UNICO Aids in Funding

With the help of UNICO National, the largest Italian-American service organization, Montclair State University will raise $1.25 million to establish an endowed chair in Italian and Italian-American studies.

UNICO National, which works to promote Italian heritage and combat negative stereotyping, approached MSU last spring because it was impressed with the university’s Italian programs.

UNICO will partner with the University during a five-year campaign to raise the necessary funds, according to the dean of the College of Humanities and Social Sciences, Richard Gigliotti.

Once this money is raised, it will be invested and the interest will be used to fund the endowed chair.

The endowed chair will work with contributors to the fund and the University to select one Italian-American issue that the chair will focus on.

MSU already offers a major, minor and teacher certification in Italian and other programs such as the Summer Institute at the University of Sienna and the Italian Film Festival are growing.

Suggested issues for the endowed chair’s focus include Italian immigration experience in the United States or twentieth-century Italian literacy.

Gigliotti explained that, once the funds are in place, there would be a national search for a faculty member who will function as the endowed chair.

The chair will be responsible for developing academic programming and teaching courses based on the selected issue.

Gigliotti said that the College of Humanities and Social Sciences had already considered establishing an endowed chair, but the partnership with UNICO National, which has already worked with five other schools to raise funds to establish an endowed chair, increases the chances of successful fundraising.

He explained that the endowed chair would be

Right to Bear Arms:
MSU Police Now Carry Firearms

By Jon Reegan
Staff Writer

As of September 2001, University Police have been authorized to carry firearms under specific conditions as stated by Vice President of Student Affairs Dr. Karen Pennington.

The firearms are being carried in connection with the investigation concerning theft on campus.

"Currently the police are involved in an on-going investigation where firearms have been used by perpetrators of several crimes," said University Chief of Police, Paul Cell.

"It is the nature of the crime, people who engage in that activity tend to be armed. One car was recovered in Newark and the man was armed."

The university police have been armed with a particular weapon "approved by the board of trustees, a Smith and Wesson double action revolver. The importance of that is that it fires one bullet at a time."

Chief Cell further stated that each weapon carried eight bullets in the magazine and extra eight bullets on the officer’s belt.

"Commenting on when an officer could draw his weapon, Chief Cell stated “Only if lethal force is necessary, as in a threat of life and death with an armed person. Officers will not use their weapons to threaten or intimidate. We are guided by law to use weapons under the force guidelines."

The decision to arm says Dr. Pennington “in this case, the authority of the state and the Board of Trustees to authorize the police to be armed."

Dr. Pennington further pointed out "We are a relatively safe campus, but it must be recognized that we are a community of over 15,000 individuals, located in a major metropolitan area."

"Any community of that size and in a similar location is protected by armed police officers. In fact, our campus community is larger than the communities in which many of our students live. In addition, it is not unusual for university campuses like MSU Police officers are now authorized to carry firearms, a precaution taken to as the number of car thefts on campus increases.

Teacher Program Growth Calls For New Department

By Lillian M. Aleman
News Editor

The Department of Early Childhood and Elementary Education, the single largest department in the University, has been added to the College of Education and Human Services as of July 2001 to accommodate the ever-growing students in its department.

The College of Education and Human Services now has seven departments which include Counseling, Human Development and Educational Leadership.

Curriculum and Teaching; Educational Foundations; Human Ecology; Health Professions; Physical Education; Recreation and Leisure Studies (PPLS); and Literacy and Educational Media.

Plans of redesigning the current elementary education program are in the sights of the College of Education and Human Services and said its Dean, Ada Beth Cutler.

"The curriculum should be regularly reviewed and redesigned as a dynamic process, and it is time for a reevaluation of the courses in the department."

The Montclarion will not be appearing next week, as its Editorial Board will be attending the Associated Collegiate Press/College Media Advisors National College Media Convention in New Orleans, L.A. -

The Montclarion will resume publication on November 1, 2001.

$1.5 Billion Plan For Bioterror Preparedness

Bush Administrations’ Health and Human Services Secretary Requests Aid In Which Around $1.2 Billion Will Go To Medicine Treatment

By Seth Borenstein

Now that anthrax has hit home, the Bush administration is proposing an infusion of more money and medicine to prepare the nation for future bioterror attacks.

As part of a $20 billion request for emergency relief spending in the wake of the Sept. 11 terror attacks, the Bush administration is seeking $1.5 billion to beef up bioterror preparedness. Health and Human Services Secretary Tommy Thompson told the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee yesterday.

Of that money, almost $1.2 billion will go to stockpiling medicines to treat bioterror victims. Because the administration worries about an outbreak of contagious and deadly smallpox as worst case scenario, Thompson told senators that he is seriously considering diluting the current 15.4 million smallpox vaccine doses fivefold. That would turn them into 77 million doses. Thompson also sought to reassure Congress and the public that there is plenty of Cipro to treat anthrax. Drugmaker A.G. Bayer is promising to ramp up its production, Thompson said. In addition, two widely available and cheaper generic drugs, penicillin and doxycycline, both work on the anthrax strains that have been found in Florida, New York, and Washington, he said.

Thompson also sought to reassure the nation that Health and Human Services has the drugs it needs. "We have the drugs we need," Thompson said.

Because the administration worries about an outbreak of contagious and deadly smallpox as worst case scenario, Thompson told senators that he is seriously considering diluting the current 15.4 million smallpox vaccine doses fivefold. That would turn them into 77 million doses.

Experts split on the wisdom of diluting the vaccine. "I don't think it's beyond the realm of possibility that a terrorist has smallpox," said former National Security Council staffer Chris Chyba, co-director of the Center for Nonproliferation Studies in Monterey, Calif.

The proposal includes expanding the national "push pack" program from eight to 12. These are ready-to-go packages of 50 tons of all sorts of medicine and equipment to treat epidemics. They are stationed in eight places across the nation that are supposed to be flown within 12 hours to a disaster scene.

The proposal also includes using $509 million to develop and buy new smallpox vaccines. Experts split on the wisdom of this proposal. Smallpox is highly contagious, but it's only known to have been stored in labs in the United States and Russia."I don't think it's beyond the realm of possibility that a terrorist has smallpox," said former National Security Council staffer Chris Chyba, co-director of the Center for International Security and Cooperation at Stanford University in Palo Alto, California. "But I don't think it's likely."

Education

The college will be working on bringing new programs, such as the current P-3 (pre-kindergarten through third grade) certification program, to the department.

The College of Education and Human Services also wants to "allow students with many different majors to get an elementary certification because as of now, undergraduate student who want to become elementary teachers must major in Human Ecology with a concentration in Family Child issues," said Cutler.

