Grand Opening of Diner Delayed
Students Wait as Construction Continues

By Lillian M. Aleman
News Editor

As with every semester there are many changes occurring on campus—new students and faculty, new classes and books, new signs in the parking lots.

Perhaps on of the most visible changes, however, is the Red Hawk Diner which is currently under construction on the former parking lot behind the Student Center.

The diner, originally scheduled to open as the students returned to school with a grand opening celebration on September 5, was not to open on September 25.

Assistant Director of Auxiliary Enterprises, Kevin P. Rakowsky, could not comment on the reasons why the grand opening was delayed, but said that some problems lie within building construction itself.

In addition to food, equipment for the kitchen, such as ovens and refrigerators, was expected to be delivered during the week of September 18.

Construction of the building should be completed within the next two weeks, Rakowsky said he anticipates.

Residence Life Increases Triples
Late Notice Upsets Students

By Inbal Kahanov
Production Editor

As a result of several systematic and communicative problems within Residence Life, verification and notification of room assignments were not completed until August 27, less than a week prior to the move-in date for freshman residents.

"Not everything went perfectly, as it never does on opening day, but there was a lot less of that and I think the student leaders making the effort, and helping out it really made the difference," O'Brien said.

"I didn't want to be a person who just stands around," he said. "It feels good to help people because when I was a freshman, nobody helped me."

Dean of Students Dr. Helen Matusow-Ayres welcomed the incoming freshmen and student leaders.

She spent time mingling with the students and making sure the day went smoothly.

She expressed her appreciation for the student volunteers.

"Student leaders have been the thing that has made the difference," O'Brien said.

Dr. Melinda O'Brien was also on hand to assist the new students.

Matusow-Ayres welcomed incoming freshmen.

She expressed her appreciation for the student volunteers.

There was the possibility that verification "may be delayed until, at the latest, September 3, Opening Day."

This, she said, was not necessarily indicative of the resident's room being tripped, might be in their room.

In order to meet our furniture manufacturer's deadlines, we had to order additional beds before we knew they were absolutely necessary," said Melinda O'Brien, Director of Residence Life.

"...We had to order additional beds before we knew we had to have additional beds, before we knew they were absolutely necessary," said Melinda O'Brien, Director of Residence Life.
A copy of the police report was not forwarded to The Montclarion this week. As a result, we are unable to present the crime log. Please look next week for an update.

College Guides Are Good - for Whom?

As "America's Best Colleges" Turns 18, Some Begin to Question the Purpose of College Guides.

By Neil George

Like the college-bound high school senior it seeks to serve, U.S. News and World Report's America's Best Colleges turns 18 this season.

The guide, and a score of others, are the vehicles of choice for millions of high school students who'll start their college search this fall.

Much to its editors' credit, the U.S. News guide has evolved from its former years. Yet its basic and fatal flaws remain.

Academic reputation - the opinions of presidents, academic deans and admissions directors - count for a full quarter of each institution's "grade."

The guide is founded on the outdated belief that full-time enrollment is the most appropriate pattern for post-secondary maturation, and it pays only the scantest attention to college mission and outcome.

The U.S. News guide is based on resources and reputation, a concept that disavows the basic premise of progressive society: It's not what you have that counts, but what you do with it.

ResLife

"While the possibility of placing a third bed in student rooms was not what we wanted to do, the alternative of not having enough beds could not be risked.

According O'Brien, several factors contributed to the complications in room assignments this fall semester.

These complications included a computer crash that caused the loss of information during the assignment process, "human error regarding the manner and schedule with which residence life implemented this year's room assignment process", resident cancellation, as well as information difficulties concerning student eligibility.

"Some of those situations were within our control, and some were system-wide and beyond our control," said O'Brien.

Residence Life is currently attempting to find solutions that will prevent similar situation in the future.

"The most notable [is] our need to automate our room assignment process and our need to emphasize a much earlier completion date for the final room assignment process," said O'Brien.

The Atriumlock's software package has been purchased to address room assignments, which should allow referring room assignments to be completed on-line in the coming Spring. Freshmen and waiting list status will continue to be handled electronically.

While not all rooms furnished with three beds are tri-pied, the number of tri-pied rooms reached 202 this fall.

This is an increase of more than twice the number of such rooms in previous years and is associated with increase in enrollment.

Many residents are angry over the increase in tripled room as well as the delay in notification of their living status.

"I didn't know I was tripled until opening day," said freshman Mario Taylor who is tripled in Bohn Flair.

"We were trying to get away from the current year with the average for the last three years.

Guides such as the one by U.S. News ignores hundreds of colleges and present institutions as static when, they are in fact quite dynamic.

Generally speaking, wouldn't you rather encourage your children to attend a college whose fortunes are on the ascent rather than in decline?

Although more than 10 college students attend part-time, U.S. News and other guides base their data on full-time students and penalize institutions with significant part-time enrollments.

Equally out-of-date is the guide's Kathy levied on institutions that employ significant numbers of part-time faculty.

Supposed editors of such guides believe that if one works, one shouldn't teach.

Numbers of full- and part-time students and faculty should be accurately reported for each institution, allowing consumers to draw their own conclusions about the efficacy of the mix.

With the exception of the category in which an institution placed, little attention is paid by editors of U.S. News and other guides to institutional mission and their expectations for students.

True, institutional mission statements are rarely clear and often couched in language that's hard even for academicians to understand.

Yet each college has a student recruitment literature that's often quite specific about the outcomes the institution intends for its students.

Would it not be prudent to ask institutions to back up their claims with data?

Some universities conduct regular alumni outcome and satisfaction surveys.

While such efforts rely on self-reported data, they are still better than depending on the ability of a university to attract well-credentialed students as the primary measure of institutional quality.

College guides are a boon to prospective college students and their parents, offering organized comparisons between institutions.

But to paraphrase a Malcolm Ross, remember that using the rankings in college guides is like eating popovers - delicious and buttery - but compounded mainly of hot air.

...WHY SHOULD THE PERCEPTIONS OF PRESIDENTS... CARRY MORE WEIGHT THAN THOSE OF PARENTS.... 99

All, with the exception of retention and graduation, are indicators of input.

When rating an institution, why should the perceptions of presidents, deans and admissions directors weigh you than those of parents, employers, and, yes, students.

