm room and asked the student if his roommate was in. The student replied no. The suspects asked if he was alone. He replied yes and the two suspects proceeded to enter the room.

"One of the suspects took a handgun out of a gym bag," Newcombe said. The student was asked where the money was and he replied he did not know. The intruders searched the room and found the 300 to 400 dollars. There was another knock at the door and shortly thereafter the suspects left the scene.

The armed suspect is described as a white male between the ages of 18 and 20, 5'10"-6'0", 140-150 lbs., slender to medium build with dark brown hair and dark eyes.

The unarmed suspect is described as a white male between the ages of 18 and 20, 5'7"-5'8", 150-160 lbs., medium-heavy build, medium brown hair and dark eyes.

The victim and his roommate have been moved to "safer quarters," Newcombe said. Anyone with any information involving this case is encouraged to contact the MSC campus police at 893-5222 or 893-4325.

Teachers voting to authorize union strike set for October 4

By John Connolly

MSC's faculty, along with eight other state colleges, is voting this week to authorize a statewide teachers strike set for October 4.

The strike vote has been authorized because the council of NJ State College Locals, the faculty's union, has rejected the latest offer from the State Board of Higher Education. Dr. Catherine Becker, president of MSC's faculty union, said, "If the state administration doesn't change its proposed plan, there will be a strike." She said that a strike can only come about if the faculty votes in favor of it by more than a 50 percent margin.

In the August 30 edition of the "College Voice," an official publication of the union, Marcoantonio Lacatena, president of the state union, said that he opposes the following components of the state's plan:

- An inadequate salary package which is over $4 million less than the offered to other state employees.
- Withholding over $6 million in increments and replacing them with merit funds to be granted at the total discretion of the college presidents.
- No ninth step on the salary schedule has been offered to other state employees, the value of which is over $2.85 million in the third year of the Agreement.
- A 45-day layoff notice period.
- No monies for tuition reimbursement, career development and other programs.
- A decrease in sabbatical leaves, from 160 to 100 per year.

Since June 30, the union faculty has been working without a contract. The authorization vote being taken this week will be tabulated in New Bruns-

The Carrino Contracting and Trucking Company will begin dumping "sanitary fill" in the Quarry adjacent to the Cove Road apartments on Mon., Sept. 19, according to Dr. David W.D. Dickson, president of the college.

According to the contract Carrino and MSC have signed, Carrino may dump "household, commercial, industrial and institutional" waste in the landfill for 24 months, with an extension of up to 12 months. After their work is complete, Carrino has agreed to resurface the dump and construct an athletic field on the site at no cost to the college.

MSC accepted Carrino's bid to fill 7.9 acres of the Quarry in 1973. The college terminated its contract with Carrino in 1975 because "Carrino wasn't abiding by the contract," Dickson said. Since then MSC and Carrino have been in and out of court. Last May a state appeals court reversed a lower court ruling that ordered MSC to pay $789,709 in compensatory damages to Carrino. The court ruled that MSC was not responsible for the delays which resulted in additional costs to Carrino. According to Jerome Quinn, director of institutional planning, between 50-100 trucks will dump at the site each day. The trucks are permitted to dump from dawn until dusk, Monday through Saturday. Quinn said he doesn't see any environmental problems with the site "if the guidelines are followed."

Under the contract, Carrino may not dump waste chemicals, flammable liquids or solids, explosives, radioactive materials, facel material or other articles prohibited by state, federal or local regulations.

"Well do the best we can to see that illegal substances are not dumped," Minenberg said. But obviously, we can't examine each piece of garbage that's dumped there."

Be a part of SILCs newly formulated Team Point Competition. This year the student Intramural and Leisure Council is emphasizing team competition in all major sports, special events and tournaments. In order to qualify for the team competition, a complete roster must be submitted for the first SILC activity. This roster will be used for Men, Women and Co-Rec activities for the Fall and Spring semester.

SILC leagues will be subdivided into three (3) divisions, which will include Housing, Independent and Fraternity/Sorority. Points will be awarded for participation, performance, and several other categories. At the conclusion of the Spring semester an overall college champion will be determined and awarded Intramural jackets.
Sprague Library allocated $270,000 for asbestos clean-up

By Mona Sahgal

Sprague Library has allocated $270,000 for asbestos clean-up by the board of higher education for the removal of asbestos from the ceilings of all three library floors. But, according to Ethel France and Janet Boscaino, library employees, who filed asbestos grievances more than two years ago, the situation is not being handled efficiently.

France, Boscaino and the library staff have made four demands: the library should be kept free from excessive dust; air ducts should work properly and be serviced regularly, the stairwells should be repaired immediately, and the asbestos should be removed from the library. So far, action has been taken to solve the grievance only.

Jerome Quinn, director of institutional planning, said he is in the process of employing an engineer to draw up plans for the removal of asbestos from the library ceiling. The asbestos will be removed by either January or next summer, according to Quinn. France said that the situation in the library is even more serious because of the library's poor ventilation. "This is a closed building and the air ducts and vents are not serviced properly. They often blow gritty dust into the air. There is also no fresh air coming in," she said.