This is an opportunity to "focus on the elementary grades in our program," said Cutler.

Cutler also adds that the College of Education and Human Services hopes to develop many new graduate programs in early childhood and elementary teachers to the roster for its expanding program.

The Schumann Foundation has given the College of Education and Human Services a $70,000 grant to work with Abbott Child Care Center directors that offer onsite education in Newark, Passaic, and Cumberland counties.

With 20 years in teaching Early Childhood and Elementary education and its ever growing program, redesigning and adding courses are just the first steps for the College of Education. Long term plans include building a new academic building, which will offer "cutting edge technology not available in the older buildings," said Cutler.

ours to have police officers that are armed it is the norm rather than the exception in NJ as well as across the nation. The important point to remember is that these are sworn police officers- like those in your home town-not security officers."

"Honestly, I feel indifferent about cops carrying guns. I mean, on the outside, they are required to carry them. The cops on campus are real too, why should people oppose to them carrying their 'tools of the trade,'" said biology major Chris Dionaldo.

Another student had a different view when bringing up a question on current security, "My main concern is how many guns were already on campus and whether or not that constitutes the police needing them," said student Matt Schleck.

The decision to disarm says Pennington will be made "when the individuals involved in this case have been apprehended and we believe that the university can again be protected without this need."

a sign of prestige for the Italian department and university, while strengthening the quality of Italian and Italian-American studies.

Because the endowed chair is funded by the interest from the invested funds, the chair could exist indefinitely.

"This ensures that there will always be academic programming in that area," Gigliotti said.

The university hopes to raise the approximately $1.25 through the contributions of organizations, business, faculty and private citizens interested in seeing new Italian and Italian-American programs.

This would be the second endowed chair for the university. MSU already has a Sokol Chair in the Biology department.

The National Coming Out Month flag is raised above the Student Center. Its rainbow colors have become the symbol for gay and lesbian liberation.

By Inbal Kahanov

It was a time for unity, for courage, for love, and mostly, for honesty. The flag raised high on October 10, as members of the MSU community—faculty, staff and students, gay, lesbian, bisexual, transgender and heterosexual, came together to reach out to one another and celebrate National Coming Out Day.

People spoke of the importance of being honest with oneself and loved ones, the value of acceptance, and the satisfaction of recognizing the courage within oneself to be who one truly is.

Before the raising of the flag, President Susan Cole spoke, urging the campus community to respect the differences in people as a way of expressing a free and open society.

The flag was then raised, and the crowd looked to it as a symbol of pride as well as a call to all those who had not yet found the strength to let people know of their sexual orientation, to do so.

Underlying all the speeches given, was the still poignant memory of the September 11 attack on the World Trade Center and Pentagon nearly a month prior. National Coming Out Day became a day to remember all those gay, lesbian, bisexual, transgender and transgressor victims who died in the attack.

Marta Lopez-Luquez, the co-chair with Karen E. Dennis of Gay and Lesbian Faculty and Staff, read the names and bryptly spoke about all the gay, lesbian, bisexual, and transgender people who died as a result of the attack on the WTC. He then asked the crowd to take a moment of silence in their remembrance.

Mark Koppel, a professor in the psychology department, chose to make his statement for National Coming Out Day, by quoting the words of Candace J. Gingrich, National Coming Out Project Manager as well as the daughter of Newt Gingrich, former Speaker of the U.S. House of Representatives.

In it, Gingrich expressed the importance of being "honest about who we are." Koppel ended a speech by making a personal statement, calling out to the crowd that "the fight for equal rights will continue."

After the faculty speeches, the President of the student organization, S.P.E.C.T.R.U.M.S., spoke on the importance of coming out and the satisfaction he gained by doing so.

"It was certainly the most trying experience, but also the most rewarding," he said. "It is important that everyone recognize their worth as human beings." He urged anyone who is gay, lesbian, bisexual or transgender to "come out to just one person this week."

The event concluded with the overarching message of acceptance, not only of sexual orientation, but also of all faiths and backgrounds, referencing the recent alienation of people associated with the Muslim faith and culture.

People were urged to spread the warmth promoted through the flag raising for gay, lesbian, bisexual and transgender individuals to all people, no matter what their differences may be.

As Velasco told his story, he took big Lego blocks, stacking each on top of the other. He told the audience that the blocks represented the many different ways he colored himself in terms of things such as education, religion, family, etc. As Velasco continues building his own life to this day.

"I'm just one person, but there are so many different people," he said. He is proving that even one person can make a difference.
Although having an occasional alcoholic drink to modify mood and behavior is generally accepted in our society, there is a dangerous risk that the “occasional drink” becomes dependance upon. Everyone drinks alcohol. When I go to parties, everyone drinks a lot. I mean, this is college! I should have fun while I can, and then after graduation I’ll get my act together. Besides, I’m more fun to be around when I’m drunk. And what else is there to do when you go out? I just don’t think it’s a big deal.

Sound familiar? These are just a few of the common misconceptions about alcohol.

The truth is that over-consumption of alcohol can have serious consequences on your health, academics and social life.

October is Alcohol Awareness Month, a time to clear up the freely flowing myths about alcohol and MSU.

When you go to a party, it may seem like everyone is drinking heavily. However, 65 percent of MSU students do not drink excessively. (Drinking excessively can be defined as binge drinking, or four or more drinks for females and five or more drinks for males in one sitting.) In fact, the majority of MSU students drinks only one to four drinks, or does not drink at all. Surprised? There’s more.

College should be fun. However, studies have shown that excessive drinking has been linked to lower class attendance (remember that hangover from last week?), poorer study habits, and lower GPAs. The higher the average numbers of drinks per week, the lower the GPA.

Thinking about going to class more often now? Read on.

If you feel more relaxed, more talkative, more confident or more sociable when you drink, it’s because alcohol lowers your inhibitions and can make you do things you wouldn’t normally do if you were sober. Alcohol weakens your defenses and decreases your ability to make safe and smart decisions, thus increasing your chances of getting pregnant or contracting a sexually transmitted infection. It can also make you slur your words, stumble, puke or make a fool of yourself. So if you’re more fun to be around when you’re drunk, I’d hate to see you sober!

Some more sobering stats: At one university, over two-thirds of men involved in sexual assault had been drinking at the time of the incident, as well as half of the female victims. Some studies of suicide in the general population show that approximately one-fifth of such victims are alcoholics. Also, 40 percent of all traffic fatalities are alcohol-related.