Isn't that like asking the CEOs and marketing folks from General Motors, Ford and Daimler/Chrysler to tell us which are the best cars on the road?

Requisitions log three to five years behind reality, a fact more of cars and colleges well understand.

By placing such heavy emphasis on reputation, editors of the U.S. News guide seem not to grasp this axiom of perception.

As a culture, we tend measure what's easiest to count, not that which is most important.

Diner

pates having a “soft opening” 4 days before the grand opening.

Students will be welcomed in for a tour and perhaps a bite to eat.

The diner, which will be open 24 hours, seven days a week, has already hired a full staff, and menus have already gone to print.

Students will be able to order traditional diner foods such as burgers and french fries with gravy, as they sit in the old-fasion vinyl seats, swivel stools and drink from red and white straws.

In addition, students can order from an extended menu, which includes Jamaican chicken, humus, and pitas.

Junior Kristina Zimbardo, an Orientation Workshop Leader who volunteered, agreed with O'Brien. "Things went smoothly," she said. "It was good to see staff and student support."

Many new students were grateful for the knowledge and assistance of the upperclassmen. "I thought everybody here was really helpful. A lot of people were willing to help us up 15 floors," Parents also welcomed the aid of the volunteers. Karen William's daughter will be living on campus this semester. She was thankful to have the volunteers. "I just think that everyone here is so friendly and helpful," she said.

Dear Faculty, Staff and Students:

We are pleased to announce that Standard Parking has assumed management responsibilities for the Parking Facilities at Montclair State University. Standard Parking has been operating parking facilities in metropolitan areas throughout the United States for over 70 years. We take immense pride in presenting customers with a courteous and professional staff and look forward to providing you with the same quality service.

Director of Parking Services. Mr. John Zempare is the Director of Parking Services and is responsible for day-to-day operations and parking enforcement. He is the direct parking contact at MSU and can be reached at (973) 655-7580 with any questions or concerns you may have.

Customer Service. Ms. Jamie Luna is the Customer Service Representative, and is responsible for handling customer service inquiries and developing strong customer relationships. She can be reached at (973) 655-7580.

Facility Amenities. Parking Services will provide a variety of amenities to assist our customers such as battery starts, tire inflation and tire changes. These services are free of charge. Please call Parking Services at (973) 655-7580 for assistance.

Parking Office. Located at 30 Normal Avenue, across from the Normal Avenue entrance to MSU, the Parking Services office will be open 5 days per week from 8:30 am until 4:30 pm. Should you need assistance at other times, please contact the attendants in the booths at either the Normal Road, Quinn Road, or Clove Road entrances.

Parking Registration. Parking applications and “Parking and Traffic Regulations” were mailed to the faculty/staff and student body. Any person who did not complete and return the application by mail may come to the Parking Services office to register. Upon receipt of your application (and in the case of students, payment), you will receive a decal to display on the driver’s side rear window of your vehicle. Faculty and staff may request a hangtag in place of the decal. The hangtag must be displayed from the rearview mirror.

Lot Changes. Lots 5 (behind Russ Hall) and 8 (across from the bus stop on Heating Plant Way) are now designated for authorized Visitor Parking only. Lot 9 will no longer be available due to the construction of a new parking facility. Accordingly, Lot 1 behind the Bond House will be expanded by approximately 100 spaces to accommodate faculty and staff.
Visitor Parking. Special parking requests for visitors need to be coordinated with Parking Services. Depending on the level of service, a parking fee may be assessed. Please contact Parking Services at least a week in advance to make special arrangements.

Access Control Equipment. Parking lots designated for faculty/staff and graduate assistants will have new automated access controls. Access to the lots will be via MSU identification cards that have been encoded to allow entry to and exit from the lots. Please stop by the Parking Services Office to have your ID card encoded. The MSU identification cards will be swiped through the parking access reader that will be positioned at entry and exit points. These readers will allow a vehicle to enter and exit in the proper sequence only. In other words, after entering the lot, you must exit that lot before the card will open the gate again. Communication equipment will be positioned at the entry/exit lanes for contact with the Parking Services office should assistance be needed. Caution: The gate arms are made from metal. Do not attempt to drive through the gates. Drivers will be responsible for damages caused by driving through gates.

Parking Enforcement. All vehicles will be required to have a parking decal displayed on the rear driver's side window. Faculty and staff may opt for the hangtag, which must be displayed from the rearview mirror. Any vehicle parked illegally or without a permit corresponding to the lot in which it is parked will be ticketed and subject to towing or booting. Parking availability is on a first come/first served basis. Separate identifiable permits will be issued to faculty/staff, graduate assistants, and resident and commuter students.

Lot 26. This lot was labeled in the Parking regulations as “Graduate Students”. We apologize for the mistake. This lot is for Graduate Assistants only. Graduate Students will park in either commuter or resident student lots as applicable.

Greeters. All visitors to MSU must stop at the greeter booths located at Normal Avenue, Quinn Road, or Clove Road to obtain visitor permits that allow parking on campus. Visitors must have a parking permit and park in assigned lots to avoid ticketing and or towing/booting.

We realize that there are a number of changes in the rules and regulations this year and we would like to assist you in any way necessary in understanding these new procedures. Please feel free to contact us at the Parking Services office for questions or concerns.

We look forward to serving you and to building a long-term relationship together.

Yours truly,

John Zempare

Welcome to Survivor September

By Simona Kogan

Steady, don't fret. Although classes, tough tests, and lots of papers may be on the horizon for you this coming year, MSU is not about stressing students with work overload. In fact, coming back to college may just be cause for celebration. At least that's what the MSU staff has in mind as they kick off "Survivor September," the month that screams "welcome to college life and all it has to offer." The month long event wants to help all students get adjusted to college, whether they've been here for two years or two days. Most of all, it wants to provide a social, recreational, and educational experience for all.

"Survivor September," also termed Welcome Back Month, was once a weekly event. Upon seeing the success of the events of September Splash at NJIT, Director of Student Activities Rick Brown brought a committee together at MSU to discuss making their own month long "splash" on campus. This committee includes Rob Vincent, Graduate Assistant to Commuter Students; Greg Brown, Coordinator of Weekend and Evening Programming; Marie Cascernos from the Health and Wellness Center; and Patience Mason.