"We were promised that the air conditioning in the library would be left on every night to insure better ventilation, but I don't think that promise is being kept. It's 90 degrees in the library when the weather is hot," France stated.

According to Joseph McGinty, head of institutional planning, the entire air conditioning system has been left on every night. "We are also utilizing two specialized high frequency vacuum cleaners which don't dislocate the asbestos as much as regular vacuums," he said.

Although France agreed that the library looks a little cleaner, she also saw dust and dirt being blown out of the southwest stairwells containing asbestos were gouged out and needed immediate attention. Even after having presented Quinn and McGinty with pictures of the exposed area, no action has been taken. France said, "The complaint sounds familiar, but where it (asbestos) showed up and exactly who was supposed to take care of it, I don't know precisely," Quinn said. McGinty could not be reached for comments regarding the stairwells.

Quinn said, "The college has designated the highest priority to asbestos removal. This past summer, the ceilings in Bohin Hall laundry rooms on floors two through 16 had the asbestos removed from them. The job took approximately the first two weeks in August and was financed by the college. The project cost MSC approximately $17,000, and was financed through dorm rent money."

Kean to visit the site. "I hope Kean will use his wise judgment and stop the dumping, because Little Falls cannot take any further legal action to stop it," he said. Galta added that a special town meeting has been scheduled for 7:30 tonight at the Little Falls Recreation Center to discuss the situation.

"The courts have been through this case for over eight years and Carrino has the right to dump at this site. MSC will abide by the court's decision and ensure that these rights are protected," Minnberg said.

Despina Katris, SGA president and a resident at the Clove Road apartments, said, "I'm really upset about this. Having a dump across from your apartment is unfair." MSC students pay a lot of money to live here, and they shouldn't have to put up with the smell, or the rodents the dump will attract. What I'm most upset about is that I found out about the dump from the mayor of Little Falls, and not from the administration."

High tech wins math/science grads and the teaching profession suffers

By Greg Styfield

It is 10 p.m. and Susan Smith is just getting out of one of her night classes at MSC. She is nervous about having to walk her car alone. Last year she could have made use of the escort service, sponsored by the campus police, at that hour. This year, however, the service no longer exists.

The service was originated in 1978 by Jayne Rich, chief of campus police. She said there were many students, primarily females, that were in some danger when they traveled the campus alone at night. Previously, the campus police had employed male students to accompany any female student who felt that it was unsafe to travel the campus grounds after bus service had ended. The hired students would assist all callers so they could reach their destinations safely.

The funds that were used to pay for this service were covered by the SGA and extra revenue collected from parking decals. According to the campus police files, there was a decline in the number of overall escorts that were given. In 1980, only 180 people made use of the escort service, which amounts to about 20 per month. In 1982 there were less than 100 escorts given.

Rich said, "The program was not cost effective with the decreasing value of decals. It ended up costing us four dollars per escort and the service was rarely being used. This service was aimed primarily at the safety of women. Apparently, now women feel that they do not need to be escorted around campus in the evenings."

MSC, along with other colleges throughout the U.S., is experiencing a sharp decline in the number of students enrolling in the math/science teacher certification program. As a result, there has been a shortage of math/science teachers across the nation.

According to Dr. Richard Lynde, dean of math and natural sciences at MSC, the college is putting only six to 10 students through the science and eight to 10 students through the math certification program.

Lynde said because high tech industries offers graduates a better starting salary, most students avoid the teaching profession. Students with a bachelor's degree in computer science can make a starting salary of $22,000 whereas a starting teacher salary offers no more than $16,000.

"The salary problem is a very touchy situation," Lynde said. "You can't raise only math and science teachers' salaries; you must raise teachers' salaries across the board."

In order to solve the problem, Lynde said, "Our state or federal government must offer industry incentive to hire math and science teachers during their time off. These summer jobs would increase teacher earnings by approximately one sixth."

Another large part of the shortage problem, the lack of job quality, is something that is improving. Teacher caseloads are becoming more attractive, is to offer extra job training. The New Jersey Education Association (NJEAT) recently organized a task force to study the shortage of math and science teachers. The main recommendations of the task force are:

1) creating a statewide job bank for teachers;
2) raising all teacher salaries to make them more competitive with private industry;
3) providing scholarships, grants and cancellable loans for current and prospective industry;
4) giving off-duty teachers in math and science the teaching profession;
5) the process that the math/science world is going through is a cyclic thing. Presently more students are graduating involving high tech industry. In the future the industrial field will become saturated and more students will turn toward teaching. If we make the math/science teaching field sweet smelling, we might attract many people," Lynde said.

New center for legal studies designed to train future law students

By David G. Tomeo

MSCs 75th anniversary marks the inauguration for the campus' new Center for Legal Studies, an addition to the School of Humanities and Social Sciences. "Our center makes MSC a uniquely attractive school for future law students," Dr. Marilyn Frankenthaler, the director of the center, said.