Now that these myths have been corked, you know what the big deal is about alcohol and you have more information on tap to help you make better decisions.

The Controversial Columbus Day is Celebrated in Latin America

The main concern of those opposed to celebrating this day is that not enough attention is given to the treatment of the Native American peoples by the Spanish explorers. They say that to celebrate this day is to celebrate the genocide of the Native American people. They argue that the arrival of Columbus to the Americas was a disaster right from the start. They say that he is a symbol of imperialism and colonialism and the exploitation of people.

Defenders of the Columbus holiday argue that it is not fair to judge a 15th century figure, such as Columbus, by the moral and legal standards of today. However, it is well known and documented that European leaders at that time acknowledged the rights of Indians and prohibited their slaughter and unjust wars against them.

The controversy involving Columbus Day has lead several states, such as South Dakota and Louisiana, to change the Columbus holiday to a day of honoring American Indians. It is known as Native American Day. In several Latin American countries such as Argentina, Costa Rica, Mexico, Ecuador and Venezuela, Columbus Day is celebrated as Dia de la Raza, the Day of the Race. It is a celebration of Hispanic heritage and all of the ethnic and cultural influences that make it distinctive.

On Dia de la Raza, Latin American countries celebrate the deeds of those who came after Columbus and those who melded their European culture with the indigenous culture. It is also a reminder of all the battles and misunderstandings that occurred throughout the centuries and those who have created the multi-cultural and multi-ethnic societies of Latin America.

Ken Griffey, Jr., Derek Jeter, and Alex Rodriguez could not have begun their baseball careers without some influence from past players who have made it big. Roberto Clemente may have been one of those players. He has achieved over 3,000 hits, four batting crowns and 12 gold gloves. But more than so, Clemente was the first Hispanic athlete to be inducted into the Baseball Hall of Fame.

Roberto Clemente was born on August 18, 1934 in the town of Carolina, Puerto Rico. He grew up loving baseball all his life. In 1952, while he was in high school, he signed a contract with the Santurce Crabbers of the Puerto Rico Winter League. Finally, on October 9th, 1954, he was signed with the Brooklyn Dodgers. A month later he was quickly sent to play for the Pittsburgh Pirates.

As a right fielder for the Pittsburgh Pirates, Clemente was a 12-time all-star and led the league in outfield assists five times. By the 1960's, Clemente was known as one of the top players in the National League. Although only winning the MVP in 1966, he became the star baseball player of that decade. His cunning throws led the Pirates to win their first ever World Series. He was the 1971 World Series MVP. He had a hit in every game of the 1960 and 1971 World Series, finally hitting the 3,000 mark on Sept. 30, 1972.

He dominated almost every game he played and became an extremely popular and distinguishable athlete. No other Latin American had received as much recognition in that time period.

Clemente is the all-time Pirate leader in games, at bats, hits, singles, and total bases. He became the second baseball player to appear on a U.S. Postage Stamp after Jackie Robinson. Clemente died on December 31, 1972 in an airplane crash while he was trying to deliver supplies to earthquake victims in Nicaragua.

Clemente has always been known as "The Great One." His uniform number 21, was retired. He is known as the greatest Hispanic right fielder to ever play the game of baseball.

Most often, partying and pledging is associated with being Greek. However, there is so much more to Greek life than rushing, Homecoming, pledging, and partying. Greek life is nothing like the movie Animal House. Greeks are very much involved within the community. Greeks do their part to serve the community through philanthropies.

Philanthropy is a community service program. Montclair State University mandates that each Greek organization complete a minimum of two philanthropies each semester. Many organizations do far more than that. Every organization has an array of philanthropies. Some participate in events for Multiple Sclerosis, others for the American Heart Association, Habitat for Humanity, and Unicef to name a few. In addition, most nations have one designated charitable organization that they sponsor. For example, Phi Sigma Sigma sponsors the National Kidney Foundation. The chapter here at MSU and every other chapter of Phi Sigma Sigma in the nation will do at least one philanthropy this year to benefit the National Kidney Foundation.

A good number of philanthropies are held on campus. Most recently, on October 10, a Skate-a-Thon was held at Floyd Arena. The goal of this activity was to both raise money for and awareness of breast cancer. Among the organizations that participated were Lambda Theta Alpha and Phi Sigma Pi. For the past month, the National Social Sororities have been selling candy to benefit the families of victims of the World Trade Center Tragedy in the cafeteria. Last semester, Alpha Iota Chi hosted a fashion show and raffle in the ballrooms of the student center to raise money for Multiple Sclerosis.

Next semester, Sigma Delta Phi will be holding their annual King and Queen of Hearts fundraiser to raise money for the American Heart Association. This fundraiser is held in the weeks prior to Cotillion, which is when the winners are announced. Many of the other Greek organizations participate by nominating a potential King or Queen. Donations to the American Heart Association are made under the nominees’ names and whoever raises the most money is crowned at Cotillion.

But not all philanthropies are held during the school year. Greeks are active in the community, regardless of whether school is in session or not. This summer, the annual Montclair Children’s Music Festival was held. The festival boasted many different music groups, a puppeteer, a cari­ thronist, and several other attractions. All proceeds were donated to a local school for deaf children. Several organizations were present to help coordinate this event. Members from Phi Mu Alpha, Iota Phi Theta, Alpha Iota Chi, and Lambda Sigma Upsilon were all present to lend a helping hand.

There may be events all year round, but the holidays always foster a strong desire to do something good, especially for children. Thus, organizations coordinate their philanthropies with the holiday season.

For Halloween, Phi Sigma Pi will be painting pumpkins with children at the Hackensack University Medical Center. Theta Kappa Chi will be visiting children at Newark Beth Israel Hospital around Thanksgiving. In December, Phi Sigma Pi will be co-sponsoring a coffeeshouse with A.S.S.I.S.T. also to benefit children.

Community Service is a yearlong endeavor for the Greek community. There is a certain satisfaction in giving to those in need. That satisfaction is unmatched. The greatest party can’t even compare to doing something good for another human being.

 Crudup’s Love of Cooking Keep MSU Students Coming

Y ou’ve heard his comedic anti- dotes while standing on line to specially order your favorite sandwich. You’ve written enough comment cards about him to fill up the entire message board in the Student Center cafeteria. You know how satisfied you are with his service, now it’s time to finally meet the man behind the grill.

Havmg been in catering services on his own for the past five years, Latif Crudup has surely reigned in the Student Center cafeteria as the students’ favorite chef of choice. Though he has only been working at MSU for two and a half years, he has earned his reputation as a great chef through his efforts in the kitchen, serving breakfast and lunch to the faculty and students.