More than anything, "Survivor September" hopes to appeal to freshmen and help them learn to survive in new surroundings. Said Greg Brown, "We wanted to help students be comfortable with college...and you have to get people involved from the beginning."

On Tuesday, freshmen, new students, and upperclassmen were divided into teams of ten as MSU kicked off its first events of the year. The students participated in a scavenger hunt where they were sent around campus to learn about MSU. At each stop, students got their cards stamped and the three winning teams at the end earned participation points for their team. These points will be added to points that they will receive upon participating in other special events this month and the team that earns the most points will win prizes that include such things as Broadway tickets. At the end of the month, one student will even win a free tuition, room and board, $500 spending money, and a gift certificate to the bookstore.

Here's just a preview of just a few of the big events coming this month for "Survivor September."

Global Fashion Festival
Sunday, September 9, 3-6 p.m.
Memorial Auditorium

Come one, come all! And be yourself! MSU wants to see your individualism in their global fashion festival this Sunday at MSU's Memorial Auditorium. This fashion show, coordinated by Dean James Harris and co-sponsored by ISO, will be different from past years, as students are welcome to express themselves by wearing their own clothes and anything they feel expresses their individual style and personality, as well as styles from around the world. Whether you'd like to be the one on the runway or not, whether you've come for the dance performances and international food, or whether you're going because it's something fun to attend on a Sunday, this international fashion show is sure to be an added bonus to your weekend.

Student Activities Fair/WKTU
Monday, September 10, 10-2 p.m.
Student Center Quad

Want to find out about that club or organization, but don't know who to ask? MSU is ready and waiting for you! The annual Fall 2001 Student Activities Fair at the Student Center Quad is the place where students' questions will be answered. Information about all student activities will be provided and students can come talk to the people that make it all happen. Don't be afraid to find out what MSU has to offer. Special guest is radio station WKTU.

New Student Community Service Project
Saturday, September 15, Hillside, NJ

Greek Council and Service Learning has teamed up to help others! As part of a new project, both groups hope to involve new students in giving back to the community. The community service project will be taking place at NJ Community Project in Hillside, NJ.

SGA Club/Organization Open House
Friday, September 21, 8-12 p.m.
Student Center Atrium

Think there's nothing to do on a Friday on campus? Think again! If you're a new student, Friday, September 21 is the night you can come learn about the clubs and organizations that are such a vital part of MSU. If you're involved in an organization already, it's your time to shine! Show off your organization in an event that will have good times filling the Student Center halls. The Open House promotes the idea that the Student Center will always be open to students no matter what.

Tickets will be passed to incoming students from each organization as students enter each room and find out what the fun is all about! New students will earn participation points as well as gain VIP access to any organization of their choice. Trophies will be awarded to an organization with the most creative event within their room and an organization that brings the most students to their room at the Open House.
Students — These are your Daily Essentials!!
Top 10 Items You Must Have to Survive College Life at MSU

By Simona Kogan
Feature Editor

MSU — It’s about moving forward, discovering new things, and perhaps even withstanding a new atmosphere. But whether you’re a commuter or a resident, freshmen or upperclassmen, being at MSU doesn’t have to mean survival of the fittest. The students that know what they need at college are the ones that come out on top. It’s a new year MSU…how are you going to make it? Here are the top ten things you must have to survive MSU.

10. Student Planner

The student planner may be something you don’t think you need at college. You do. So many things go on in the life of a college student that they can go crazy if you don’t write at least half of it down. Homework assignments, club meetings, future plans. It all goes into your ready and waiting student planner. Besides, how else would you mark down all the parties??

9. EZ-Pass

Who wants to wait bumper to bumper in never-ending traffic in the morning? Commuters, you can cut off a good chunk of time by getting this handy device. Who wants to carry around exact change or worry about cash receipts? EZ-Pass could just be the most important invention of the century. Residents, no need to worry. EZ-Pass is just as important for you guys. It’s great for going home on the weekends (for those who don’t live fifteen minutes away) and constant road trips with friends.

8. Cell Phone

Is it just a cell phone—or your best friend? A cell phone usually is that. Bottom line: every MSU student should have one. Better yet, every MSU student needs one to help get through college. Residents are never in the dorm every minute of the day. Commuters don’t even have a dorm room to go back to. A cell phone can be the only way to contact a person. Who wants to wait bumper to bumper to bumper? A cell phone can be the only way to find out what’s going on and around campus.

7. Warm Sweater (and tank top and shorts) for Winter

What? Is it just a cell phone—or your best friend? A cell phone usually is that. Bottom line: every MSU student should have one. Better yet, every MSU student needs one to help get through college. Residents are never in the dorm every minute of the day. Commuters don’t even have a dorm room to go back to. A cell phone can be the only way to contact a person. Who wants to wait bumper to bumper to bumper? A cell phone can be the only way to find out what’s going on and around campus.

6. Sandwiches by Jose

There is no way one should ever go four years of college without having a sandwich made by this guy. If you haven’t yet, I suggest you run to the Student Center’s second floor cafeteria as soon as lunch time rolls around to get one made for yourself. Don’t know who Jose is? He’s the friendliest deli sandwich maker in the Student Center and probably all of MSU. So go say hi and strike up a conversation. You won’t be the first one to do so.

5. Calculator

The calculator is an ingenious invention best used for adding up the minutes until the end of class. What’s this? A calculator also being required for all Math classes? That would be more of an incentive to have one. Besides, who really wants to figure out a Math problem by writing a bunch of numbers down on paper anyway. Go for the calculator, and don’t hesitate to buy that scientific one even though you don’t know the meaning of every single button.

4. Foldable Cars??

We all wish we had a foldable car. One of those cars where you just press a button and the entire machine (no matter what size) folds up into a nice, tight little package, ready to carry to the next location. Ok, so maybe it’s just a dream. There really is no such thing as a foldable car. But wouldn’t that take care of those pesky parking problems students constantly deal with? Montclair is not the first university to have to deal with this issue, but maybe if someone in this world would just invent this contraption, they could be the first university able to overcome it.

3. Condoms

Sex. Say it with me now—5-E-X. The word everyone loves. The word some people can’t get enough of at college. The one that others are afraid to speak of. No matter how you feel about it, you can’t deny that it’s there hanging over our heads, a constant aspect of our everyday lives. Everyone talks about it whether or not everybody does it. It’s always going to be there. For this reason, condoms are important. For this reason, SGA hands them out to students willingly, hoping they’ll make the right decision, if you’re thinking about doing it, or going to do it, you might as well be safe about it. Can you survive without condoms? Maybe, maybe not. But at college, it’s definitely good to be aware that they are available. Make your own decision. Make the right one.

