Faculty union rejects Kean/Cooperman proposal

By Eileen Olekslak

The Council of State College Locals of the American Federation of Teachers (AFT) rejected the state board of education's alternate teacher certification proposal, in a statement made public last week.

The union takes "strong exception to the criteria" that the state proposes, according to Dr. Thunder Haas, chairwoman of the union's Academic Policy Committee and author of the response.

The proposal, introduced in September by Saul Cooperman, education commissioner, and Governor Thomas Kean, would require those interested in teaching on the elementary and secondary school levels to have only a bachelor of arts degree, pass a professional test and take part in a year-long internship.

Haas said the elimination of professional courses would attract "poorer quality students from non-prestigious liberal arts colleges...easier to escape additional academic burdens."

Katherine Becker, president of local 1004, said the proposal is "anti-intellectual and it denigrates the teaching profession by making it a craft rather than a profession." In addition, she said courses in sociology, psychology and pedagogy prevent anyone "off the street" from teaching in the classroom.

Dr. Wolfgang Fleischmann, professor in the English department, said the statement is an "implicit likening to those who have only had a liberal arts education to a Nazi. I haven't had any teacher certification courses and I'm not ashamed of my track record as a teacher."

"If these courses have done what Haas said, namely, create an independent style of political leader. This is not something I have witnessed." Fleischmann said.

According to Fleischmann, these courses do not deter a teacher from expressing a particular political view in the classroom.

Fleischmann also said good teaching contacts and nominate good prospects, rather than have letters go out to people who were not nominated.

Early retirement for faculty is announced at board meeting

Early retirement for faculty is announced at board meeting

By Cathy Clarke

A plan to enable teachers between the ages of 55-62 to retire was announced at the board of trustees meeting last week.

The proposal, which includes two million dollars budgeted for 1983, was proposed by the board of higher education and approved by the department of higher education (DHE) last week.

Dr. David W.D. Dickson, president of the college, said the early retirement plan "would provide the opportunity to bring in younger people, and would enable those people retiring to pursue new fields while receiving a year's pay."

The American Federation of Teachers (AFT) plans to support the early retirement plan, but will encourage teachers to retire after age 62.

In other business, the board discussed the DHE's Nov. 16 hearing on new regulations and the standards of a good teacher and teaching program.

For example, Haas said in the proposal, "Young Nazi leaders knew their search, "They didn't mind twisting the material, nor communicating it in a manner unacceptable to a democratic society."

Dr. Wolfgang Fleischmann, professor in the English department, said the statement is an "implicit likening to those who have only had a liberal arts education to a Nazi. I haven't had any teacher certification courses and I'm not ashamed of my track record as a teacher."

"If these courses have done what Haas said, namely, create an independent style of political leader. This is not something I have witnessed." Fleischmann said.

According to Fleischmann, these courses do not deter a teacher from expressing a particular political view in the classroom.

Fleischmann also said good teaching contacts and nominate good prospects, rather than have letters go out to people who were not nominated.

Gloria Kolodziej, mayor of Clifton, thanked the board for allowing MSC students to have an internship in Clifton. Mrs. Deorlos Coquilh, director of the Clifton Girls Club, reported on a program which would allow MSC students to earn credit in early education and psychology to intern in a Clifton children's program.

Committee to review Gimbrere appointment

By Kathy Gilligan

Investigations into the appointment of Dr. Rene Gimbrere, an associate vice president of academic affairs, will be conducted by an ad hoc committee of the President's Commission on Affirmative Action.

"We will base the investigation on the questions posed by the resolution of the Hispanic caucus," James Harris, assistant dean of student affairs and chair of the committee, said at last week's affirmative action meeting.

The Hispanic Caucus' resolution presented at the Sept. 29 affirmative action meeting, questioned the Gimbrere appointment because it was made without an affirmative action search. "We will need to analyze such things as the exactness of the job description and whether the salary is similar or dissimilar to the normal range for that position," Harris said.

In other news, Dr. Constance Waller, chairperson of the affirmative action committee, announced the second annual women in business seminar entitled Women in Business: The Corporate World to be held Nov. 3, at 7:30 p.m. in Room 419 of the Student Center.

Second in a series of five seminars funded by the MSC alumni association, the discussion will feature a panel presentation by three corporate women to be followed by a question and answer period. Waller said the seminar will allow students to share the experiences of women in the corporate world, and to ask questions pertaining to these experiences.

In other business, an ad hoc committee is being formed to make preparations for Affirmative Action Day, scheduled for Feb. 15, 1984. According to Waller, the purpose of Affirmative Action Day is to educate students on need, purpose and function of affirmative action.