“I see a lot more opportunities up here. I see a way to grow.” Between school, work, and more work, it would seem that his plate was nearly full. But Crudup’s motivation never seems to run dry, nor does it interrupt the positive service he is focused on giving his customers. “It takes a good strong mind into his work. “I like to have fun doing what I’m doing, making people laugh, but I stay focused on what I do, and that is to serve my customers.”

This doesn’t just include serving his MSU customers, as Crudup’s jobs extend well beyond the university grounds. Not only does he grill up a mouth-watering grilled chicken sandwich at MSU, Crudup also continues to cater for Hogwild Catering in Jackson, New Jersey.

Though he is originally from Southern NJ, Crudup has recently moved to Rutgers so that he can be closer to MSU. Crudup is also pursuing a Business Management degree from a college in Jersey City. “I see a lot more opportunities up here...I see a way to grow.”

Between school, work, and more work, it would seem that his plate was nearly full. But Crudup’s motivation never seems to run dry, nor does it interrupt the positive service he is focused on giving his customers. “It takes a good strong mind to continue...and I’m a very open-minded person. It’s all about respect. If you respect one person, they’ll respect you back.”

While his claims not to be quite the food critic, Crudup says he prefers to cook for himself, but also likes to try food from different cultures. He enjoys barbecuing with a close friend in the catering business. Together they come up with new ideas for the kitchen, and take care of their families.

Crudup also stated that he learned a lot from Chef Scott, who also works in the Student Center cafeteria. “I have to like what you are doing or you’re not going to make it in this business.” I’m still learning, but I have a lot of opportunities to advance at MSU outside of the university.”

Not at all intimidated by the shiny, new Red Hawk Diner that is soon to open up, Crudup demonstrates a sincere gratitude for those who welcome his service. “I get a lot of regulars and compliments, and that shows me they appreciate what I’m doing. I have no favoritism in anybody - we’re all in here together.”

While he aspires to one day have his own business, for now Crudup continues to serve MSU with the attitude of a fun-loving professional, and a smile that says, “I’ll be right there to serve you.”

The principal characters in Theater and Dance Department's struggling lovers. Prior Walter and feminine - and struggling to live of homosexual you will find in the AIDS, and most likely obsessed with.

By Anna Lawrence

When you think of the way a stereotypical homosexual male is depicted either on television, in movies, or in theater, you may think of a flamboyant, effeminate, weak, bordering on spineless stalker, a man, emasculated by HIV or AIDS, and most likely obsessed with musicals.

In fact, however, an accurate description, but one that has unfortunately been perpetuated by bad media. This is not the kind of homosexual you will find in the Theater and Dance Department's latest offering, Angels in America.

The principal characters in Angels are dynamic - strong yet soft, masculine yet feminine. Their struggle is to live as normally as possible in mid-1980s New York City.

Angels follows an ensemble cast that depicts the homosexual community: there are the young and struggling lovers, Prior Walter and Louis Ironson, the elder Roy Cohn, diagnosed with a new disease called AIDS, and the questioning Joe Porter, who has been repressing his sexuality, is not for the faint of heart. Angels in America is for mature, educated audiences, as it brings up topics that other works relate to the homosexual lifestyle, but the state of America today. Not only will you be highly entertained and become emotionally involved, you will walk away thinking differently about life in America. One thing is for sure. If angels exist, they walk the stages of MSU.

311 Brings Chaos to Fox Theater

By Victoria Tengelics

By the time I reached Convention Hall in Asbury Park on the Saturday night of October 6, for 311's "Chaos Tour," the line to just get in the building was huge. Although 311 usually drew a big crowd, I wasn't expecting such a wait. It took me a second to realize the delay was not caused by the throng of fans waiting to see a rock band, but from the heightened security at the hall due to the tragedy in New York City.

The wait was definitely worth it, though, and I appreciated the extra concern for the safety of the fans.

Although 311 is known for its hit songs, "311" and "Chlorine," the band also plays other songs, some of which are not nearly as well known. This is a shame, as their music can't be narrowed down to one genre; it is a mix of so many diverse styles - reggae, rap and rock. Their third release (311) with Muzio as Louis Ironson invokes our heart.

Angels Captivates and Entertain at Fox Theater

By Chris Umstadler

Sunday, 10:47 A.M.

Coming... Coming to get... Get you... And kill you.

I jerked awake in my bed, nearly tripping over and out, only by the barely gaining my bearings was I able to keep from falling down. I sat there, tense, alert, and panting heavily. I couldn't shake the feeling, that feeling that I was being chased. The feeling that anywhere I turned, someone would be there. Why couldn't I shake that feeling? It was a ridiculous feeling to have. Unless there is someone chasing me...

Thrillers Stay Alive with Don’t Say a Word

By Andrew Wiecek

Don’t Say a Word
Gary Fleder
200th Century Fox

There is just something about a woman who is hot and in danger that makes her attractive. Especially when it’s Brittany Murphy giving a magnificent performance as the mentally tormented Elizabeth Burrows in Don’t Say a Word. The line delivery, the chilling eye movement, and erratic fingerpicking are haunting and memorable. It’s hard to believe that this is the same actress who played Tai, the transfer student in Clueless. Elizabeth Burrows is the key to this story. The plot revolves around her kidnapping and her tortured mind, which is the central theme of the film. The audience is left to wonder what exactly happened to Elizabeth and why she was kidnapped. The film is a perfect blend of suspense, drama, and thriller elements, making it a must-watch for thriller enthusiasts.

Elizabeth Burrows is the daughter of wealthy Dr. Nathan Conrad (Michael Douglas), who is forced to help Koster in his mission. Koster is a dangerous and unpredictable character, and his motives are unclear. The audience is intrigued by his actions and the events that unfold throughout the film. The film’s main motif is the idea of trust and the question of whether one can trust someone, especially when the stakes are high. The audience is left to ponder the ethical dilemmas that arise in the film, such as the line “I’ll never tell.”

The film’s plot is full of twists and turns, keeping the audience on the edge of their seats. The dialogue is sharp and witty, and the performances are top-notch. The film’s soundtrack is also memorable, with a mix of pop, rock, and electronic music that enhances the mood of the film.

Overall, Don’t Say a Word is a thrilling and suspenseful film that keeps the audience engaged from start to finish. It is a must-watch for fans of the thriller genre, and a great addition to any movie collection.