2. Money

Money, money, money. Everyone needs it. Everyone wants it. Everyone loves it. Too bad most college students never have enough of it. Money is a necessity for the college student, in any form. It’s important. It’s essential. It’s demanded. Make sure you always have enough on hand no matter where you are. If you don’t, find a way to get as much of it as you can…then grab your ATM card, your checkbook, or the hard earned cash and spend, spend, spend! Don’t feel guilty! As a college student, you have the right to spend. Then when somebody questions you about why you have nothing left, you can simply say, a wise person once wrote that it’s something I must have to survive. Maybe then the guilt-ridden feeling will go away.

1. “The Montclarion”

Who is The Montclarion the number one thing you must have in your possession to survive the college years? Shameless self-promotion, of course. Actually, this is the perfect tool to find out what’s going on and around campus. Good for reading in your spare time, perfect for making paper airplanes— it’s good for just about anything. Do Upperclassmen Have It Easier?
Sophomore Says First Year Move In Was More Stressful

By Vanessa Alvarez
Assistant Feature Editor

It's been a long summer and it's time to start counting down. The days are getting shorter; summer jobs are coming to an end, and the packing begins.

For me, this summer was one of the most unforgettable ones. After completing my freshman year, I realized how much fun I had, the great friends that I made and how important they are to me. All of these new friends that will stay with me forever.

But once again, it's time to go back to school, get ready for classes, and — why is there so little closet space? What should I bring? Will I make new friends, but I was scared to be like? What should I bring? Will I make new friends, but I was scared to

Most importantly, though, is that big day when everyone gets to move into the residence halls and re-arrange their rooms, put up all the posters, decide on who gets what side, and what movies to bring and... why is there so little closet space?

As a sophomore, this experience might be a little less stressful. Last year at this time I was wondering to myself, what is my roommate going to be like? What should I bring? Will I get along with her?

All these questions played a lot of stress on me. Of course, it was a learning experience and a way to make new friends, but I was scared to live with someone that I didn't know. I didn't know how to react and where to go.

That's what everything is like the first time around.

This year I know my way around campus, who I am living with, what I need to bring, and all the other important details that go into having a room at MSU. Now, one year later, I am ready to get back on track, even though more responsibilities await me; I know what I have to do and I have set goals for myself that I expect to accomplish.

This time around things will be different and there are more memories to be made, more tasks to be taken, and more tasks to be accomplished.

My advice to all the new students is, take it slow, and don't try to do too many things at once. Enjoy college, because it only comes once in your life.

For me this is my second year and I plan to have a good time and also get all my tasks accomplished, there are plenty of time for everything, college is an experience that no one ever forgets. So, take it slow and have a good time.
Orientation Workshop Leader (OWL) James Dallvechia speaks to three incoming Freshmen about MSU during one of this summer’s orientations. During orientations in June, July, and August, freshmen came to learn about the different organizations MSU has to offer and various ways students can get involved on campus. Representatives from MSU’s clubs and organizations arrived for the Student Activities fairs that also gave upperclassmen the chance to present information about their organization, to interested students.

Rising Star Fallen
Aaliyah Dana Haughton

Two years later, the harmonious blend of soul and hip-hop returned to record stores once more for a more mature Aaliyah’s two-time platinum album Once in a Million. Hot off this album if “You Got Only Knew,” “One in a Million,” and “4 page Letter” topped the charts for weeks. Aaliyah also began appearing on movie soundtracks like Dr. Dolittle and Anastasia, and lit up the screen with her dazzling performance in Romeo Must Die. The hot singles “Are You That Somebody” and “Try Again” made the Top 40. Aaliyah’s music video for “Try Again” won her two MTV Video Music Awards: one for “Best Female Video” and the other for “Best Video From a Film.” In September of 2000.

Heir words were an inspiration to those who listened and it would be another five years after One in a Million that Aaliyah would release her self-titled album in July of this year, which features the track “We Need a Resolution.” During an interview with MTV’s Diary in July, Aaliyah said, "There are times when I sit back and look at my career as a whole and realize I am truly blessed to be doing something I love..." Gladys Knight remembers Aaliyah’s music as a very personal way...."Her star had just begun to shine so brightly. Though she was ours for only a short time, what a time it was. I love Aaliyah, and I will miss her for the rest of my life,” Damon Dash, co-CEO of Roc-a-Fella and boyfriend of Aaliyah, was heartbroken after hearing the tragic news. "She was the best person I ever knew....I never met a person like her in my life. The rising star was close to many other people in the entertainment business, among them P. Diddy. "She was one of those individuals that would light up a room. She always greeted you with a smile." Aaliyah also had plans to appear in the second and third parts of The Matrix, as well as Queen of the Damned, which is due out next year.

Nominated for several Grammy Awards and recognised worldwide for her talent, Aaliyah had the love and admiration of her family, friends and fans to help her evolve artistically into stardom. That same support allowed her to rest August 31 in Manhattan, where thousands of people crowded the streets to pay their respects to the singer. To commemorate each year of her life, 22 white doves were released. Remembered through her love of music. Aaliyah Dana-Haughton is survived by the inscription on her ivory coffin, which reads: "We were given a Queen. We were given an Angel."

Weird NJ Bridges the Gap in Magazines
By Anna Lawrence
Arts and Entertainment Editor

Most people know what a mainstream magazine looks like. They’re everywhere: there may even be one in your bathroom right now. But what is a zine, and why should anyone really care? As the case with many independent productions, zines are much more personal and are made with more passion than you will find in a mainstream magazine. Since zines usually have a smaller, more targeted audience, zines have the ability to cover one topic extensively.