The School of Humanities and Social Sciences submitted a letter unanimously opposing the proposal for 75-minute classes during the All-College Curriculum Committee (ACCC) meeting this week. The letter said, "The scheduling model cannot possibly be adopted to the scheduling needs of individual courses or disciplines." According to Dr. Adele B. McCollo, chairperson of the ACCC, the faculty senate recommended that a joint committee of six be elected to discuss the 75-minute plan and make recommendations about scheduling. In other news, Dr. George Olsen, chairperson of industrial studies, said, "I don't think students should be represented on the General Education Requirement (GER) subcommittee." Olsen said the student representatives serving on the subcommittee failed to show up at a majority of the meetings. The purpose of the GER subcommittee is to evaluate proposed courses that might satisfy general education requirements.

MSC campus police nab two for reckless driving this week

By Den Johnson

An MSC student was arrested on Oct. 23 for driving with a revoked license. The campus police stopped the driver for speeding and driving on the wrong side of the road. On Oct. 19, between 1:30 p.m. and 6 p.m., two front directional lens covers, gaskets and a wheel trim were stolen. The value of the items was estimated at $175. Another theft occurred on Oct. 19 when a wallet containing $150 was stolen from an unlocked car. A car engine caught fire on Oct. 17, on College Avenue near the Student Center. No injuries were reported.

SGA president says legislators fail to attend committee meetings

By John Connolly

Despina Katris, SGA president, and chairpersons of the legislative committees made requests at last night's SGA meeting asking for more legislators to attend committee meetings. According to the SGA statutes, all legislators must belong to at least one committee which meets one hour a week. Wendy Shultz, director of public relations, said, "Judging by the minutes of all the seven different committees, there appears to be legislators who are not active members of a committee."

On Oct. 20, a woman was bicycling on College Avenue at 10:50 p.m. and was flashed by a driver. The flasher drove up in a large brown vehicle and asked her for directions to Valley Road. When the woman went up to the window, she discovered that the man was nude from the waist down. The driver, who is described as in his early 20's, heavy-set with brown curly hair, sped off when the woman screamed. Campus police believe this description fits that of a streaker seen on Clove Road on Oct. 6.

The Montclarion receives award from Associated Collegiate Press

The Montclarion was awarded the All American rating by the Association Collegiate Press Association (ACP) for the spring 1983 semester. The Montclarion editorial board announced yesterday, the All American rating is the highest award given to college newspapers by the ACP.

The final rating a publication receives is determined by a numerical score and the number of marks of distinction it receives. The Montclarion received 200 out of a possible 200 points for its writing, the Montclarion received 100 out of a possible 100 points for its front and editorial pages, cartoons and typography. Lower scoring areas included sports and photography. The Montclarion also received marks of distinction for its writing, editing, editorial content and newspaper design. ACP judges are professional journalists at top-rated publications. Judges evaluate the newspaper by comparing it to college publications from around the country.

Kean/Cooperman proposal would be unfair to make students suffer while new teachers got on-the-job training. Petty said, "Student suffering doesn't come from a lack of skill on the part of the teacher, but from a lack of connection between the real world and the subject matter." According to Petty, those with a B.A. degree and seven years of job experience in their field, should not be excluded from the teaching profession because they do not have teacher certification courses. "They should be urgently recruited to come back into the schools and share that worldly experience," Petty said.

Bacteria will be placed in computers in the future

By Chris Worthington

"Biological computers made up of living organisms are a natural course of evolution. We are actually creating a new, live form of intelligence.\," Dr. James McAiear, president of EMV Associates, said last week at a lecture entitled "The Ultimate Biological Computer."

According to McAiear, the mechanical computer will be replaced by the molecular or biological computer. This biological computer will utilize living organisms—bacteria—instead of silicon chips.

Silicon chips, McAiear said, are made of sand and are no bigger than a baby's thumbnail. These chips can store over 256,000 bits of information. McAiear said, within "five to ten years" it will be possible to store the same information on a biochip—no bigger than a pinhead. Biochips will be composed of molecules like those in the human body, he said.

According to McAiear, two advantages to the molecular computer will be its ability to self-repair and self-reproduce. This will be possible only because the bio computers will be made from bacteria instead of electronics, McAiear stated.

McAiear believes "a molecular computer is possible." However, he said, many scientists doubt that there will ever be such a computer. Some organizations working on developing this system are the United States Navy, General Electric and Westinghouse.

McAiear is one of the pioneers in the relatively new field of biological computers. He said, "In May of 1983, the idea came to me, about how biological fundamentals could be used in computers."

McAiear received his PHD. in biology from Harvard in 1958. He founded the central electron microscope facility at the University of California at Berkeley.

In 1968, McAiear became associate professor of biology at Catholic University. Four years later, McAiear and Dr. John M. Wehrung founded EMV Associates, a research firm specializing in the development of computer-controlled electron instrumentation.

The lecture was sponsored by the math and computer science department. For more information on biological computers, contact Dr. Gideon Nettler at 893-4294.