"Law students," Frankenthaler said. "Our program combines for the first time previously unconnected legal minors into a single unit." Included within the center's framework are: the paralegal minor, the only American Bar Association (ABA) approved program of its kind in all of N.J.'s four-year colleges; the Hispanic community internship and law; the patent and trademark/copyright specializations; and the patent agent option. The latter is a pre-law minor which has been recognized as the first such program in all of N.J.'s colleges.

The center has planned a year-long program of law-related activities. One of the main events is the first N.J. Law School Admissions Day, which will be held at MSC on October 26. Approximately 50 law schools will participate.

"The center is enabling us to hold the Law School Admissions Day. It has also given us the opportunity to create new law courses and has even attracted the help of big corporations, who have given us grants for new part-time faculty members and programs," Frankenthaler said.

The center was mainly organized by Frankenthaler and Dr. Carl Gottschall, of the math and computer science department. Working in the center are Dr. Harry Balfie, the college pre-law advisor, Dr. Lucinda Long, of the political science department, and Dr. Joseph Becker of the chemistry department.

"The center will be a tremendous benefit to those students interested in a career as an attorney or in other aspects of the legal field. We are really excited about all the possibilities it has for the future," Frankenthaler said.

News Notes

MSC Receive High Tech Grants

MSC will receive $230,000 in high technology grants from the N.J. Department of Higher Education, according to Dr. Richard A. Lynde, dean of mathematics and natural sciences. Of five state colleges to receive these grants, MSC was the only one to receive three grants.

The grants MSC was awarded are: $70,000 for the mathematics/computer science department for establishing a large data base management system for students' computer education; $60,000 for the English department for word processing equipment to aid in the teaching of remedial writing, and $100,000 for the chemistry department to purchase a Fourier transforms nuclear magnetic resonance spectrometer for identifying molecules and their conformation.

MSC celebrates 75th anniversary with a look into the past

MSC celebrates its 75th anniversary this year with the theme "Where Tradition Meets Tomorrow." The college will make an effort to focus on MSC's history and traditions which date back to 1908, when the school was founded. There were only 187 students in MSC's first class, all of whom were interested in becoming elementary teachers. Now, MSC is the largest N.J. state college, with an enrollment of over 14,500 students and its curriculum caters to a wide variety of interests: business administration, humanities and social science, performing arts, mathematical and natural sciences and, in keeping with tradition, teaching.

Festivities officially begin on Tuesday, September 20, with a convocation in the amphitheater (or in Memorial Auditorium if it rains) at 10 a.m. Classes have been cancelled from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. so that all students may participate in the ceremony.

Dr. John Brademas, president of New York University and formerly a U.S. congressman for 22 years, will speak about education. Honorary degrees will be conferred upon Dr. Brademas, Richard J. Hughes, former N.J. governor, and Ralph A. Dungan, former N.J. chancellor of higher education. Governor Thomas Kean will also be present at a reception in the ballrooms of the Student Center immediately following the convocation.

Campus police report assaults and $800 typewriter theft

By Daniel Johnson

According to campus police, a male MSC student was assaulted while at a party in the Clove Road Apartments on Sept. 1. The victim was intoxicated at the time of the assault. He suffered a broken nose and was taken to the hospital. The victim did not press charges.

Another assault occurred on Sept. 11. A female resident assistant in Blanton Hall was assaulted for no apparent reason after she asked a male to leave the dorm. The male was arrested.

On Sept. 2 personal property, which included $30, car keys and a driver's license, was stolen while left unattended in the Clove Road Apartments.

On Sept. 7, a room in Blanton Hall was broken into and $177 was stolen. On Sept. 8, a typewriter worth approximately $800 was stolen from an office in Bohn Hall. A wallet that was left unattended was also stolen from Richardson Hall on Sept. 8. The wallet contained $350, along with a credit card and a driver's license.

Howard Leon declared unqualified to hold office as SGA treasurer

By Cathy Clarke

SGA treasurer-elect Howard Leon was declared unqualified to hold office at a closed SGA session yesterday. A special election for a new treasurer will be held within 20 days.

The Carrino Company will begin dumping this fall in the quarry near Clove Road. According to Dr. Jean Armstrong, vice president of student affairs, Little Falls mayor Carmen Gaita believes the dumping will pose health problems. However, Armstrong quoted Dr. Elliott Mininberg, vice president of administration and finance, as saying there is no way to stop the dumping and there is nothing MSC can do to change the contract with Carrino now.

A convocation to celebrate the 75th anniversary of MSC will be held in the amphitheater on Sept. 20. Classes will be cancelled from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. This year will also mark the revival of the defunct Pre-Law Society. The first meeting will be held on Thurs., Sept. 22, in the Student Center Annex, Room 126.

New legislators Eric Hartman, Jeff Hardgrove, Brian O'Reilly, Elizabeth Rodriguez, Adelaide Molina, Oren Zeve were appointed. John Labasso was elected president pro tempore.

My Big Apple summer

By Susan August

The mention of summer vacation often conjures up visions of sandy beaches, tanning bodies, and dancing in the moonlight. It’s a time for reading all those fun, urban trashy novels we don’t have time for during the school year. A time to give our hard-working brains a rest and do some of those mindless things we haven’t been able to do all semester. Like go to movies and plays, play sports, or whatever our pleasures might be.