Take Weird NJ magazine (whose website was previously reviewed by the Montclarion’s Cyberbelle column). The topic: weird places and roadside attractions from the state of New Jersey. The zine started out as a simple little newsletter sent out to a few people nine times a year. Mark Sceurman and Mark Moran started out in 1989 doing everything, the writing, the printing, the mailing. Now Weird NJ is a full-fledged color magazine and website. The zine can be found at the Montclair Bookstore (the first place to actually carry Weird NJ and music stores like CD World at Merlo Park Mall in Edison and Vintage Vinyl in Fords. These developments—the color pages, a wider distribution—have only come around in the past few years. While the zine has started to take the look of a more mainstream publication, it has stayed true to its roots and continues to cover the weirder side of New Jersey: strange phenomena, UFO sightings, missing persons, haunted places, and just strange people and places.

This is the content that keeps Weird NJ readers coming back for more. It is also this specialized content that will always help classify Weird NJ as a local zine, no matter how glossy the pages get. Weird NJ is just one example of a local zine that has grown outside the literal term of cut and paste production (cutting out photocopies of articles and pasting them down on heavier stock paper to distribute by hand). Through this column, we will take a look at a variety of zines, from the very basic, zine with a circulation of two, to the mass-produced zines you find at your local supermarket. This is just an attempt to find the best and the most ecclesiastic, the most focused zines out there, and hopefully this will prompt you to do your own searching for a zine or magazine to call your own. There’s a zine for every size, shape, color, type of person out there. In fact, there’s probably two or three for each. And hey, if there isn’t one, you can always go out and start writing one that suits you.

Is Weird NJ a zine or magazine? You decide.
Awards Ceremony Recognizes Best of Web

By James Topoleski
Staff Writer

Hello everyone, and welcome to another instalment of Cyberlife. In each article I search the web for interesting, entertaining, informative, or just plain weird websites for you to enjoy. Along with that I will sometimes interview the people behind these sites. And if you’re too lazy to even type in these sites, montclarion.com will have embedded links that will take you directly there.

Another summer has come and gone and with that so has the 5th Annual Webbys. For those who don’t know, The Webby Awards are sort of the equivalent of the Emmys though with the showmanship of the MTV’s VMA’s. Started in 1997 by the now defunct magazine The Web (do I sense irony here?), they are a way to honor people for innovative and impressive web design. With the “five word acceptance rule” and dress codes almost instilling a costume party atmosphere, they are much like the Internet itself, fast paced and on the edge. Along with the judged awards, some categories also have a People’s Voice Award where everyone else gets to vote.

This year the awards took place in San Francisco and where hosted by Alan Cummings. Some of this year’s nominees included some of my favorite picks from last year like slayfight.com, live365.com, and WeirdNJ.com. Though none won a Webby, Live365 did win a People’s Voice. Here is a rundown of some of the categories and winners from this year. For a full rundown visit webbyawards.com.

Listed are the nominees and winners for each category. Winners are in bold. People’s Choice Awards are italicized:

Know someone who’s celebrating a birthday soon? What else says “Happy Birthday” (on a very limited budget) better than getting your friend’s name in the paper? Email msuarts@hotmail.com with the birthday kid’s full name and year of birth at least a week before the date and let them know you really care... even though you may be really poor.
Rock Star Rocks On

By Gemma Tarlach
Courtsey of KRT Campus

Rock Star has everything you'd expect in a heavy metal movie: sleath-shouldering volume groups, tight leather pants and a sweet, occasionally silly sentimentality.

Uh, what was that last part again?

Just as last year's Almost Famous celebrated the innocent spirit of rock 'n' roll before the age of focus groups, giving viewers a glimpse of a sloppy wet kiss to a genre previously seen on the screen in the lunkheaded humor of Bill and Ted's Excellent Adventure, the cringingly bad Rock Star hits theaters.

Rock Star is the Cinderella story of a devoted fan, played by Mark Wahlberg in what appears to be a Pauly Shore tight wig, who makes it big. Wahlberg essentially reprises the role played by Ben Stiller in Zoolander - a wide-eyed neophyte who gets his big break thanks to natural talents, only to find out that living the dream can be somewhat of a nightmare.

In Rock Star, Wahlberg's Chris Cole is blessed with a huge, ex-voice with which he fronts a bar-level tribute band for the fictional '80s heavy metal supergroup Steel Dragon. Steel Dragon's front man Bobby Beers comes out of the closet and gets booked from the band just as a home video of Cole onstage lands in the Dragon's clutches. In short order, Cole gets the call up to replace Beers and finds himself in front of stadium-size crowds, on the cover of Metal God Magazine and in the middle of drug-fueled backstage orgies.

If the setup sounds familiar to metalheads, it's because "Rock Star" was loosely inspired by the true story of Judas Priest tribute band singer Tim "Ripper" Owens. In the mid-'90s, Owens was yanked out of Ohio garage band Judas Priest to replace its famous frontman Rob Halford, who was loosely inspired by the true story of Judas Priest tribute band singer Tim "Ripper" Owens. In the mid-'90s, Owens was yanked out of Ohio garage band Judas Priest to replace its famous frontman Rob Halford, who was distanced from the metal scene by the film's makers, including Wahlberg, who called Halford's lifestyle "too loud." Only a Beavis and Butt-head would have mistaken the light-hearted, obvious fairy tale for an ode to VH1's "Behind the Music."

Unlike its robotic turn in the recent The Princess of the Apes remake, Wainberg is believable and endearing as Cole, the kid who just can't stop grinning at the memory of his heroes during a photo shoot. Jennifer Aniston makes the most of an unnecessary role as Emily, Cole's smart, supportive girlfriend who loves him - and heavy metal - but refuses to be relegated to the bimbo-filled "henhouse" that follows the band's big break.

The most colorful characters - and some of the film's funniest moments - come from a solid supporting cast that includes Timothy Spall as Mots, Steel Dragon's puffy-browed, bottle-toppled manager/boyfriend, and real-world metal gods such as drummer Jason Bonham and guitarist Zakk Wylde as members of Steel Dragon.

Rock Star's faults lie in uneven pacing and direction by Stephen Herek, who gave us the equally affable Bill and Ted's Excellent Adventure. The last 15 minutes of the movie in particular are slash-and-judge from hilarious outtakes that play during the closing credits, several scenes in the story arc's final curve were left unexplored - including a sloppy wet kiss to the genre previously seen on the screen in the lunkheaded humor of Bill and Ted's Excellent Adventure.