Student photographer earns cash and credits through Co-op

Barbara Bell is using cooperative education to develop skills for a career that could mix pictures with words and turn them into -

CO-OP CORNER

An English major with a fine arts background, Barbara is spending her co-op semester working on campus as a photographer for the Montclair State Publications Office.

According to Barbara, a resume listing a degree in English and work experience in photography will expand her career opportunities. One option she is exploring is a job that will combine promotional photography and promotional writing.

Barbara has a year's experience in photojournalism as The Montclarion's photography editor. But now, her work has taken a promotional turn with the publications office. Her pictures are used in the catalogs and brochures that advertise what the college offers. In short, she's helping to sell the college to prospective students.

Wanda Kline, Barbara's employer, briefs her on each assignment and describes the general requirements of each shot. "Although she offers some guidance," Barbara said, "she doesn't tell me exactly what to do. Wanda trusts me to interpret what she needs. There's a lot of flexibility."

Barbara said her familiarity with the campus added to her effectiveness on the job. "I know what's going on. For instance, how the light is at different times of the day and in different campus locations. That makes planning and shooting particular shots easier and better," she said.

Barbara is one of 154 students who have been placed in jobs this semester by the Cooperative Education Office. Like Barbara, they are getting an education on the job to complement their education in the classroom.

Nastuk draws attention for his cartooning skills

By Cathy Clarke

According to Matt Nastuk, "one of the funnest things I do is make funnies." Recently his fun turned into a rewarding experience when he won third place in a national competition for newspaper cartoonists.

Matt, a sophomore commercial arts major, is The Montclarion's cartoon artist. He submitted three sample cartoons to the National Council of College Publication Advisors' competition, and tied for third place in the cartoon strip category.

Matt said he sent his cartoons to the council "never expecting to hear from them again." He was surprised to receive a letter inviting him to a conference in Chicago on Nov. 5 to accept an award. Matt said he does not know what the award will be, and he is unsure yet if he will be able to afford the costs of going to Chicago.

Winning the award has given Matt more confidence in his work. He said, "Drawing cartoons is a chance for me to express my views. It's not work for me, and it's the funnest thing I do art-wise."

While drawing may not be work for him, he said it often got him into trouble at his job this summer. He sold food at a beachfront stand, where he was always drawing caricatures of people while he was supposed to be working.

Eventually Matt would like to make a career out of drawing cartoons. He would like to develop a character and run it in a syndicate. Or, he said, "If I can't make it with a comic strip, I'll work for an advertising agency."

Matt's favorite comic strips are B.C., because he admires its "loose, original style," and Peanuts. He has every Charles Schultz book ever published. But Matt said it worries him when someone tells him one of his cartoons looks like someone else's. He said, "It is deadly to pattern your style after someone else. You have to have your own style."

News Notes

Improving the Image and Status of Teachers

A conference entitled "Improving the Image and Status of Teachers" will be held at MSC on Nov. 18. In the morning, opposing forces will debate the positive and negative aspects of the numerous proposals for the change in the preparation, certification and remuneration of teachers. Speaking in favor of the proposals will be Dr. Leo Klagholz, director of teacher preparation and certification for the N.J. State Department of Education, and Dr. Lloyd Newbaker, executive director for the N.J. School Boards Association.

Opposing the proposals will be Kathleen Diehl, first vice president Bergen County Education Association of the N.J. Education Association and the Honorable Mildred Barry Garvin, chairperson of the education committee for the N.J. Assembly.

This conference, sponsored by the school of professional studies, is designed to result in a set of specific recommendations for the improvement of teachers' image and status, with particular reference to New Jersey.

The registration fee is eight dollars and the deadline is Nov. 11. For more information contact Dr. Robert Pines of the department of curriculum and teaching at 893-7127.

ID card office moves to the Student Center

The college ID card office will relocate from Room 301 in College Hall to Room 125 of the Student Center Annex. This move will take place on Nov. 2. No ID services will be available that day. Services will resume on Nov. 3. Hours are 8:30 a.m. to noon and 1 p.m. to 4:15 p.m. Monday through Friday. For information call 893-4147 during these hours.

Win a Dr. Pepper T-shirt free

Fifty Dr. Pepper T-shirts saying "Be a Pepper" are being given away free at MSC by the Coca-Cola corporation of New York. Buy either Dr. Pepper or Diet Dr. Pepper at either the Blanton Hall, Student Center Annex or Student Center Coca-Cola machines and if your can has a sticker saying "you've won a T-shirt," you're a winner.