Well, my summer of 83 did not exactly fit that picture of a relaxing vacation. It began with a bang, quite literally, when I was involved in an accident which put my car out of commission for three weeks and sent me to a chiropractor three times a week for two months. The first night I had my car parked it in the East Village (where I stayed for a month) only to find the next morning that it had been towed away while I slept. Two days and $100 later I called my friend in Montclair and said, “Please come and get the car, take it out of my sight.”

The following week I witnessed three accidents within two days, including seeing a van hit a little boy on his bike. I saw a fight break out in front of this restaurant where I work on MacDougal St. Bottles were crashing off the building and a chair was smashed through the rear window of a 1983 silver Porsche.

On my way to work one evening, I watched a man hit a red light get out of his car, step up on the hood of the car, smash his football like the windshield, all because the guy had honked his horn when the light turned green.

One night, a woman stole another woman’s wallet from her purse in my restaurant. A number of employees, including myself, followed the woman outside and confronted her. Fifteen minutes later, after trying to pull a knife on me and threatening to beat my face so I would really have something to call the police about, she reluctantly surrendered the wallet. Some say I was careless, others say I was brave, I say I was furious, and if I had anything to do with the situation, this woman was not going to get away with it.

Finally, depending on how one looks at it, I was fortunate enough to arrive on the scene of a seven car accident in West Orange a few weeks ago just after the cars had burst into flames. It was fortunate, I guess, that I hadn’t arrived a few minutes sooner.

My new you might be wondering why I’m relating all these unpleasant experiences. I could just as easily write about all the fun I had this summer.

The point is that witnessing these events has sensitized and uncontrolled events has reminded me that life is in the living. That any one of us might be hurt, that in some ways we do not fully represent them, we would like all of you to come and discuss this with us.

From the SGA president’s desk

By Despina Katris

While reading last week’s article concerning the newly elected SGA executive board members, the old saying “ignorance is bliss” kept coming back to my mind. I strongly believe that an explanation is needed in order to avoid similar distortions in the future.

It is stated in the SGA statutes, Article Three, under General Corporate Board, that “the Student Government Association will absorb all costs for credits taken, and room and board for the newly elected officers during the time spent in summer session.” The reason for this is much more complex than what last week’s article (The Montclarion, Sept. 8) described as “financial remuneration.” Every executive board position demands long hours of work at a different level than that of the Class I executive board members. Our SGA is one of the best and in order to be most effective in serving the students of this campus, we have to fully know our responsibilities, duties and rights as student leaders. During the academic year, our time is limited, and we have to make sacrifices by the executive board members. Our SGA is one of the best and in order to be most effective in serving the students, we have to make sacrifices.

This is to ensure that the students have a full-time job in the SGA. The reason for this is much more complex than what last week’s article described as “financial remuneration.” Every executive board position demands long hours of work at a different level than that of the Class I executive board members. The funds for the summer expenses are not a reward to the executive members, but to the students of MSC. That is time where our goals for the student body throughout the year are set and we ensure the best representation of the student body

Another point I wish to make is the fact that being an executive board member is a volunteer job and sacrifices have to be made. After being involved for three years in SGA, I was astonished to find out that a member of a Class I Organization, like The Montclarion, would state this. Sacrifices by the executive board members are made all year long voicing the student needs, fighting for student rights, working with all the different organizations for the better cultural programming for the student body.

Will MSC's dump turn into another Love Canal?

On Monday the Carrino Contracting and Trucking Company will begin dumping "sanitary fill" or more bluntly, garbage, in the quarry across from the Clove Road apartments. Tuesday, the college celebrates its 75th anniversary, what timing, what a birthday present. It's a birthday present that may take two years to materialize, but when it does, it will be a big, beautiful new athletic field for all MSC students to play on.

In the mean time though, students living in the Clove Road apartments will have to put up with the smell, especially if the wind is blowing in a westerly direction. They may also have new "neighbors," rats and seagulls. Oh yes, and while they're waiting for the shuttle bus to take them from Clove Road to the campus they can watch the dump trucks go by, 50-100 per day, from dawn to dusk, six days a week.

But we can't blame the MSC administrators. They've fought for this for over eight years. They can't change their minds now. If the case went back to court again New Jersey judges would get nauseous. For eight years this case was like Mexican food. It kept repeating on them.

But now the case is settled and Carrino has the right to dump at the site. Elliot Mininberg said "MSC will abide by the court's decision and insure that those rights are protected."

What about the rights of the students living at the Clove Road apartments? When they applied for housing were they told that there would be a garbage dump at the site. Elliot Mininberg said "MSC will abide by the court's decision and insure that those rights are protected."

But look at the bright side. If the guidelines are followed, Carrino will only dump "household, commercial, industrial and institutional waste" in the landfill. Under the contract Carrino can't dump waste chemicals, explosives, radioactive materials or fecal matter. MSC will even have two people at the site each day to watch what kind of garbage is dumped.

Hopefully, these two individuals will take pride in their work and say, "Excuse me sir, but could you take that load of plutonium and dump it somewhere else?" We only accept U.S. inspected grade A waste here.