Hardest Working Woman And Eternally Hard Women Tour

By Jon Gaynor
Staff Writer

For two hours on Friday night, the rap attention of 2,200 people was held not by CNN or a speech from President Bush. Instead, all attention was focused on a light, petite woman named Ani DiFranco behind a microphone as she shook her hand and grinned sheepishly.

"It's a problem," Ani DiFranco explained, trying to hide herself from the bothersome nail just two songs into her set at The Keswick Theater in Philadelphia on Oct. 24. and 25 before traveling to New Jersey to play at Brookdale College on the 26.

"I'm a fountain of blood and the invigorating upheaval of a very French-sounding accordion," Ani DiFranco, perhaps the hardest working female artist in the music industry, is in the midst of her second tour in as many years. In support of her double CD, Revelling and Reckoning.

As in her last tour, which made a three-night stop at Manhattan's Hammanstein Ballroom, Bjork was accompanied on stage by a five-piece ensemble, which included drums, bass, keyboards, a far cry from her early days in which her only accompaniment was her guitar. The combination works on her newer pieces, which have stayed from her folk roots into the realms of funk. However, with older pieces, such as "The Diner" and "Bone Woman," the added music both adds and takes away.

In a positive sense, the band added a monumentality to the words of "Bone Woman." In the negative, the grittiness that characterizes Bjork's older work was overpowered and nearly completely lost. However, Bjork fills Radio City Music Hall Full of Love.

By Christina Spatz
Assistant Arts Editor

All that is modern, the mark of creativity, childlike innocence, sensual movement and concealed artistry encompasses the genius of Bjork. A 34-piece orchestra, accompanied by harpist Joanna Katoes, the electronicca band Matmos and an Inuit Eskimo girl choir from Greenland, crept silently upon the stage, and as glitler draped over a densely draped, luxurious backdrop of a red, pink, white and brown colored spectrum. The scenography of an overtly aesthetic experience had commenced.

Ethereally and painstakingly, the satin-feathered Bjork, all in white, opened with "All Is Full of Love" from her third album Homogenic. Through the use of a movie projector displaying photos of her homeland, her music worked to contradict the landscapes of the melancholy and frozen hearted. Celestial and the hope that only Bjork could achieve with an audience. An evidently adored artist, marveling objectification of women and their genitalia. Their new CD, Eternally Hard can be found on Righteous Babe Records and was produced by DiFranco.

Ani DiFranco will be performing at the Keswick Theater in Philadelphia on Oct. 24 and 25 before traveling to New Jersey to play at Brookdale College on the 26. Information and tickets for the Philadelphia shows, call 215-572-7650.

Websites Say Boo!

If there is one thing that the web has done for Halloween, it's bringing people together to share ideas and tips on how to celebrate holidays. It has to be one holiday that there is no shortage of tips for, its Halloween. From disgusting but great tasting recipes to serve at your Halloween party, to costumes you can make both on a budget, and with no time you can find almost everything you need to know on the web.

Halloween on the Web (www.halloween.com)

What better place to start than with the website bearing its name, Halloween on the Web is a very good comprehensive site on everything from traditions and customs of Halloween, to over 13 different views and origins of the evolution of Halloween over the years. Including Halloween on the Net (http://www.holidays.net/halloween/)

For those looking for a little bit on a slightly abbreviated version of the history of Halloween, you should check out this site. Talking more about the Druid/Christian origins of the holiday, it is not as detailed as the University of Illinois site, but still good to look at.

Halloween on the Net (http://www.holidays.net/halloween/)

Another good site to look at, Halloween on the Net has a lot of good information on costumes, decorating, crafts, and games you can use for your Halloween party. It also gives some info on Los Dias De Los Muertos, or the Days of the Dead.

Halloween Magazine (https://www.halloweenmagazine.com/)

This site is also a very comprehensive site on everything from traditions to costumes and party ideas. It too has links to many other sites where you could learn everything from how to carve pumpkins like a pro, to how to instruct students in school on facts, fiction, and how to celebrate Halloween safely. It also addresses Halloween after the terrorist attacks on America, when people might be both afraid to let their children out, or just confused about celebrating a holiday that has some elements of horror in it with so much real life, tragedy happening at the moment.

So What's Up Tigerlily?

Hey, are you in a band? Or perhaps you work at a cool place that is having a special event coming up soon off campus. Or maybe your brass ensemble is performing over in McEcharen Hall. Whatever the case is, if your event is related to the arts, we can list it here.

Tigerlily only lists events for that week (from the Thursday we come out to the following Wednesday). For your event to get listed, it must reach us by the Tuesday before we come out.

Be sure to include the name of the event (who's performing) where it's being held, a contact number for readers to get more information on the event, and the exact date it's happening.

Paranoia & Truth vs. Rumors

"Be careful. The MSU administration is out to get us."

It's probably a fair generalization to say that the above statement is representative of the perspective a lot of students have, to a greater or lesser extent, of "the administration." It's the feeling that though we don't quite know how, and we don't quite know why, there is some scheme to make worse the lives of students. Who knows why this is?

Provided there is no truth to it, (and it is doubtful that there is truth to it) it may be because sometimes mistakes are made by those who govern the University, or because there are some inadequacies in the in facilities, or the ability to easily, if at all, get registered for the classes you need. Deep speculation on these matters is beyond the scope of this article. The issue here is the effect this feeling has on the student body, the feeling produced: paranoia.

This is not to say that all, most, or even many students are paranoid, but certainly more than a few seem to be so with regards to the administration, and this activates the latent paranoid tendencies of students already having that skeptical "out to get" feeling. There are two examples of interest this week concerning the Red Hawk Diner, which is scheduled to open this coming Tuesday.

Paranoid issue number one: The University has chosen to spend a massive amount of money on a shiny diner, largely to improve only the appearance of the campus, while other more practical-needs go unfunded, under-funded, or just completely unfound.

Reality: 1.) The whole Red Hawk Diner project cost about a million bucks, but only about 25% percent of those bucks come from MSU (a relatively small amount of money for any major project), and was used to prepare the site of the diner, not for the diner itself. The rest came out of someone else's pocket. 2.) Paranoia confirmed. It's for image.

But guess what? Image matters. It matters in attracting enough students, and it matters in obtaining funding from state and private organizations, and it matters to current students who want to be on an attractive campus. In addition to all of this, it is still a diner, functional and a partial upgrade to food services, much in need of some help.

As long as the diner proves successful, the prices reasonable, and the food tasty, where's the issue?

Paranoid issue number two: The often frequented and perhaps most popular of food services' programs, Late Night at the Rat, is being downsized to zero to force late night hunger to be fulfilled at the new diner, a pricier option for those with meal plans or those with friends with meal plans...