To claim your prize, go to the office in the back of the gameroom between 10 a.m. and 4 p.m.

coming game meant different things to the former MSC standouts. Lou Harmon, who still holds five women's track and field records and represented the Indians at the 1969 Women's National Track and Field Championships, where she helped the team to a second place finish said, "The induction is definitely an honor to have, but I feel I played the sport because I love it and this is a bonus that goes along with it." South, who played soccer for four years at MSC and was an important part of the 13-1-1 record held by the team in 1969 that earned them a berth in the NCAA soccer playoffs said, "Feel this honor should be shared with my teammates I played with because without them I probably wouldn't be here right now. We were like a family." Once the football game began, there was a special guest appearance by one of the former cheerleaders, Teresa Douglas, Douglas, who presently coaches the MSC cheerleaders in her spare time, was a member of the squad from 1976 to 1979 and was mascot for the evening in an Indian outfit.

Time to reassess our Lebanon policy and bring the troops home

With over 200 U.S. Marines killed in Beirut, Lebanon, it is time to reassess our values, interests and morals.

President Reagan is steadfast in his position to keep the Marines in Beirut. He insists "the United States will not be intimidated by terrorists."

The U.S. originally stationed troops in Beirut as part of a multi-national peace-keeping force, but obviously peace is not being kept and the situation has grown worse.

The U.S. must reconsider its role in Beirut. U.S. Marines have been slaughtered in their attempt to keep peace, and it is an attempt that is beginning to seem fruitless. The U.S. shouldn't turn back on its allies, but we've sent our Marines to keep peace and they've been ruthlessly murdered. Outside of getting directly involved in the war, there is not much else we can do.

Questions must also be raised as to where our real interests in Beirut are. Are we there only to keep peace, or are we there for personal gain and a piece of the action?

The Marines in Beirut are brave men doing their job. They are dedicated to their country and will fight for it until death. They are to be commended and honored.

But before sending more troops there, perhaps Reagan should have thought about why he was sending more. Maybe it was because he honestly believes the Marines can better the situation, or was it because he is too stubborn to accept the fact that peace in Beirut can only come from within?

It seems as though Reagan has made his bed. Now he must sleep in it.

I woke up Sunday morning early, eagerly looking forward to sitting down at my typewriter to write about the national holiday created in the memory of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. Before I started, I turned on my television looking for a football game which I could turn the sound down and watch as I typed. Instead, football I was met with "Beirut's Bloody Sunday."

I cannot fully express in words the emotions I felt as the newscaster said over two hundred American Marines and Sailors had been killed that morning in Lebanon. Over 215! Not one or two killed by a sniper, but over 215 killed by a suicide bomber.

Each time an American dies in Lebanon my rage against President Reagan grows. Sunday morning I could have exploded. I sat in front of the TV too shocked to do more than just shake my head. The tears came later. Since Sunday, all I've felt has been disgust, fright and outrage, over this senseless loss of life.

Instead of influencing our government to withdraw our forces from Lebanon, this tragedy only hardens Reagan's resolve to keep the Marines in Lebanon. I don't understand his logic. Reagan is asking the Marines to police a conflict that has been going on for hundreds of years. The United States cannot be expected, nor expect itself, to resolve Lebanon's internal problems in a few months or even years.

There are no simple solutions in Lebanon, and U.S. Marines only complicate the situation. The peole of Lebanon look upon the Marines as an occupation force, not a peace-keeping force. With our Marine presence, the United States is supporting a minority government that the majority does not want, as the continuous fighting between Lebanon's factions attests. I could be wrong, but it seems as if there was more peace in Lebanon before the peace-keeping Force arrived on the scene.

The original mission and role of the Marines has disappeared, they are no longer acting as a peace-keeping force, but as an active participant and target in the fighting in Lebanon. But Reagan has vowed that we're not going to get involved in a long and drawn out conflict. Somehow I don't believe him and I think it's a little too late, the U.S. is in for a long stay in Lebanon. But why? Why is the United States in Lebanon in the first place?—Or—Indirectly the Marines are in Lebanon to secure another foothold in an unstable oil rich region. They are thoughts of conscience / Jim Benson

Sunday, Bloody Sunday

I think some priorities might be a little backward here. Yes, I do feel sorry for Ms. Savitch and her family, but focusing so much attention on one individual, when over 215 Marines and Sailors have died in a conflict that few understand, is it time to bring the U.S. peace-keeping force home, before another American dies.

I always thought MSC's students were apathetic, uncaring, unthinking and generally devoid of any emotions toward things that never affect them directly; this tragedy has helped to reinforce those opinions.

On Monday I heard more people talking about Jessica Savitch drowning, than about the carnage in Lebanon. I think some priorities might be a little backward here. Yes, I do feel sorry for Ms. Savitch and her family, but focusing so much attention on one individual, when over 215 Marines and Sailors have died in a country they shouldn't even be in, is unbelievable to me. Maybe I'm wrong, perhaps I'm too sensitive, but those 215 deaths affected me more than any thing else has in a long, long time.

Perhaps in talking about Ms. Savitch people are escaping the reality of the violence in Lebanon. But no matter how much people refuse to think and talk about Lebanon's reality, it won't go away, and more Americans will continue to die for nothing at all.

"How long, how long must we sing this song? How long, how long? Bloody Sunday, Bloody Sunday."