The recent downing of Korean Airlines flight 007 by the Soviet Union, and the subsequent loss of life incurred, raise some very serious questions for the United States and the world community. Questions not only of the Soviet motives and their general paranoia. But questions of the ways we wage war. We have portrayed for itself in this tragedy, in contrast to the barbaric and murderous image we have painted for the U.S. and South Vietnam.

The Soviet Union was wrong, unequivocally wrong, there is no arguing that fact. As a pacifist I value human life and detest violence and the taking of human life. The Soviets however throw no concern over the loss, or taking of life. Be it 269 innocent civilian passengers or millions of their own people they have killed since the Communist revolution. This tragic event shows their true colors to the world and shows us that the Russians play rough, by their own rules and for keeps.

Without straining our already precarious relations with the Soviet Union, I favor stronger and harsher sanctions from the U.S. in the form of trade embargos. Though the Reagan administration has not voiced this, I believe it would also reduce our oil needs. There is no way they could afford to waste that much oil.

It is true that the Soviet Union is not to be looked upon lightly. It is unfortunate that the U.S. cannot trust the Soviet Union, but I also do not hold them in the same paranoiac light as this current administration does. The world is not filled with as many Soviet plots as we are led to believe.

I know some of my views will not be popular and it is indeed hard to be critical of our government when the Soviet Union has committed such a brutal crime against humanity. Or is it? Could it be something more, or less than what we are being told? Can all of the statements made by the Soviet Union be labeled as absurd and lies? From the very beginning of this nightmare there has been a propaganda war waged against the U.S. There is no truer fact than the Russian people's propaganda war waged against the U.S. The U.S. government has been slow in bringing these once conflicting government statements to the world, and I believe, through a complacent U.S. mass media. In continuing their propaganda war against the Soviet Union, the White House has stooped to the level of the USSR.

I must put the blame for the distortion of this event on the White House and the collective media of the U.S. Somewhere, someone must have asked these same questions I have asked. Still the silence is deafening.

For those who will look upon me as a Communist for thinking this, I can not stress how wrong I feel the Soviet Union is in the commission of this crime. I am not a Soviet sympathizer, I do not like the Soviets, I don't like Communism (capital-C). I only feel that there is more to this picture than meets the eye. More than the U.S. government is admitting or letting us know.

The Soviet Union is guilty of taking 269 lives and should not be allowed to walk away unscathed. The U.S. government is guilty of not responding to this propaganda war we've continu­ally accused the Soviets of, and the U.S. media is guilty for accepting this propaganda without questioning the motives behind it.
The SGA is wasting our money

To the editor:

In response to Jim Benson's viewpoint published in The Montclarion, September 8, 1983) entitled "Did someone say reward," I would like to add a few things. I agree with Mr. Benson that the $4,226 spent by the SGA for the housing and credits of their executive board was, "to say the least, a frivolous, unnecessary waste of students' money."
I just hope that all students remember this at referendum time. It is completely ridiculous to support an organization that is going to throw money around like this, cry poormouth all year, and then ask the students to pay an extra dollar a credit for their SGA fees, instead of conserving the money that they already have and spending it wisely.

It is much easier to waste all of your money and cry for more than it use your head when you spend it. Heck, if the SGA has enough money to pay for its executive board's housing and credits, then it must mean that over the summer they have too much money, so I propose a counter-referendum, one which would cut the SGA fees by one dollar a credit. This would force them to conserve, and give them a real reason to cry.

If the SGA is supposed to be a smaller version of the national government, I would say they are doing a good job of it. You know, milking the taxpayers, throwing it out the window and buying votes with their money.
Crying for more has been the norm for years in national, state and local governments, and seems to be par for the course with the SGA. If their job is to imitate these governments, congratulations on a job well done. If their job is to serve the students, they had better think twice. Once again, I would like to urge all students to remember this at referendum time and to vote with their heads.

Editorial inaccuracies refuted

To the editor:

This is in response to an editorial written by Jim Benson in the September 8th issue of The Montclarion. I would usually ignore the inaccuracies made in The Montclarion, but this time the statements made were far too misleading for me to overlook.

The first point I would like to correct is the statement that nowhere in the SGA statutes or constitution could Mr.
Benson find where it said that the SGA would pick up credits, plus housing for the executive board. If he did his homework properly, he would have found that it states in Article III, Section 10, numbers 3 and 4 of the SGA statutes. "It is recommended that the newly elected General Corporate Board take up to six necessary credits during the summer session, prior to or after taking office. The SGA will absorb all costs of fees and books taken, and room and board for the new officers during the time spent in summer session, these funds will come out of unappropriated surplus." Section 10 of the statutes also includes "The summer director shall be paid from unappropriated surplus minimum wage for a forty-four week during the summer months."

Not only did Mr. Benson fail to mention these necessary facts, which he should have known as a former SGA legislator, also he continued to make other fallaculous comments through his editorial.
Mr. Benson stated that the bill, which did not mention the executive board, does not mean it was used. Two executive board members did not live on campus during the summer, nor did they take classes. Also, the board of trustees representative did not live on campus, nor did he take classes. Secondly, Mr. Benson failed to emphasize how much work the executive board has to take care of during the summer so that everything will be functioning properly by September.