We all know that dreaded math problem. For all of us that have taken math tests it’s probably the one we dread the most. It’s the one that starts “You have a box of dimensions L, H and W into which you are trying to fit a number of cylinders ...” After you have read through the blur of words and numbers a dozen times you are still scratching your head as to how you are supposed to piece the variables together. You know there is a formula there somewhere - if only you could find it. So this might be the feeling first time you saw this problem but then you used some savvy and found someone who knew how to solve it. When you come up against it at the next test (and let’s face it we never really stop having to take tests) you are much better armed and might even come to find it a breeze. Ironically coming to MSU you might find that those people who should be very capable of this have less idea about how to solve them than you do. Here in Montclair the boxes are student dorms whose dimensions cannot be altered and were in fact designed for two people. The cylinders are the students whose dimensions are not fixed due to that statisticians nightmare: individuality.

Those at the helm of MSU have made a bad guess at the problem of getting the new intake and returning students into the available accommodation. Perhaps they borrowed variables from a completely different question and tried to make it all fit. We hear dire stories of tripling in rooms where they have three beds but only two desks, or of Seniors who declined the offer of tripling for reduced fees only to find that they are sharing with two others. The blame for this state has been apportioned to a number of factors but however you spread it, it indicates bad preparation and planning.

Why is MSU increasing its student intake? If the aim is to increase the funds coming into the college, as there will be more tuition payments being made, then we have to hope that the increased revenue would be put to good use. It can only go to hear that only cosmetic improvements are to be made to Panzer Gym and even more galling to learn that some of the new revenue has already been wasted because more beds than necessary have been ordered, “to meet our furniture manufacturer’s deadlines.” This is not just an issue of money; it is about good student relations. What is a better way of greeting new students than with complete and accurate details about what their life might be like for the coming academic year? Going away to school for many can be quite daunting. Presenting surprises of an unpleasant nature is not the way to go about starting things off well. What might the future be like? As a freshman now, in a few years time you enter your senior year to find yourself rooming with so many that you all have to wear name badges just to keep track of each other. In one nightmare scenario these name badges would not look out of place at a Borg party: “Hi, my name is 3 of 18, what’s your major gonna be?”

Planning to increase revenue for the school is not in itself a bad aim but the methods employed have to be questioned looking at these recent results. How the new money is to be spent is of great importance also. There are some campus improvements in the pipeline but they do not appear to be in the areas most needed. Unless of course we can room some of the excess students in the new diner.

When we first saw that old math problem, it was probably in a multiple choice test so you could at least eliminate the three implausible answers and take a guess between the two remaining. If you do that with the other questions you would reckon on having a mixture of A’s, B’s C’s and D’s on your answer sheet. If we look at the MSU admin paper it looks like they just gone for C’s all the way in the hope that at least if you get a couple right you can cover up for getting all the rest wrong. A bad approach as you are probably still going to fail the test and then what is your GPA going to look like? This year, with Residence Life’s start the university’s GPA is not looking so good.
President Welcomes MSU Students!

It is my great pleasure to welcome both new and returning students to the beautiful campus of Montclair State University. I am delighted that you are here. For students attending for the first time, of course, everything on campus will be new. But even for returning students, much will be new. You will be taking new courses with new professors; you will be meeting new people; and you will discover changes that have been made to the campus over the summer. I hope each of you will be able to enjoy that wonderful feeling of a fresh start and a new beginning.

There are abundant resources at MSU to assist you in making the most of your university years. I would not be honest with you, however, if I did not say that it will take discipline and hard work - more work than you expect - to enable you to have time for both your studies and all the other activities that make college a challenging and enriching experience.

For new students, the Office of New Student Experience in cooperation with the Student Government Association (SGA) has planned a Student Welcome Week designed to help you get acquainted with the University and to meet other students. The SGA is also planning many other activities, and one of their special efforts this year will be to encourage our many commuter students to participate in all our campus activities. This is the reason that this year is "MSYou." and they do mean you, so make sure to go to the SGA Open House on September 21.

There will be a great deal happening on campus this year: theater, concerts, athletic events, recreational activities, clubs, forums, lectures, and just plain fun stuff. Go. Try it. Do it. This is your University.

One of the visits you should not neglect to make is to the Career Development Office in Morehead Hall. The professionals in that office will be glad to see you. They are there to help you in shaping your career direction you might wish to pursue. Ask about on-campus employment that could be related to your field of interest, or take a job in one of our University departments. Students who work on campus have a strong record of academic success.

We have made some changes to the campus over the summer and will continue making improvements that we hope you enjoy during the course of the year. The Fitness Center in Panzer Gym will be updated soon; the quad between John and Brant Hall and the areas in front of the Student Center are being made more student-friendly with the installation of umbrella tables and benches; new posters will provide a BIG welcome to the Student Center; and a life-size wooden "Rocky" the Red Hawk will be stationed outside the building to inform you about events taking place inside. MSU banners now grace the light poles throughout our campus, and a "Web Event" calendar program will be available during this semester to give you easy access to information about all the activities taking place on campus. No doubt, you have also noticed the exciting new Red Hawk Diner, shining in red and silver behind the Student Center. Its grand opening is scheduled for later this month, and, once it is open, it will be available to you 24 hours a day, seven days a week, as is the new computer laboratory in the Student Center.

As you make your way around the campus this year, you will see a good deal of construction. We are beginning construction of a new parking garage that will be open by next September, and, later this year, we will begin construction of our new residence halls, which are scheduled for completion by September 2003. All of this construction may bring a few inconveniences, but the advantages they will bring to students once they are completed will be well worth the minor disruptions.

Finally, let me remind you that every student has an academic advisor. Visit your advisor. Visit YOUR ADVISOR! Advisors for new students and for returning students who have not yet declared a major are located in Morehead Hall. If you do not know who your advisor is and have been unable to find out, visit Ms. Eileen Bruck, Director of Academic Advising - a very nice person - in Morehead Hall room 300-A.

Secret Mating Tips For the MSU Student

By Brian Cross
Humour™ Editor

As his first week comes to an end, we are left thinking about what we have accomplished so far in the first week of the fall semester. Have we gotten our classes in order? Have the freshmen found out where all the buildings on campus are? Have you gotten laid yet? That is correct, the question that will run through the mind of everyone on campus. Let’s be honest, a majority of the readers of this paper are in their twenties, spending very little time on campus and are out trying to meet the perfect mate — or just trying to mate with anyone that will say yes.