U.S. invasion of Grenada immoral

To the editor:

Tuesday night, as I watched on television the U.N. Security Council proceedings regarding the situation in Grenada, I began to feel terribly afraid. It wasn't just the incidents happening in Grenada (and for that matter, the rest of the world) that stirred this great fear in me, but something connected to it.

As Jeanne J. Kirkpatrick was shown on the screen talking about the events unfolding in Grenada, I realized what bothered me. While she spoke, she seemed bored by the subject she was addressing. She appeared to regard Grenada as if it were only a small lump of land somewhere off the coast of South America.

She, along with most of our government officials, does not seem to realize that this island is home to approximately 110,000 people. These people are grandmothers, uncles, sisters and sons. They are breathing, living beings, not automatons, and they possess feelings of patriotism and love for their country. They are a part of this world, a section of humanity. To de-humanize them, or the population of any other country whose government our government does not agree with, is itself inhumane. For the U.S. to undermine or take over a country which is struggling to be autonomous (just as the U.S. struggled in the 1700's) is an outright immoral crime.

I have heard many people talk about the nuclear arms build-up; they are afraid that we will all die someday from each other's bombs. Yet, if we, as inhabitants of this world, allow the Grenadian incident, along with other ongoing atrocities, to continue, then we are already quite dead.

Help Dr. King's dream come true

To the editor:

Racism is a despicable form of prejudice. It is a preconceived belief that one's own race is superior to all other races, giving one the right to treat other races negatively. It is an opinion, and is practiced in disregard of the facts that contradict it. Claims of racial superiority and inferiority have been used to justify discrimination, segregation, slavery and even genocide.

Racism is widespread, and has caused major problems throughout the world, especially in the United States. It has been directed mainly by the white majority against all racial or ethnic minority groups. Some that come to mind include: African, American Negroes, West Indians, Haitians, the Japanese after the bombing of Pearl Harbor, and most importantly the native American. Man has always ridiculed individuals that are different or a minority, not only because of color, but also because of their language, culture and behavior patterns.

Because racism is so evident in our society we have a tendency to automatically identify that negative trait with whites. But, racism is not only practiced by whites but all ethnic groups of the world. Two of the larger organizations in our country that practice racism are the Ku Klux Klan and the Neo-Nazi Party.

A great man by the name of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. fought against racism. He fought not with weapons, but with words, his words became dreams, and his dreams became his life. Dr. King dreamed that someday the problem of racism in the world would be solved. He dreamed that all men shall be free, and that whites and blacks shall look at another as being brothers and sisters without race or ethnic meaning or bearing.

I truly wish that racism did not exist in our society, but it does. Racism will never be eliminated if people continue to judge a person by their color or creed. We, the people, have to realize that humans have worth and dignity, that all humans are God's creatures and "you too" can become a victim of racism.

Let us, the students, take the first step and try to diminish that trend of racial discrimination. We are the minds of the future, we can break through the past generations of prejudice, we can overcome the ignorance that racism brings and we can make Dr. King's "Dream" come true, so that someday the problem of racism in the world would be solved.

Let us accept each other not for our race, but for the happiness we can bring. Let us accept each other not for our language, but for the love we can give, and most importantly, let us accept each other not for our color, but for the contributions we could make in our great, great, world!

Let Peace be in our world, not "racism."

Lavelle appearance leaves many unanswered questions

To the editor:

Rita Lavelle, in her appearance before CINA last week left many questions unanswered, and presented a picture that contradicts present environmental trends. She said that environmentalists are "power mongers" who are "waging holy war to preserve big government," and are acting as "gurus" to fill us with misinformation and hysteria. She called the EPA "redundant." But you never hear that do you? She was fond of saying, "You never read that in The Montclarion either."

"According to what we can see I don't think big industry is polluting," she claimed, and she went on to place the blame for pollution on small businesses. Yet, she admitted that cars are the major source of air pollution. (Cars are a big industry). She asserted that dioxin sticks to soil, and thus is not a health hazard.

But an article in last Thursday's Star Ledger states that Passaic River fish were found contaminated with dioxin above 50 parts per trillion, (a level at which FDA recommends the fish should not be eaten). And the possible source of the dioxin was traced back to a scrap metal firm in the Ironbound section of Newark, according to Lavelle, that would not be true.

Lavelle's many points included her belief that big government has destroyed the economic base of this country, and that big government is a "dying dinosaur." In reference to the right to know laws, giving people access to information about chemicals they work with, Lavelle commented, "The workers don't read." She labeled EPA scientists as paper pushers and decreed the validity of testing with laboratory animals. In fact she said broadly that "scientists don't take risks."