Who wants to spend their summer on campus working long hours without pay and taking classes? I certainly did not, but I had to make it right. I had an effective vice-president. Also, he stated that just because money has been alotted in the past, doesn't make it right. Well, if you feel so strongly about this, Mr. Benson, why didn't you make the change when you were an SGA legislator during the fall semester 82?

Players Diviners quenches your thirst for drama

By Stephen Kantrowitz

Players opens its 1983-84 season with an exuberant and down-to-earth production of Jim Leonard Jr.'s The Diviners. Directed by Louis Conley, The Diviners is a modern tragedy, simply staged and produced, about good, common people with the best of intentions.

Playwright Leonard addresses a subject found appealing and used quite frequently by contemporary writers: the tragedy of the common man. No longer do we see the fall of a great, noble leader and the effects on his people and land. Now we see down-trodden salesmen and incest-tempted people and land. Now we see down-trodden.

Leonard is not quite as successful. In The Diviners, he gives us Buddy Layman (name ring a bell?), a 17-year-old idiot boy. Hindered with a slight speech impediment (he's prone to speaking near the Dine-A-way), he sometimes gets into bits of trouble. His father thinks he best "raise him like a weed," allowing the boy to run free.

Buddy has also been blessed with the gift of divining. Call it vein-findin', water-witchin', smellin' or seekin', it still comes down to the same thing: he can usually tell how deep the water is before he finds water, he also senses when rain is on its way. Ironically, it is that very same substance that young Buddy fears more than anything. He won't go near water (even an innocent basin of bath water (even an innocent basin of salts), and heaven forbid bringing him closer to "the water") and, unfortunately, this sometimes happens.

Buddy has a knack for divining the depths of those around him. He feels his frustrations: not being able to tie his shoes or talk worth a nickel. He has taken away from preaching because he felt an emptiness when he tried to do his work. He has turned away from his family, and little by little, starts bringing the boy to water. Slowly, he shows Buddy how unrealistic his fears are, and convinces him to finally go into the water.

The tragedy, which is explained in the play's opening moments, is that the boy drowns. Knowing this before we actually get into the play is itself tragic. Why do playwrights throw away a good thing? Perhaps Leonard felt as the Greeks felt; if the audience knew beforehand what was going to happen, they could concentrate on how the story is presented. This doesn't work with The Diviners. The story isn't presented in a unique or "divine" manner. It's simple and honest. Unfortunately, our discovering things for ourselves would have proven far more moving, more realistic, and more effective.

Some praise must be bestowed upon certain individuals involved, both onstage and offstage. Call it getting to know and understand Buddy. Unfortunately, this sometimes happens.

To name a few: Olga Landin comes close to this as Miss Tauber, a citizen of Zion, Indiana. Olga Landin is often seen taking on the role of the doctor's wife who never believes anybody. In The Diviners, Miss Tauber portrays Mrs. Layman, a likeable and appealing fellow who means well, yet sometimes gets into bits of trouble. His father thinks he best "raise him like a weed," allowing the boy to run free.

Buddy also appears to have a speech impediment (he's prone to saying "tooting the number of jelly beans in a jar at the Hooiser Dry Goods Store; or "my hair is badly split", learning how to impress a neighbor girl. With such names as Jennie Mae, Daniel W., and Luaella, we know the characters are unpretentious and well-meaning, even a bit on the silly side.

An ex-preacher named C.C. Showers comes into town looking for work and befriends the boy. He has turned away from preaching because he felt an emptiness when he tried to do his work. He has turned away from his frustrations: not being able to tie his shoes or talk worth a nickel.

Paul Fenner's extremely rakish (stunted downward) set works well and enables some extremely effective lighting effects to function, usually quite nicely. Louis Conley's direction works best when he allows the action to flow naturally. There are several scenes, the opening divine scene and the drowning scene, where action becomes a bit cluttered and the staging is somewhat sloppy. For the most part, however, it is well-intentioned and honest as the play.

The Diviners runs through Saturday in the Studio Theater, located upstairs in the Speech Building. Performances are at 8:30 p.m. with a matinee on Sunday at 2:15. For tickets or further information, call 746-9120.

St. John: getting to know the man behind the #1 voice on radio

Pat St. John: How do you greet someone for the first time who has made many lonely moments feel a little less empty for you? Since I was 14, I have listened to him, his music, and his broadcasts. Faithfully, he has gotten me through my high school homework and my college apavation. I adore his "friendship" so much that I will go to concerts just to see him emcees.

When we met at the dinner last week, this interview, the top gun of the radio, did not seem nervous about meeting "his" public or his status at the top of the PM prime time list. He showed all the confidence and fineness of a DJ old-timer inhabiting a new Western town.

Pat St. John's guffawing laugh says nothing for his personality. On the contrary, St. John is a sincere family man. "I've got a great wife with three 3-year-old daughters. They mean everything to me. I am right where I want to be. They are my biggest encouragement to go on."