During a recent poll amongst college students, 99% of a college students were found to spend their time thinking about getting sex or something related to that matter. Even a person’s normal activities are related to the act of mating, or trying to find someone to mate with. For example, while going to class people are trying to do the vertical march with someone else. We go to class to get an education so that we can get money, so that we can support our living. For example, while going to class people are trying to do the vertical march with someone else. We go to class to get an education so that we can get money, so that we can support our living. So we here at Humour™ have for girls on how to get their perfect mate as well as a separate list for boys on how to sink the hot dog into the little forceful.

1. Clean yourself often. Studies prove that the guy who smells like soap and cologne has a better chance of scoring then the guy who smells like a flat tire. Be really mean. Did you ever hear the saying that “you get more flies with honey?” Who wants to be surrounded by flies? They fly around and are really pesky. Instead of being sweet and sincere, be a jerk. Call her names and pretend she doesn’t even exist. Chicks love that.

2. Use pick-up lines. This petty attempt is so overused in the movies and never works. By attempting to mimic this, it will show your sense of humor and the conversation will start from there. Besides who can resist hearing, “Hey baby I dropped thirty five cents down my panties, you want to fish it out and call my mom?” I want to tell her I’ve found an angel.

3. Tell her you’re a frat guy. Brothers of fraternities are always getting some from poor innocent unsuspecting freshmen girls. They never know what’s coming. She’ll be more obsessed with trying to hook up with another frat guy so that she can say she’s done them all to realize that your liking.

4. Never cry in her presence. Back in the day the sensitive male was in, everyone was expecting freshmen girls. They never knew what was coming. She’ll be more obsessed with trying to hook up with another frat guy so that she can say she’s done them all to realize that your liking.

5. Tell her your name is (his name here) and I want to tell her I’ve found an angel.

6. Tell her you’re a frat guy. Brothers of fraternities are always getting some from poor innocent unsuspecting freshmen girls. They never know what’s coming. She’ll be more obsessed with trying to hook up with another frat guy so that she can say she’s done them all to realize that your liking.

8. Do not be yourself, try being someone else. Perhaps they have had better luck than you.

Tips for the MSU female

Editors Note: Being that a male wrote this article, do you really think that any advice that we have to offer here will work? You can bet your stars if will.

1. Walk around naked. At Woodstock how often do you think the naked chick scored? About more times then you’ll have watched Titanic.

2. Just yell out in the full of conversations, “Hey I am (your name here) and I am looking to get laid tonight!” Shortly after this will be followed up by some guy saying “Hey (your name here), my name is (his name here) and I want to score too. Let’s go back to my place, climb on my top bunk andFLAG like a carpet.”

3. Hang out with a frat guy. Enough said.

4. Talk openly about your sex life. If there are two girls in front of a guy, and one is talking about her shoes and the other is talking about how she loves to engage in oral sex, who do you think will be going home with a man? All right maybe the shoe girl will get lucky and find a guy with a foot fetish but not likely.

5. When all else fails, just be forceful, find a man, plant a kiss on him and ravish him. Guys like being pushed around. Be a little forceful, make the first move, and be the woman he dreams about.

6. Never ever take advice from a school paper. If this stuff worked, the writer of the article would be out like a fat kid in dodge ball taking the world by storm. Go try something new, or just be blunt, ask them to have sex, that works...sometimes.

The Red Hawks would not have even made it to the College World Series if not for a remarkable performance by Dave Wurst in the Mid-Atlantic Regional in Boyertown, Pa. Moments before the opening game of the tournament began, it was uncertain whether Wurst would even play. Suffering from a stomach virus, the Randolph native did not even make the bus trip to Boyertown with his teammates the previous day.

"When I woke up, I was throwing up and felt like absolute garbage, Wurst said. The morning of MSU’s game against Elizabethtown, Wurst’s Dad drove him to Boyertown.

"I still wasn’t sure if was going to play," Wurst said. "I still didn’t feel great and did not want to hurt the team."

Wurst decided to play and turned in an MVP performance. He was magnificent in the tournament, going 6-for-19 with three home runs and nine RBIs. Against Elizabethtown, the Red Hawks were locked in a 3-3 game in the bottom of the seventh. Wurst broke the tie with a two-run home run over the right center field fence. Three days later, Wurst’s third home run of the tournament proved crucial as MSU held of a late Gwynedd-Mercy rally and won by a final score of 15-13 to advance to the College World Series for the third time in four years.

"He just had a tremendous tournament," Schoenig said referring to Wurst. "From his first at-bat right on through... As long as he could put a uniform on he was going to give it his best shot and it turned out his best was extra ordinary."

game on the afternoon. "Last year we didn’t get many plus yards out of it (the return game). This year with him (Hall) and some of the other backs that we have, we feel that we’re going to get plus yardage on the return game."

The Red Hawks would blow the game open at 6:56 of the second quarter when Collins hit his favorite target, Eric Magrini, for his second 30-yard touchdown strike on the day and a 21-0 lead. But after that, the Red Hawks fell off, rarely executing on offense, dropping a number of balls, and taking four holding penalties, That’s when it was easy to see that this was the first game of the season.

"We got a little sloppy in the second half. We had some opportunities and we didn’t capitalize on them. The holding calls late just indicate that we got tired," said Giancola. "It’s our first attempt at a game. I thought we reacted fairly well but we’ve got to get better."

Not one of Giancola’s players disagreed after the game. "We got 28 points, our defense shut them down, we got a ‘W’ [win]. It’s not Delaware Valley," said Collins alluding to last season’s first game in which the Red Hawks squeezed out a victory against a much lesser opponent. "We’ve got nine more regular season games. The execution will come.

"I could have played a much better game, I played to half of my potential."

If half of Collins’ potential is throwing for 281 yards and three touchdowns along with 32 yards rushing including a touchdown, then the rest of the NJAC better watch out.

MU’s final score came late in the third quarter when Collins hit tight end Jason DeVirgilio with a seven-yard touchdown pass to increase the lead his team led to 28-0. DeVirgilio finished with three catches for 34 yards, already one reception and 13 yards more than he had all of last season. If this keeps up, DeVirgilio could become the tight end MU has been looking for since the graduation of Dan Reja.

And while many believe MSU to have a passing offense, their ground attack looked as good as it did all of last year, with tailbacks Laquan Majette, Eileen Fress, a transfer from Rowan, and freshman Jamari Blue sharing the load to total 125 yards. All three performed well but Blue stood out from the rest.