Reality: 1.) Late Night at the Rat is not being cancelled, at least not according to either President Cole or a variety of other administrators, from whom The Montclarion has had direct confirmation of this fact.
2.) The Late Night program may in fact be expanded upon, possibly to cover more hours, though details on this are as yet unknown.

What does this all come down to? Where does this all come from?
With a little reflection, you can almost see the process take place.
One person thinks of the possibility that the Rat will be closed down at night, and maybe mentions this possibility to a few friends, who end up thinking about it a little, maybe start to see how it would make sense that the University would do that to its students, and before you know it, it's a full-fledged rumor, taken as truth, and maybe it even appears in The Montclarion as a letter to the editor.

What's the upshot? Cliche: don't believe everything you hear. And be a little skeptical of other people's assumptions. The administration has its fair share of "oops" and "uh-ohs" that can be focused on and addressed without the need to scare ourselves into believing false ones too quickly.

No Parking?
Concerns From a Parent

How ironic that there should be an article in The Montclarion newspaper about the parking problems associated with the use and location of the new dining hall and that it has removed some of the very few parking "visitors" parking areas and then this week an article that I accompanied by a photo of a parent of a sophomore get a letter from this president of the university (form letter) encouraging more participation by parents and friends of students at MSU activities and sporting events. The Oct. 4 issue question also related to attendance at MSU "sporting" event attendance, which for me is a question of whether or not you can park anywhere near that particular event.

Last week I arranged to get out of work early so I could get to watch my son play soccer at MSU. I spent a half hour getting sent to different parking areas because the small parking lots (40) was full and each gate guard told me to go to a different place and when I got to the area I was told to go to another lot. I eventually got frustrated to the point that I barged into the train station and walked to the soccer field. This would not be so bad, but friends whose son goes to another university, came to watch the same soccer game and missed the entire first half because they could not find a legal place to park. I would never invite them back after that embarassment.

I would even be willing to park in a metered lot and pay for the parking spaces, but there is only one small number of spaces. When I spoke to one of the University Police officers, he too said that there is a definite parking problem and that he could not help me find a space. Of course now there is a new ticket policy that makes it difficult for a student or anyone else to discuss a parking ticket without an involved process. Sounds to me like a definite effort to increase the fine coffers at the expense of the students, their relatives and friends. I normally don't write my feelings but the form letter coming right after the parking fiasco made me angry, insulted my intelligence and left me with a feeling of frustration. It is obvious that visitor parking is a lower priority than the accumulation of dollars from parking offenders. I am only inviting me to attend more functions at MSU and then make me feel like I'm parked in another state by time and distance I have to walk to get to a particular event or building. I'm sure that I am not alone in my disappointment with parking.

Hopeully in a more friendly "visitor" atmosphere will emerge in the future.

Thank you for the opportunity to vent a little. It is a definite problem that needs some attention, so that it is a bit more inviting rather than discouraging to attend MSU as well as visit there.

Vincent Romano,

Concerning Computer Labs

Concerning the use of open computer labs I am a transfer student here at MSU and I'm in my first semester. I would just like to say that I believe that stricter policies should be enforced due to many students not fulfilling an honest act in the computer labs. Many students just go to open computer as soon as they enter the lab instead of letting students that have been waiting for a longer period of time. I believe that something should be done because of this. I understand that we are all in a rush to get our work done but I am very surprised of the rudeness that some students possess. Thank you and I would like for something to be done about this matter.

The more this crazy coffee shop spreads across the country, the more flavors it comes up with.

With the crisis that our nation is locked in right now, Starbucks has realized the need of its customers for a better tasting cup of coffee, and they have brewed together a bunch of new flavors.

The new flavors which are being called, “the flavoricious delicious flavors,” They are the brainchild of Starbucks head coffee chef, the Muffin Man.

“I believe that these new flavors will tread new ground. We are attempting recipes that have never been attempted before.” Said the Muffin Man, the Muffin Man, the Muffin Man.

“We put all these different ideas in a hat, and pulled them out one by one. That is how we have flavors like Chocolate Strawberry Bracciachino. We wanted to tread new ground.”

Just an example of one of the new flavors is the new Raspberry Hot Dog Mochachino is packed with all sorts of hot doggy goodness, including liquefied beef chunks in a swirl of raspberry and chocolate, served sizzling hot.

Other flavors, like Café Cheeseburger, and Chicken Chucks of Tea, offer a full array of flavors to satisfy the stereotypical coffee. Tasters have been quoted on saying things like, “yeah, well it certainly is different,” and “ewwwwwww.”

Also found in Starbucks newes, the “Celebrity of the Month” coffee, which offers a new twist to everyone favorite coffee shop. This month’s celebrity is the Caramel Ralph Machiato, named after the former Karate Kid movie star. Although his career might have been a huge failure, they promise his coffee will be a bigger hit then The Next Karate Kid.

While these new flavors invade your nearest Starbucks, probably right next to your house since they are more abundant then rechecks of a NRA convention, be sure to check out one of them, and bring your TUMS.

Your cup of coffee may never be the same after Starbucks puts their new brands on the market. There is nothing more appealing then signing your cup of joe and finding chunks of hot dog meat in your raspberry and chocolate mix.

Blue Devils Meet the Red Hawks
Hockey Club Battles Back from 4-1 Against Super East Defending Champ

By Mike Halper
Staff Writer

The Red Hawks that entered the locker room after the first period Saturday night looked beaten. They had been knocked around the ice for twenty minutes as defending Super East Champion Central Connecticut State University (CCSU) took a frighteningly physical game right of MSU. Hit after bone-crunching hit had laid out nearly the entire Blue Devils Meet the Red Hawks.

After a season spent facing the feeder fish of the Mid-Atlantic Collegiate Hockey Association, the Red Hawks spent their first period of Super East action looking like a cramped-up guppy facing off against a great white.

But the facade would not last long. As everyone in the building pondered whether the Red Hawks would accept their fate and submit to the Super East in the first place, the stunned Blue Devils saw that the Red Hawks would pick up another score, coming in the form of a booming shot off the stick of Polcelli in the slot.

Then rookie Michael Grey took over the scoring, notching the tying goal with five minutes left in the period. Grey took a pass in front of the net and completely fooled the goalie by taking a hit with a quick move to his backhand. With half the net gaping not three feet away, Grey pulled the Red Hawks back into a tie.