His looks also contrast his ambition, for he never wanted to be a DJ since he was a child. He doesn't know why, but he does know that he has always loved rock and roll...and American Bandstand. He used to watch Dick Clark and his teenie boppers before and after school. St. John remembers, "I think I had my first 45 when I was 5 or 6 years old. My first record was Great Balls of Fire by Jerry Lee Lewis. I never consciously thought that I would like to be a DJ, but during my junior and senior years, I would volunteer to spin the records at the Sock Hops," he said.

At fifteen St. John was working in a professional studio. Before coming to WPLJ in N.Y. St. John held a disc-jockey position with its sister station in Detroit where he grew up. "My rating was good," WPLJ offered him this job because they wanted to raise their's. I've been with the station for 10 years now, and I just signed another 5 year contract," the top gun said.

And WPLJ has been number one for a while. Recently WPLJ has undergone a format change: As St. John puts it, "Radio has changed because music has changed. It is going back to all the top 40 thing. This is not only happening to WPLJ. It is happening all over the airwaves faster and faster. Everyday new stations are doing what WPLJ did. Only WPLJ happened to do it first. We have the advantage, though, we changed when we were at the #1 position." Until the new ARB (Arbitron) ratings come out in October, WPLJ is still #1.

The change in the type of music we hear on WPLJ has much to do with the recent success of MTV. St. John states, "MTV has affected radio and what we listen to. When they start playing a new video it becomes popular, radio has got to pick up on it and play the record. MTV has caused radio to play many different kinds of music. Possibly, if MTV wasn't so successful, we might still be playing the same kind of music."

Aside from his WPLJ duties, St. John does a minute day show entitled Rock Notes. This allow runs at 6:00 in the morning on WPLJ and at various times across the country on ABC radio. The Upper Montclair resident states, "I like to talk to one person. I try to put myself on the other side of the radio or talk in that type of way. For example, It's a great day and here is a record I think you will like, I talk into the radio like I talk to you here. That is the art of radio communication. I am going to try to be your friend."
Woody Allen faces the critics in Zelig

By Harold Lowry

Woody Allen stoops to conquer in his new light comedy Zelig. He makes those who have called him self-indulgent and too serious look like fools by creating a movie with two faces. It's nothing more than fun—a string of one-liners set up as a phony documentary, long on message, and short on the satiric barbs for which Allen is famous—but that's only one level. At the same time Zelig is a potted banal movie, because Allen has created a bubble and accurate parody of the vacuously entertaining newscasts, features and documentary-styled movies with which we are inundated in the media today.

There is a strange similarity between the "craze mania" of the twenties as explored in the movie and the "Raoul People" syndrome of today. In each era the inexperience of the press with its new technology caused an exaggerated interest in the bizarre. Because of this new trend, the character of Leonard Zelig would be as sought-after and pandered today as he was in the time portrayed. Allen uses the whimsicality of the twenties to show the idiocy of the eighties.

Woody Allen plays Leonard Zelig: he is the man who vanishes from his New York apartment and then mysteriously turns up again and again in one place after another, as different people. Zelig walks into a speakeasy looking like a white gangster for example. Suddenly there was an extra player in the all black band. Zelig! The movie follows as Dr. Rudolph Richler (played by Mia Farrow) tries to uncover the root of Zelig's incredible physical and mental changes. Her biggest set-back is that he won't stop being a psychiatrist.

The main character is really funny because he can become just about anything. But most of the humor comes from the way in which the world changes. Her biggest set-back is that he won't stop being a psychiatrist.

Inventing a dance about him (the Chameleon). In the same way the critics in Reds. People like Susan Sontag and Saul Bellow describe and eulogize the life people who lived in the twenties and thirties, much like Warren Beatty did in Reds. People like Susan Sontag and Saul Bellow describe and eulogize the fictional Zelig. "He was representative of his era." "He was, indescribable!" and other such post-mortems intersperse the movie; these are the only sections not filmed in black and white.

The public goes crazy over Zelig, reading the daily accounts of his life, inventing a dance about him (the Chameleon). In the same way the critics have gone crazy over Allen's movie, saying he has gotten away from self-indulgence. (Although his face is on the screen ninety percent of the time and other such post-mortems intersperse the movie; these are the only sections not filmed in black and white.

The rise and fall of Leonard Zelig is not the usual movie goers' fare, but Woody Allen fans should find Zelig another step up in the rise of the new Woody Allen.

FIELD HOCKEY

By Chris Worthington

The MSC field hockey team has started the season with a new coach, Lynn Centonze. Although Centonze has never coached field hockey before, she does have playing experience and last spring, she coached lacrosse at a Westchester high school. Co-captains for this year's team are seniors Joy Walling and Terry Jennings.

The team opened the season in a non-conference match against Manhattanville College. The first half was relatively uneventful. MSCsenior, Mary Zollen, took three shots at the goal, Sophomore Jean Brown took two shots. At the half mark, both teams had nine goal attempts and nine saves.

The second half was also un-noteworthy until the last minute. At the 34 minute mark, Manhattanville’s Sue Brauer scored off a corner. She was assisted by Sheila Markham and Carol Lewis. Less than 30 seconds later, Manhattanville player Nancy Sadler scored on a breakaway to take the win, 2-0.