Specifically, on the clean-up at Times Beach, Mo., she said "When we found there was dioxin at the site, we didn't even have the capability to test for dioxin." As if that wasn't confusing enough, another point in her lecture, she said "I have to admit I don't actually know anything about radioactive waste. That's not my area of expertise," and "I think I made a mistake," referring to letting the testing crews wear protective equipment at Times Beach. This is from the person at the EPA in charge of hazardous wastes.

A final ironic comment was the statement by Lavelle, that "We've got to make government officials more responsible for what they say." But you never hear that, do you?

40-year old temporary building?!

To the editor:

There are two or three faculty members who can remember when the temporary buildings were put up. I noted with amusement that one of the "permanent temporary buildings" is going to be refurbished. (The Montclarion Oct. 20). I suggest that when a building is approaching forty years of age it is more permanent than temporary.

Johnny and the Jukes are tight

By CC Ryder

It's Monday evening and here I am walking across campus with Southside Johnny, wondering if he's going to make an obscene remark while we interview him live on WMSC-FM, hours before his performance at Memorial Auditorium. He's been known for his pre-performance partying. However, five minutes into our journey I've noticed that he's quite coherent—quite contrary to popular belief. He also looked much better than the last time he played at MSC—his hair cut short and his face looking rested and healthy. Aside from that, his energy was overflowing as we talked about the new album. "Trash It up." the new band members and the tour. It's not so much that he has a "new image" as that he's going in a "new direction," and he's happy with where it's leading him. "I knew that I wanted to attract a larger audience, so we tried different things on the new album that we haven't tried before, like less horns and more R&B."

The shift is obvious even if you're not a Jukes fan; but Southside understands that if you don't take risks life gets boring. "Being on stage is where it's at for me and the band. Playing live, really reaching an audience, that's it. When I'm up there and see people reacting to the music and dancing, then I know that I'm reaching them." If that's the case, then Monday's crowd made it quite dear that they got the message.

The most noticeable change in the show was the stage set-up. With emphasis on height, Ernie Boom Carter, on percussion, was on a riser at least five feet high. The band had a towering effect on the audience—yet not an overwhelming one. Opening with a new song, "The Beast Within," Johnny and the Jukes sailed through a show lasting nearly two hours that included at least two encores (I lost count after that). The band was tight. The way Southside conducts his orchestra, quick, sharp hands crashing down to end a beat, makes you think you're at a rehearsal, not a concert. That creates a genuine intimacy between Southside and his audience, which allows them to follow such spontaneity as ripping into a song for 30 seconds and then stopping. He loves having fun, he loves teasing and playing with his audience, and that keeps them connected.

At this point, it's important for Southside to create a good balance in his repertoire because of the wide range of sound that he's been creating over the years. With the absence of many original Jukes, including La Bamba, who was a real crowd pleaser, Johnny is working harder on stage to prove himself and his talent. He is determined to win us over, and so are the new Jukes. With Kevin Kavanaugh and Bill Rush causing their own sparks, the Jukes were hot Monday night. Mark Pender and Al Torrente, both on trumpet, played those instruments so fiercely, so mean that glass shattered. During the horn solos in "Talk To Me," those guys let out such a wailing sound that they struck a chord deep in the soul of every person in the audience. Frank Elmo on sax delivered a solo during "Hearts of Stone" that was so powerful it swept you away, removing you from the rich, full-bodied singing that Southside was achieving at that point, only to drop you safely back into Southside's vocal command at the end of the solo. Though my reaction to the performance of the Miller Time commercial wasn't favorable (I thought he was stretching it a bit much), the audience loved it. Which just goes to show you, if anyone can turn a commercial into a rockin' party tune, it's Southside Johnny. Lucky for Miller Beer.

Southside Johnny "trashes It up" at Monday night's concert.

The Smitherees opened for the Jukes, and though they appeared to be better off in a club like the Ritz than at a college concert, they put on a good show. Class I Concert's first show of the semester went smoothly with no evidence of any problem. As for Southside Johnny, well, "all I want to do is keep on playing—that's all I ever want to be doing," and so the party continues.
Stephen King’s The Dead Zone transfers well to the movie screen

By Patrick Kerban

If you’re sick to tears of perfectly good novels being turned into terrible, forgettable films, take heart. Director David Cronenberg’s adaptation of Stephen King’s The Dead Zone should satisfy even hardcore King fans. The film is the most faithful and most respectful of King’s texts of any of the screen adaptations of King novels since Brian DePalma’s Carrie.

The task of turning a King novel into a film may be so difficult because of his boundless characterizations and complicated subsections. His fans will no doubt remember Stanley Kubrick’s The Shining as the poster example of miscasting and poor story exposition. The last King novel to be filmed was Stephen King’s Cube, an interesting film, but one that did away completely with the psychic link of the rabid dog and the human being.

In The Dead Zone, Cronenberg fortunately shows almost none of the neurotic personality he gave his other films. His films Videodrome, Scanners and The Brood have all dealt with supernatural powers and disorders, making him a perfect match for King’s powers and disorders. His films have developed a cult following among horror fans, especially in the video tape market.