From there on, the teams would trade penalties and momentum, but the third period saw very few quality scoring chances. It wasn't until Grey struck again with just under nine minutes remaining that the lamp would light once more. Going to his backhand yet again, Grey put the Red Hawks ahead for good, 5-4. For the second time in twenty minutes, the MSU players mobbed the Xavier graduate along the boards.

The remainder of the game saw the Blue Devils attempting to get their M-ACHA season last weekend, playing a sloppy game and still with little scoring, notching the tying goal with five minutes left in the period. Grey took a pass in front of the net and completely fooled the goalie by taking a hit with a quick move to his backhand. With half the net gaping not three feet away, Grey pulled the Red Hawks back into a tie.

Whatever it was, senior defensemen Chris Policelli and Anthony Rossillo led the charge back into the game. Polcelli with his bruising checks, and Rossillo by way of sweeping a rebound past CCSU tender Tyson Doisvert, just two minutes into the second. The bench exploded with emotion, letting the whole Blue Devil crowd know that MSU was indeed still alive.

The Red Hawks kept the pressure on for another ten minutes, with Doisvert making several superstop, including one-on-one saves against Ryan Pfeiffer and Dave Bodson. It wasn't until 12:17 into the period that the Red Hawks would pick up another score, coming in the form of a booming shot off the stick of Polcelli in the slot.

For the second time in twenty minutes, the MSU players mobbed the Xavier graduate along the boards.

The remainder of the game saw the Blue Devils attempting to get something going, and the MSU defense and goalie Robbie Martinez turning away everything. The final chance for CCSU came when, with two minutes left, they had a 3-on-1 rushing at Martinez. Pfeiffer saved the day by catching up to the play and throwing himself down on the ice to make a full-extension stop of the cross-ice pass and robbing CCSU of their best opportunity.

When the buzzer finally sounded, the Red Hawks had left their mark, toppling the defending Super East Champions in just their first league contest. The message was clear to CCSU and the rest of the league — the Red Hawks are no joke.

The stunned Blue Devils saw that message with amazing clarity. As they frugled back to their locker room with slumped shoulders, the team's mood equally reflected the color of their jerseys — blue.

MSU also successfully opened their M-ACHA season last weekend, playing a sloppy game and still coming up with an 11-3 win at Princeton Friday night. Bodson and Kevin Micek each buried a trio of goals for a hat trick. John Baumgartner also returned to the team, tallying a pair of goals in his first game of the season.

Pfeiffer, Ryan Trott and Tim Dybus all added goals, as well. Tomorrow night, the Red Hawks host the Super East's Marist College at 8:30 p.m. On Saturday, they host Princeton at the same time.

Last year, the Red Hawks tied Marist, 4-4, at home on October 7, then destroyed the Red Foxes, 8-1, at the Mid-Hudson Civic Center on January 26. So far this year, Marist beat U Penn on October 6 to open their season, then fell to NHL Friday night, 4-1, before being destroyed by Siena College, 14-0, on Saturday.

After halftime, the intensity of the Red Hawks decreased. The MSU second team offense put the defense in a bad spot when backup quarterback William Harbison was intercepted on his second pass of the day.

Then O'Connor threw a six-yard pass to wide receiver Bryant Richardson for WPU's first touchdown with 3:01 remaining in the third quarter. Harbison redeemed himself with a 40-yard touchdown pass to Joe D'lorio.

WPU added one final score to the game when MSU defensive back Jason Frazier bit on a fake and Warchol hit wide receiver Keyth Hardy with an 11-yard touchdown pass.

Lost in another blowout, was the play of MSU's defense, which was missing starters Brandon Bracey and Keith Migliorino. Rob Davis, Migliorino's replacement at inside linebacker, shined in a starting role.

"Rob [Davis] did a super job. He was all over the field, making tackles, knocking balls down. He played outstanding," said Giancola.

Billy Heaney, who missed playing Kean with an injury, played well in his comeback, collecting two sacks. But all did not go well for MSU. At 6-0, the Red Hawks still atop the NJAC and rank seventh in the nation. And in the eyes of Co-captain Collins, the season has just begun.

"There's eight or nine more games left to play. You run the table in the regular season, you get a [first round playoff] bye," said Collins alluding to his team's ultimate goal of a national championship.

"We still have to play every game and get better each week, but this isn't the final stretch run."

Collins and company envision the NCAA East Regional Championship, Semifinals, and Stagg Bowl as their final run. The NJAC Championship is only the first step.

"If you look at any Division III team in this country, you can't tell me there's a better team," said Collins. "If they are, then we'll wind up playing them."
Regular Season Winding Down

Women’s Soccer Continues to Win As They Prepare for Postseason

By John Montesano
Staff Writer

MSU’s women’s soccer team continued their dominance this past week. In the Red Hawks last four games they managed to accumulate three more victories and only dropped their second game of their sparkling season. Their wins came over New Jersey City, Rutgers-Camden, and North Carolina-Weslyan; the loss came in their showdown against New York University.

Going into the Red Hawks match against New Jersey City, they were pretty confident about picking up a win. NYC is winless in the conference at 0-5 and just 4-14 overall. MSU collected yet another shutout win by putting up five goals to NYC’s none. The five goals were evenly distributed to five different Red Hawks. Danielle Malyska, Shannon Hart, Stephanie Romanko, Stephanie Salabiauskas, and Liz D'Alto each scored one goal.

As a team HCNJ has scored 2 goals, which is surprisingly second to Ramapo in the conference who has scored 52 times. It seems that MSU cannot obtain the top spot in the conference but can secure a solid second place finish with a win against TCNJ on Wednesday, the 17th and their last game against seventh placed Rutgers-Camden.

Clemente came to the Major Leagues in 1954. At that time there were only a hand full of Hispanic players playing. As expected, it was not always easy for Clemente and the other Hispanic players of that era.

He was the first minority, the first Latino to really come out and be outspoken about injustice about not being recognized as a Latin ballplayer. Not only him, but the others that were playing in the Major Leagues, Clemente Jr. said, “The Latin players were not being treated as equal citizens. They were being treated as second and third class citizens. He was the first one to be outspoken about that and it became a war between him and the media.”

Even though so many of today’s younger Latino players never got to see Clemente play, they are grateful for what he did for them.

“They feel like he was the Jackie Robinson for Latinos in a way,” Clemente Jr. said. “He was not the first Latino baseball player, but he was the one who really opened the door for Latinos to be able to be respected in baseball and they thank him for paving the way for him.”

This year, nearly 30% of all Major League rosters featured players of Hispanic heritage.

“As I don’t think Major League Baseball today can be without Latin American players,” Valderrama said to the school children, that were on hand from J.D. Middle School in Englewood, many of whom are from Latin American descent.