Both teams played well and were evenly matched. Manhattanville’s key players were Markham, Sadler, Jill King, and Glenn Burgess. MSC was led by Zoller, Brown, and sophomores Linda Morganthen and goal keeper Lisa Flynn.

Senior Sherri Woodden, a physical education major who played on the team for three years and keeps statistics this year, said the MSC players were showing good teamwork as compared to past years, and had a lot of respect for their new coach.

After the game, Centonze said, "I like Montclair. It's a good opportunity." She said it is too early to tell how the season will end, but the team has great potential. As a whole, the team was disappointed about this game. However, they have been practicing for only two weeks and had no pre-season games.

Today’s match will be played at 7:30 p.m. instead of 3:30 as previously announced, against Drew University.

The MSC defense couldn’t contain Wagner for a win but the Indians managed to tie the Seahawks, 20-20. See story on page 24.

Manhattanville Invitational: Leisher is training for a marathon this season, thus unable to compete for MSC. "Our workouts aren't enough for what Ratty needs. She has given a lot to Montclair by running in the past," Marotti said.

The only prediction Marotti will give about this season's squad is that it has a chance to better last year's performance in the NCAA Regionals, where the Indians placed sixth in the team standings. This Saturday, the team will compete in the Lafayette Invitational.

enough field position to give O’Riordon a chance to kick a game-winning field goal. The Seahawks moved to the MSC 32-yard line, with time running out. Wagner was forced to try a 49-yard field goal. As O’Riordon took the field, the crowd, remembering O’Riordon’s two earlier successful kicks, stood quietly. As O’Riordon kicked the ball, it looked like it would be good, but to the relief of the MSC fans, the ball sailed wide and put an end to a very exciting football game.

After the game, Giancola stated that his team’s enthusiasm in getting ready for Wagner “Just took away from what they were coached to do.” Giancola said, “We’re a much better team than we showed. We just made too many mental mistakes to beat a team like Wagner.”

The mental mistakes Giancola was referring to were 12 penalties, four turnovers and numerous breakdowns in the kicking game and special teams coverage.

As for MSC’s next opponent, an away game against Division II power, East Stroudsburg State College, Giancola warned, “We cannot expect to beat a team like ESSC if we play the way we did against Wagner.”

The coach added that he will go through practice this week working to improve his team’s consistency both on offense and defense. He said, “We just have to go through the X’s and O’s of the game, in order to prepare for this coming Saturday’s game.”

Indians tie Wagner 20-20 in last minute for second year straight

By John Rivera

The MSC football team came from behind in the last minute to tie Wagner College 20-20 for the second straight year on Sprague Field last Saturday. With a capacity crowd of 8,366 looking on, the two teams went to battle on a hot and muggy September night.

As the home crowd began to cheer the defense on, Wagner was gaining yards, closing to the MSC 50 with just two minutes to go in the game. MSC received a huge break when linebacker Harry Sandberg forced Wagner's Chiofalo to fumble the ball, leaving 1:50 to go. As the ball bounced around, Sandberg picked it up with the ball on MSC's own 42-yard line.

On MSC's first play, Vannoy, who would wind up the game with 77 yards rushing, carried the ball 22 yards to the Wagner 36. Then with 1:17 and the clock running, the play MSC fans will remember for a long time took place. Cassile fired a pass to end Ed Chevis, who caught the ball in stride at the Wagner 6. After receiving a solid hit from the Wagner secondary Chevis fumbled the ball away, but wide receiver Darin Small, who was following the play all the way, picked up the ball on the three and went into the end zone for an MSC touchdown.

As the players mobbed Small in the end zone, MSC coach Rick Ganciola had to make the decision on whether or not to kick the extra point or go for the two-point conversion. Small and the win.

After Perri successfully kicked the tying extra point, Wagner still had :55 left on the clock running, the play MSC fans will remember for a long time took place. Cassile fired a pass to end Ed Chevis, who caught the ball in stride at the Wagner 6. Harriers begin season with new coach and a second place finish

By Kathy Szorentini

After a highly successful season last year, the women's cross country team is looking to better their performance this season under new head coach, Tim Marotti.

Marotti, who led the women's distance coach during spring track, takes over for the season as former head coach, Michelle Willis, who will return in April. Marotti was Wills' assistant last season and will handle cross country, indoor track and the beginning of spring track.

The team began its season Saturday with a second place finish at the Manhattanville Invitational. Veterans Carla Gambill and Dana Caruso led the Indians, finishing second and fourth place respectively. Gambill, who has trouble with a stress fracture last year, showed no signs of injury, running a time of 19:54 for the three mile course.

Caruso, a Junior, has been steadily improving since last year, finished with a time of 20:12. Sarah Sommerville, also a veteran, was the third runner in for the Indians, placing 23rd in 22:59. Followed closely by sophomore Lorrie Dilla in 23:04. Dilla, a new member on the team, has been running all summer in preparation for this season.

Behind Dilla was freshman Stacy Pollack in 33rd place with a time of 23:58.