The Dead Zone tells the story of Johnny Smith, played by Christopher Walken, a New England school teacher who is involved in a car accident that leaves him in a coma for five years. When he wakes up to find that his fiancée has married someone else and his job has been filled and his legs have severely atrophied. He also finds that he has developed phenomenal powers that allow him to see a person’s future by touching his/her hand. After grabbing a nurse’s wrist, Johnny has a vision that the woman’s house is burning, trapping a woman and a child inside. When the girl is rescued, the news breaks out about Johnny’s power, and he is swamped with requests from people to help them in different ways.

He volunteers his services to the local sheriff to help find the “Castle Rock Killer,” who has killed several young women in the area. Nothing more can be said without ruining the story except that director Cronenberg takes some liberties here with the original story by changing the manner of death of a character, treating us to an even more powerful and heartfelt ending.

This scene, as with all the prophecy scenes, is very powerful, going far beyond the inherent limitations of the novel. Johnny debates how he should deal with the situation, posing the question, “If you could go back in time, would you kill Hitler?” He embarks on an assassination attempt on Stilton that ends the film on a bitterly ironic and powerful note, leaving us no doubt about Stilton’s future or the safety of the world.

Women’s CC crushes SPC for seventh win

By Kathy Szorentini

The women’s cross country team swept first through third place to crush St. Peter’s College, 17-38 Tuesday on their home course at Garrett Mountain.

Dana Ceruso picked up her seventh dual meet win with a time of 20:11, comfortably ahead of the field.

Sophomore Liz Dilla sliced 35 seconds off her former fastest at Garrett to place second overall with a time of 21:19. Close behind was teammate Nancy Wright in third running 21:55, and St. Peter’s competitor Mary Anne Gallagher took fourth only seven seconds behind Wright.

Sarah Soman and Amy McLaughlin ran extremely well, placing fifth and sixth respectively only five seconds within each other. Soman finished in 22:16 and McLaughlin ran a 22:21.

Coach Tim Marotti said, “The day’s strategy was to go out much quicker than usual and run together during the dual meet win with a time of 20:11. The team of Sposa and Carroll defeated the Keans of Romer, 6-1 and 6-4. In doubles, two matches were played with the third being called for darkness, but MSC only needed one win to clinch the victory. The team of Spouse and Carroll defeated the Keans of Romer and Gayle Grega for the win.

MSC vs. FDU

The MSC women’s tennis team evened out its record last Friday when it defeated Fairleigh Dickinson University by a score of 5-4. In singles play, both teams took three victories, but MSC was able to capture two of three doubles matches for the win.

Keren Canino, Amber Smith and Kelly Carroll won for MSC in singles play by scores of 6-4, 6-2, 6-4, 6-1; and 6-2, 6-4, 6-2, respectively.

Pat Lassen and Amber Smith defeated FDU’s Sally Hill and Wendy Levy in three games 7-6, 6-2 and 2-1. Kelly Carroll and Ellen Spouse beat Molly Ladner and Joanne Rodriguez of FDU 6-7 and 6-3, thus giving MSC the victory 6-4.

Soccer team downs Ramapo, 6-2

Last Saturday the MSC soccer team easily defeated Ramapo State College 6-2 as George Kryciacou led the team with three goals. Goalie Mike Fierrstein also aided the victory by saving 10 of Ramapo’s shots on goal.

During the first half, the Indians put two goals on the board for a 2-0 lead. Kryciacou, with an assist by Joe Mykievicius, scored the first, and Mykievicius scored the second unassisted.

After a Ramapo goal by Cliff Manafia, MSC put it away when Mike Conti and Kryciacou kicked in scores within a minute of each other. The other two scores by MSC came from Kryciacou and Ray Mocco, to put the final score at 6-2.

Field hockey team slips by Kean

The MSC women’s field hockey team beat Kean College for the second time this season last Saturday by a score of 2-1. The Indian defense was tough, as it limited Kean to five shots on goal.

Kean scored first, during the first half on a goal by Wanda Loza, but they were to be silenced for the rest of the game. In the second half, MSC scored once when Dawn Grice knocked in a goal after one minute had elapsed in that half. With the game tied at 1-1 at the end of regulation play, the game was sent into overtime.

After seven minutes of OT had elapsed, Linda Margernith scored the winning goal, making the final score 2-1.

Field hockey drops two

By Chris Worthington

Despite steady improvement by the women’s field hockey team this season, the young Indian squad dropped their last two matches to Trenton State and William Paterson Colleges by close scores.

In their second meeting of the season, the Indians fared much better against TSC as opposed to their first one. Although MSC goalkeeper Lisa Flynn had ten saves, the Lions managed to defeat the Indians again, this time with a score of 3-0. Coach Lynn Centonze said that the TSC coach commented on the team’s improvement, saying the Indians looked much better and that they had come a long way since the beginning of the year.