“Imagine the Cubs without Sammy Sosa... If the Yankees didn’t have Bernie Williams, El Duque, Posada, the Yankees’ Puerto Rican born All-Star Catcher has a picture of Clemente in his locker at Yankee Stadium.

Men’s Soccer

The men’s soccer team only had one game on their schedule for the past week. They traveled down to Camden, New Jersey to take on the Scarlet Knights of Rutgers-Camden.

Rutgers-Camden played a 1-1 tie in overtime. Matt Cashwell assisted Osei Bonku’s goal, which gave MSU a 1-0 lead. Evan Graves fed the game for Rutgers-Camden off a pass from Ryan Rogen. The game was decided by the two goals and who could stop the most shots. Red Hawks goalie Luna had ten saves and Rutgers-Camden goalie made six saves to preserve the win and Kristen Stewart also made six saves but gave up the overtime goal at the 101:07 mark of the game.

MSU once again won back to back games in their 4-1 win over North Carolina-Weslyan at home on Monday. With the win MSU improved to 11-2-3 overall and NC- Wesleyan fell to 10-4-1. The Red Hawks were led by freshman LB’D’Alto, who collected a hat trick, which included the game winner. Shannon Hart added a goal and an assist for the Red Hawks, Shannon St. George’s goal tied the game for NC- Wesleyan but that was the only goal they could manage. Despite the big win, MSU was outshot 15-9 in the game.

Quest speakers at the Yogi Berra Museum included analyst on Spanish-speaking New York Yankee telecasts, Joe Valderrama, and a pioneer in Spanish-language sports broadcasting, Clemson Smith Muniz (above).

With the end of the regular season quickly approaching, the Red Hawks have just two games left before the NJAC championship games at the end of this month. One of those two matches is against the outstanding team from TCNJ who has improved their record to 14-0 and 8-0 in the conference over the past week. As a team TCNJ has scored 51 goals, which is surprisingly second to Ramapo in the conference who has scored 52 times.

It seems that MSU cannot obtain the top spot in the conference but can secure a solid second place finish with a win against TCNJ on Wednesday, the 17th and their last game against seventh placed Rutgers-Camden.

MSU collected yet another shutout win by putting up five goals to NJC’s none. The five goals were evenly distributed to five different Red Hawks. Danielle Malyska, Shannon Hart, Stephanie Romanko, Stephanie Salabiauskas, and Liz D’Alto each scored one goal.

The loss slowed up The Red Hawks momentum this season. The Red Hawks (4-7-2, 0-3-2) continue their dominance this past week. They continued their season in a l-0 loss. The five goals were evenly distributed to five different Red Hawks. Danielle Malyska, Shannon Hart, Stephanie Romanko, Stephanie Salabiauskas, and Liz D’Alto each scored one goal.

Red Hawks Invade Pioneer Country
Win 8 Straight Over WPU, Rank 7 in Division III Football

They've hit their stride. The journey to the Stagg Bowl continued for the Red Hawks last Saturday, October 13, 2001. With a 41-14 upset over TCNJ, the Red Hawks now stand at 12-3 and are soaring high in the Division III football world.

Two plays later, Collins connected with Magrini on a 30-yard strike for his third and final touchdown pass of the game. Collins completed 12 of 23 passes for 230 yards. Magrini had three receptions for 91 yards.

The suc- cess of the passing game can be attributed to the performance of quarterback Sean Granola, who started the game after Collins (ankle) was ruled out due to injury.

Outside linebacker Omar Freer led the way averaging over seven tackles and six quarterback pressures.

The Red Hawks came out on fire, scoring on four of their first five first-half possessions. Outside linebacker Omar Lucas set up the initial score, intercepting WPU quarterback Rob Warchol at the MSU-44 and returning the ball for a touchdown pass. The Red Hawks followed with three more touchdowns to take a 28-3 halftime lead.

In the second half, WSU quarterback Sean Granola continued to lead the way, throwing for 158 yards and adding a rushing touchdown, while running back Elijah Collins ran for 150 yards and three touchdowns.

The defense held WPU to just three points in the second half, allowing the Red Hawks to cruise to their sixth straight victory.

WSU field hockey team is now at 12-3 and soaring high as they have gone on a 11 game winning streak. This past Saturday the Red Hawks fought to get the win in a close game against Montclair State University.

Montclair State 4
WPU 2

The Red Hawks scored the first goal of the game. They did so on a power play goal by Laura Popes and assisted by Mickey Hulse's punt. Laura Popes recovered the ball and raced it down to the WPU-39.

The goal was again scored on a penalty corner by Domec Co-Captain, and very quickly from Collins. The goal was again scored on a penalty corner by Senior Co-Captain, and very quickly from Collins. The ball was controlled by Laura Popes and assisted by Mickey Hulse's punt.

Defensively, the Red Hawks held Montclair State to just one shot on goal during the first half. Montclair State had three shots on goal in the second half and one in the second half.

Speaking About Dad
Clemente Jr. and Guests Celebrate Latino Baseball and Roberto Clemente

His father was a 12-time All-Star, a four-time National League Batting Champion, and the MVP of the 1971 World Series. He is Roberto Clemente Jr. and his father is Roberto Clemente, the first name that comes to mind when you think of the greatest Hispanic baseball players of all time.

Not only was he the greatest Hispanic baseball player of all-time, Clemente opened the door for the Hispanic players of today. On October 10, in recognition of Hispanic Heritage Month, the Yogi Berra Museum & Learning Center presented a program entitled "The Latino Experience in Baseball."

Joining Clemente Jr. on the panel were Jose Valdivielso, a former infielder for the Washington Senators and Minnesota Twins, and Clemson Smith Muniz, a pinch runner in Spanish-language sports broadcasting.

The topics explored by the Panel was Clemente's legacy, Clemente, who is of Puerto Rican descent, was killed in a plane crash on December 31, 1972 while taking supplies to earthquake victims in Nicaragua. Today, nearly 30 years after his tragic death, his name still carries a special meaning to so many of today's great Latino players.

"The Yankees have guys like Bernie Williams and Jorge Posada, who say to me all the time that my dad is their hero," Clemente Jr. said.

Clemente fans and admirers are not just limited to baseball players. "Even other guys who aren't even baseball players like Wayne Gretzky and Michael Jordan have told me that when they were kids all they wanted to be was Clemente and it makes me feel really good," Clemente Jr. said.

Clemente not only has a lot to do with the amount of Hispanic players in the game today, but he is also one of the biggest reasons why they are respected and held to such high regard.