"He impressed me today. He’s got a very keen knack of making the tight cuts. He does things very naturally," said Giancola of his rookie running back.

Defensively, Ron “The Silent Storm” Broking’s talent was much more noticeable without Kevin Kelly and Carlos Bolanos around. Broking compiled eight tackles and two sacks. And as usual, Omar Lucas was all over the field, collecting seven tackles and a sack. Keith Migliorino, John Turi’s successor, added nine tackles and 2.5 sacks.

Other notables defensively were Sophomore defensive lineman Anthony Manente who had an outstanding camp and carried it over into this game, and Gary Webb, a freshman linebacker from Wayne.

So now that game one is over, the Red Hawks are ready to take another step toward their ultimate goal of a national championship. "We set the bar fairly high and no one is going to reach it. They’re going to work real hard to get better and better and reach whatever they can reach," said Giancola.

when he got in the game, his desire was to compete and to be so successful that he may have had an effect on the physical part of the game," Josh Pine replaced Allan and gave up two earned runs in 2 1/3 innings. Pine was charged with his second loss of the year.

"Our pitching stopped our offense from opening up that game early and making it a comfortable win," Schoenig said.

The next day, the Red Hawks got another look at their future when freshman Jeff Gogal picked up his seventh win of the year as MSU staved off elimination with a 1-0 victory over Salisbury State. Pitching with the poise of a senior, Gogal allowed seven hits, struck out six, and did not allow a runner to reach second base until the seventh.

"Jeff was as dominating as any pitcher that we've had in their freshman year," Schoenig said. "If he continues to work and keep everything in perspective, he has an opportunity to pitch beyond college without a doubt."

Despite coming up short of their final goal, Schoenig has every reason to be proud of the 2001 Red Hawks. They finished the season with 38 wins, the second most in school history.

"We came up big in a lot of games," Schoenig said. "We won big games right through the final day of the season. Everybody says you didn't win the National Championship," but I don't think people understand the magnitude of what we accomplished."

Dorsey caught 6 passes for 97 yards including the Red Hawks' first touchdown of the season on a 30-yard flea-flicker in the first quarter.
3rd Best in Division III
Baseball Team Dethroned On Final Day

By Andy Seyka
Assistant Sports Editor

The game was heading into the bottom of the sixth inning. MSU held a 2-0 lead over Marietta. They had ace left hander Ryan Costello on the mound and appeared to be well on their way to a victory.

"I felt good going into the sixth," Costello said. "I was cruising right along."

Just three innings later, the Red Hawks season was over just two wins short of a second consecutive Division III National Championship. Marietta scored a run in the sixth and two more in the seventh. Marietta starting pitcher Kris Burley made the one-run lead stand up as he went the distance on just two days rest as the Pioneers defeated the Red Hawks, 3-2.

If the Red Hawks had beaten Marietta, they would have faced St. Thomas of Minnesota in the second game of the day for the championship. St. Thomas, which lost in the title game the two previous years, defeated Marietta 8-4 to capture their first national title.

"If we had gotten past Marietta I don't know what would have happened in the second game," MSU Head Coach Norm Schoenig said.

But I certainly would have liked our chances."

With one out in the bottom of the sixth, Marietta's Dusty Childress hit a pop fly to shallow right field. Red Hawks senior second baseman Dave Wurst had the ball pop out of his glove for just his eighth error of the year.

"Dave made a real good effort for it," Schoenig said. "He catches most balls 99.9 percent of the time and on this particular play it popped out."

Childress later scored on an RBI single by Jaimi Collins. Leading 2-1, the Red Hawks were unable to hold onto the lead in the bottom of the seventh. With runners on second and third and one out, Marietta tied the game on a passed ball charged to MSU catcher Jeff Schriber. With two outs, Jason Are relieved Costello. Are allowed what proved to be the winning hit when Todd Time produced a run-scoring single to left field.

The Red Hawks still had six hits but had left five runners on base and had a sacrifice fly taken away when Todd Time was out at third base.

When MSU got the ball, it only took two quick Ed Collins passes, the second being a 30-yard flea-flicker to senior wide receiver Jaimi Collins, echoing the sentiments of his coaching staff and players. "We did some very fine things, but the game speed and the tempo of four quarters got to us a little bit."

But you couldn't tell from the MSU defense, which looked to be the mid-season form, blanking Wilkes throughout the game. The Red Hawks only allowed 73 runs, 49 yards of offense on the day and Wilkes didn't register a first down until the second quarter.

66...WE GOT A 'W'.
WE'VE GOT NINE MORE REGULAR SEASON GAMES. THE EXECUTION WILL COME."

Quarterback Ed Collins would be involved again on MSU's first drive of the second quarter, scrambling seven yards for a touch- and a 1-0 lead. Both scores were set up by special teams ace kick returner Mark "Money" Hall. Hall, who was academically ineligible last season, gave the offense good field position with 17 and 25-yard punt returns respectively to start those drives. Each time Hall touched the ball it seemed he had the ability to go the length of the field, something the Red Hawks lacked in kick returners last season.

"You've got to hold your breath because that's exactly what he gives us," said Giancola who was very pleased with the return.

"If this was the first step to the Stagg Bowl, then it was a baby step. Playing sound football at times and sloppy at others, the Red Hawks dominated the Wilkes Colonels, 28-0, to match their first victory of the 2001 season. It was the Red Hawks first shutout in a season opener since defeating the University of Buffalo 21-0 in 1999. And while they didn't play their best or anything close to it, all were just happy to get the season underway. It feels good to play and it feels good to win," said Head Football Coach Rick Giancola, echoing the sentiments of his coaching staff and players. "We did some very fine things, but the game speed and the tempo of four quarters got to us a little bit."

When MSU got the ball, it only took two quick Ed Collins passes, the second being a 30-yard flea-flicker to senior wide receiver Jaimi Collins, echoing the sentiments of his coaching staff and players. "We did some very fine things, but the game speed and the tempo of four quarters got to us a little bit."

But you couldn't tell from the MSU defense, which looked to be the mid-season form, blanking Wilkes throughout the game. The Red Hawks only allowed 73 runs, 49 yards of offense on the day and Wilkes didn't register a first down until the second quarter.