Indians lose to WPC by one

The MSC team played a close game against WPC Tuesday night with WPC coming out victorious by one goal.

After 20 minutes of play, WPC’s Mary Papana made the first and only goal of the game with an assist by Susan Megher. During the second half, the Pioneers’ Nancy Boer was taken out of the game to Mountainside Hospital after a sharp hit in the face by the ball, but otherwise, the rest of the evening was uneventful, with no scoring by either team. WPC went home with a 1-0 win. Centonze said, “We had moments of brilliance in the game, but moments don’t win games.”

The Indians are now 3-8-2.
Indians topple CCS Bluedevils 28-17 in Homecoming game

By Perry "The Jet" Schwarz

Kath Tierney, Glenn Meiner and the rest of the defensive squad held the Central Connecticut State College offense, laying the MSC offensive squad to produce 291 total yards and a 27-18 victory over the Bluedevils on homecoming, Saturday night at Sprague Field.

The first half of the football game was controlled by the defense of both squads. Tierney and Meiner came through in clutch situations, with Tierney having eight tackles and Meiner seven. Both players controlled the ball on defense, forcing the CCS offense to punt several times. The only score in the first half was in the second quarter, when Bluedevils' Mike O'Sullivan booted an 18-yard field goal with 1:32 left in the game. Excitement, Bobby Vannoy, confused the special teams of CCS and dashed 66-yards for another TD. Perri's kick was good following the score.

In the fourth quarter, the CCS Bluedevils started to rebound when quarterback Steve Jayne drilled a nine yard pass to Tim Willie, for the score. Sullivan's kick failed. The Bluedevils defense forced Casale to intentionally ground a pass before he was sacked in his own endzone, scoring a safety and boosting their score to 11 points. On CCS's next drive there was a fumble, and the Bluedevils' Cliff Snow recovered the ball in MSC's endzone scoring another TD. Sullivan's kick was good this time. CCS now only trailed by a safety.

The Indian offense was off to a slow start, but came through again. Vannoy received key blocking from Casale and Alberquerque to go 60 yards for the score. Perri's kick failed. The final was 27-18 MSC.

The Indian special teams were outstanding, with no touchdowns scored by either team. The Bluedevils' punter, however, had a 66-yard punt before he was sacked in the end zone, and the Bluedevils' returner, Steve Jayne, scored a safety on a 21-yard fumble return.

Cirello replaces Wendelken as women's head basketball coach

By Kathy Scortenti

Micki Cirello, who has assisted head coach Maureen Wendelken for the past two years in women's basketball, has been appointed head coach for the 1983-84 season.

Wendelken, who has coached at MSC for eight years and posted a record of 152 wins and 62 losses, has recently resigned simply because she's run out of the needed energy to handle the long days that go on for over six months with the basketball team. "With my full-time job as a teacher, the traveling and the season lasting for over six months, I'm just too tired. I couldn't be enthused about coaching this season and therefore, I couldn't inspire the girls, so I gave it to Micki, who is very capable of handling the job," Wendelken said.

Cirello started coaching at MSC six years ago with her first four spent with the junior varsity squad. Her last two years have been with Wendelken as her assistant on varsity. Grello's years as a sub-varsity coach were very successful, with one season posting an outstanding 16-2 record. "We never had more than four or five losses in a season and I'm proud of the record we maintained," Cirello said.

Cirello started playing basketball for a Catholic Youth Organization team in the fourth grade, and continued all through high school and college. At St. Aloysius High School in Jersey City, Cirello was an outstanding player and captain of her senior year team. She continued to be an impressive athlete in college, playing for the University of Rhode Island, and was captain in her senior year there as well.

Every summer during her four years at college, Cirello instructed basketball in the Jersey City Department of Recreation, and now she runs the Metropolitan Women's Basketball League for high school girls here at MSC during the summer months.

Homecoming game, a traditional celebration of MSC memories

By Perry "The Jet" Schwarz

Homecoming at MSC is totally different from any other homecoming event at any other college. Other colleges have big parades, tailgate parties, and more parties for the whole weekend. Well, MSC's homecoming includes a few tailgate parties, a dinner for the inductees into the MSC Hall of Fame, watching a football game, and then it's all over.

Trudy Wolfarth, organizer of the Hall of Fame dinner, for five years now, explained that this is an annual event for MSC's alumni to come back to the school, enjoy a nice dinner, and watch a good football game.

Saturday afternoon before the game there was a cocktail hour and a dinner given to the Hall of Fame Inductees. The six inductees were: Pete Contadil and Glenn Morschauer (football), Lou Ainslie Harmon (women's track and field), Bob Sienkiewicz (basketball), Dale Garlik (baseball) and Arv Sear (soccer). A special citation was presented to Alex Tornillo, an assistant baseball coach at MSC.
